Achievements of Women Are Varied
 PHOENIX, Ariz., April 29 (AP)—Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in her annual report to the national council yesterday portrayed woman's versatility in the fields of achievement. Helms and Bachmanoff and Little Max Rosen—they are able to take down the stove pipe and clean it out.
 "They can give a synopsis of the third offhand, they appreciate Turner's art, they know every nook and corner of the Pitti palace—they know how to make soap. Their talents are unnumbered, and I am not attempting to hint at all of even the greatest of their accomplishments, but just touching a few."
 The entire community mourns the loss of Mrs. J. L. Westenskow. At the funeral services Monday afternoon J. S. Baxter, of Union, was the speaker and he was assisted in the services by Bishop Leonard Billings, Melvin Westenskow and Ernest Richardson.
 The Hit and Miss orchestra journeyed to La Grande Saturday night to play for the dance given by the Second Ward of the L. D. church in the chapel. The dance was sponsored by the Sunday school to raise funds for Mother's day.
 A high school tennis tournament is being arranged to be played on the local courts in the near future.
 Late, young son of Lamar Westenskow, 1 slightly ill.
 Confirmation of the consummation of two deals in real estate, long pending, was made today by Grant Tucker. He sold 30 acres of his 40-acre Ishman and Eugene Bloom tract at $350 an acre. These tracts consist mostly of Rome Beauties, the other variety is Jonathan. This orchard lies one mile north of Imbler on the county road.
 The Imbler M. I. A. will present a three-act comedy "Madame Mileway" in Wade hall Friday, May 8, with the following cast: Murel Andrew as Mrs. Jones, the Madame Mileway of all pecks past, present and future; Gene Perry as John Rogers, a modern business man whose business is everybody's but his own; Fern Clegg as Sybil Rogers, his flapper wife; Marjorie Perry as Edna Atherton, stout, single and thirty; Melvin Westenskow as Lord Chester; Clifford Westenskow as Harry Williams, Sybil's best male friend; Wilton Westenskow as Mrs. O. ## OUT OUR WAY

Fruit Damaged Over Northwest, Imbler Learns

By Mrs. Ray Wilson (Observer Correspondent)
IMBLER (Special)—Howard Waterbury, sales manager of the shipping department of the Pacific Fruit & Produce company of Portland, spent the latter part of last week on business for his company in Imbler. He reports that the Omak district in the Yakima valley, heavy apple producing section, had lost its crop from freezing. He said other points in the Yakima valley have reported damage, the extent of which is yet undeterminable. The Milken-Preswater district and Walla Walla have also sustained losses to their apple crop. The delicious being the most heavily damaged. Mr. Waterbury reports that the apple crop in the middle west and east can not now be calculated. Some freezes have occurred there and no one can foretell what will happen in the apple orchards in the drought area. Bloom there does not mean a guaranty of fruit as the fruit may fall to set, or may be shed entirely during the June drop, due to the weakening influence of last year's drought.
 The school board held a special meeting Monday evening and elected J. S. Johnson of Seapoo, Oregon, as Smith-Hughes instructor for the ensuing year.
 Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fitzgerald, of Elgin, were playing tennis in Imbler Sunday morning. They have joined the athletic club.
 Mrs. Ernest Richardson had a major operation at La Grande hospital on Monday.
 The Imbler P. T. A. will hold a meeting Thursday evening, April 30, in Wade hall. An interesting program is being arranged under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Watson. All patrons of the school are urged to attend this meeting as important matters are to be decided at that time, according to the officers. They also promise there will be plenty of "cats."

Unloading Soviet Cargo of Lumber

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 29 (AP)—Unloading of 3,000,000 feet of Soviet lumber which arrived in this port last Thursday aboard the Finnish tramp steamer Anversoise started yesterday, immediately after a bond of approximately $200,000 covering the foreign value of the cargo plus the $3,200 tariff duty was filed at the custom house.
 Decision to admit the cargo of the Anversoise without special bond was announced in Washington Monday by Under Secretary of the Treasury Mills who said departmental investigation had failed to show any evidence that the lumber had been produced by convict labor.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid Bead, Cape Ferrat
 PARIS, Apr. 29 (AP)—Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, of New York, widow of the former ambassador to England, died at 9:50 a. m. today at Cape Ferrat, at the home of her daughter, Lady Ward.
 Mrs. Reid, who arrived in France only last week, contracted a chill during her voyage across the Atlantic; she was ill when she reached Paris and had grown steadily worse since.

