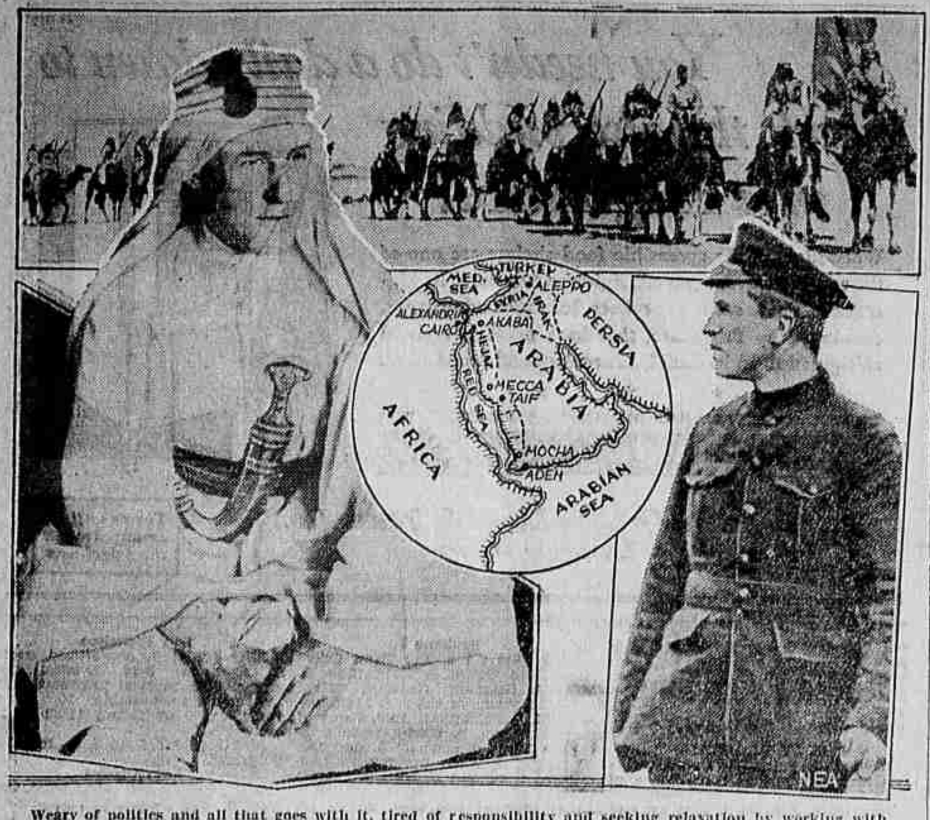
"Lawrence of Arabia" Happy Now as Mere Private



Weary of politics and all that goes with it, tired of responsibility and seeking relaxation by working with his hands—that explains why Colonel T. E. Lawrence, famous in the World War as "Lawrence of Arabia," is now a private in Britain's royal aircraft service, according to his story just obtained by United Press. Lawrence is shown as he appeared when he was "the uncrowned king of Arabia," organizing and leading thousands of Arabs against the Turks for the Allied cause and, right, as he appears now as a British private. Some of the desert tribesmen that he led in battle and a map of the scene of his exploits are also shown.

O. S. C. President Hits University "Misstatements"

SALEM, April 30 (AP)—W. J. Kerr, president of Oregon State college, in a supplementary brief filed with the state board of higher education yesterday, criticised the University of Oregon for "misstatements of fact and some serious implications reflecting upon the good faith of the institution," in the university's 12 briefs presented to the board April 20.

President Arnold Bennett Hall of the university, and Kerr both appeared before the board here at that time to present ideas to aid in a constructive policy to eliminate duplication and to reduce expenditures. The board set yesterday as the time to act upon the issue, but the session was postponed.

Kerr, in his brief, said: "At the conference of April 20, the university of Oregon presented 12 separate briefs, including therein, along with essential arguments, numerous criticisms of the college, misstatements of fact, and some serious implications reflecting upon the good faith of the institution. The college can hardly do otherwise than give some attention to these criticisms and implications as well as to the arguments of the briefs.