By Percival Christopher Wren Author of BEAU GESTE BEAU IDEAL

Promptly William had slipped out from the Nursing-Home, gone to the (one and only railway station at the neighboring village, nicked up Spider Schiltz, followed him on his return journey, and located a fine old country house in which he was living as a country gentleman. Having learned all that was necessary, he had returned as the penitent prodigal back from a drunken debauch, full of apologies and promises of reform—if the good Dr. Charters would take him back once more.
 William wrote that both he and his wife felt sure that Charters Machado and Gryde must have one or more confederates among their large staff, but had been unable to identify any of them. On the whole, they rather suspected the chief Nursing Sister, but only on the strength of her somewhat florid appearance.
 In reply to a cable in our own elpher, William sent me a plan of the house and grounds, and a detailed account of the daily routine of the Nursing-Home, and more particularly of Charters' habits and everything else which would possibly be of use to me for carrying out the scheme slowly developing in my mind.
 In pursuance of this scheme, I sailed for England as soon as I had obtained a forged passport; taking with me as much money as I was likely to require, and making arrangements, through the invaluable Uncle, for yet further supplies, should they be necessary.
 Arrived in England, Mr. John Wayne, a grim-faced, gray-haired, port-cann-shaven man who bore, perhaps, a slight resemblance to the long-dead millionaire, John Dacre Wayne Vanderleur St. Clair, visited the famous specialist, Sir Bernard Matthews, who diagnosed pretty accurately a bad case of neurasthenia with complications in the man who had carefully refrained from food and sleep for three days, and had taken certain heart-affecting and nerve-soothing concoctions, well-known to malingering convicts. Sir Bernard quite agreed with his new patient's suggestion that he should take a thorough rest cure in one of the best country Nursing-Homes.
 Mr. John Wayne also did a little business with a courteous and certain Bank Manager and with a certain Solicitor not unknown to crooked American indies and gentlemen in London, who are also in trouble, or who anticipate that they

Chapter 33 SIMON'S NEW PATIENTS

A FEW weeks later, Williams H. Simon heard a rumor in the Underworld that the man known, among other names, as Doc English, Half-hunt Simon, and Liney Simon, had been illegally released from jail and had been seen at San Francisco in the company of one of his accomplices, Spider Schiltz, whose one-year term of imprisonment had expired at about the same time.
 Hurrying round to Uncle's for further news—the matter to be mentioned most casually in the course of idlest conversation, of course—we learnt that the man Schiltz was staying openly at the Kearney House in San Francisco, while Simon was in hiding in Rio de Janeiro. Gunman Gryde was reported to be still in New York, and Chink Dorson still in Columbia Jail, where he had four years yet to serve.
 After a council of war, we decided that we would once again separate, William going to San Francisco, his wife to New York, and I to Rio de Janeiro.
 Should the gang assemble in one of these three places, we three would do the same, and lay our plans accordingly.
 What I really wanted to do to them, and what I really hoped for, I did not know—beyond some kind of terrible punishment and revenge.
 What I constantly visualized, and what constantly caused me to awake from sleep—with my hands clutching and flexed—was the thought of my hands upon the throat of each of these subhuman devils in sin. Dorson I would some day kill with my bare hands; Schiltz I would kill with my bare hands; from Simon, apparently, my leader, I soon would choke the life; and oh, slowly, slowly, would I, with iron fingers, strangle the man Gryde, that "Jimmy" whose name my daughter had shrieked in terror.
 In Rio de Janeiro I lived my miserable life—sick at heart and ill of body, drifting to breakdown and probably madness, for I could find no trace of the man Simon, though I was able to learn his history thoroughly.
 And then, again, I got renewed hope in a letter from Williams H. William, who "was certain that he was on the trail and would write again—great news."
 But before hearing from him again I—clever fellow—was myself off on a new deal and a red-hot trail that led me right across the continent; thence to Seattle, and finally across the Pacific to Shanghai—there to run to earth, at last, the gang of white-slavers whom I had been pursuing, only to find that they were not our gang at all.
 At the end of my tether, mental, moral and physical, I crawled back to Chicago.
 Awaiting me in Uncle's care, was a packet of heavily sealed letters from Williams H. William. The latter had gone to England in pursuit of Simon, the English doctor whom he had discovered, beyond any doubt, to be the leader of the gang whom we were tracking.
 I learned with admiration and amazement that my wonderful William and his equally wonderful wife had gone to England and were actually living beneath the roof of the well-known and excellently conducted Nursing-Home; this man, "Half-hunt Simon," a genuine M.D., whose real name was Theodore Charters, conducted with the help of none other than Dr. Manoel Machado whose acquaintance he had made at Uncle's, while I was abroad. Himself disguised, William had, in Chicago, shadowed Charters and Machado and also Charters' former confederate, Spider Schiltz, with whom Charters seemed to have quarreled.
 The former pair, he had, as I have said, followed to England, and while himself a "patient" in Charters' Nursing-Home, had seen Spider Schiltz visit the house.