"In reading the introduction to the university's brief, one is struck with the sweeping character of statements made," Kerr's statement continues. "One is struck with the facility with which the introduction applies to the college and its work, or to the relations between the college and the university, such invidious terms as 'pretext,' 'disguised,' 'smuggled,' 'forbidden fields,' 'undue expansion,' 'exaggerated development,' 'feverish rivalry,' and 'irritating situation.' Without exception these implications are flung out with no supporting evidence whatsoever."

The brief then replies to all arguments presented by the university including subjects taught at both institutions. Detailed consideration is given all major subjects in the brief which covered 113 pages.

"The college has always conformed to the rulings of the board of higher curricula and the state board of higher education in a spirit of absolute fidelity," Kerr stated. "Completely occupied in developing its work on its assigned fields, it has not been aware of either 'outside acrimony,' or of the 'irritating situation' that the university complains of, except as these have been thrust into view by action of the university itself."

Investigate Story of Slain Husband

DECATUR, Tenn., April 30 (AP)—A story of how a mountain woman and her lover killed her husband by piercing his heart with a hatpin and then hacked the body to pieces was under official investigation yesterday.

Frank Thornton, 16, told the story to a squire's court. He said the slaying took place last fall, but he had not told the story sooner for fear of his second cousin, Hudie Hickman, 25, and Mrs. William Bunch, 23.

Thornton testified that he went to the Bunch home, 12 miles from here, early one morning and there found Mrs. Bunch and Hickman cutting up a body. The pair, he said, drew guns on him and did not allow him to leave until he sobbed an oath that he would never tell what he had seen.

Mrs. Bunch denied the youth's allegations and said that her husband disappeared several months ago. She was bound over to the criminal court.

Hickman's hearing was delayed on his plea that he wished to await the arrival of his father before facing the court.

War Victim Has a Checkered Career

LOCKPORT, N. Y., April 30 (AP)—A victim of shell-shock while serving with the Canadian army during the World war, Ralph H. Thurber, now in a Cleveland hospital, has had a checkered career during the past ten years.

The publicity he received as a result of his claim that he was suffering from distomiasis, a somewhat rare disease caused by eating raw fish in the tropics, was equalled in March, 1929, when he created a sensation by confessing, made while he was in a British prison, that he was a participant in the Wall street bombing of September 16, 1920, in which 30 persons were killed.

Falsity of the bombing confession was established when a check up of his record showed that he was in San Quentin prison, California, at the time.

Sport Slants

By Alan J. Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

It seemed about time for this operative to report in detail on the activities of a portly gentleman named Ruth. Anyway, it was a pleasant spring day calculated to lead many a taxicab to the Yankee Stadium.

As we arrived at the outset of hostilities, Mr. Ruth was just taking a futile third swing at the right-handed smoke blown in his direction by George Livingston Earnshaw, a world's series hero no longer ago than last October.

That sound we detected from the right field bleachers obviously was of a derisive character as the Babe trotted out to his place in the sun. He has heard it before and seemed not the least annoyed.

Three innings later with the A's leading 4-0 and a mate on first; Ruth swung once and missed with great gusto then swung again and connected. High up into the right field crowd soared the ball, followed by a tremendous roar.

Twice more the Babe came to bat with a man on base and two runs needed to give the Yankees a winning lead. A towering fly wasted the first chance, then with two strikes on him he caught one of Earnshaw's fast ones. The telltale crack sounded. Again the ball sailed high into the stands; again the tumult and the shouting.

The old man had broken up the ball game single-handed with a brace of blows that seemed symbolic of a number of things, among them:

1. That the new ball, when solidly smacked, will travel as far as the Ruthian drives of old.

2. That the Babe, with an extension of his $80,000 contract to be considered, is off on another big year.

STILL THE BIG BAM

Ruth's home run act remains the greatest one man show in baseball. Often as this and other operatives have seen it put on, there is still a thrill in the big fellow's rythmic swing, faultless timing and follow-through.

The masses continue to manifest a semi-hysteria whenever the Big Bam connects. A ceremony of handkerchief waving awaits the Babe in the right field bleachers after every poke into this favorite home run territory of the Yankee Stadium.

So long as this unquestioned appeal to the box office exists, and it seems to have lost none of its potency, the magnates will do no great amount of tampering with the ball calculated to minimize the histrionic qualities of the game's most eminent actor.

RUTH-EARNSHAW TILTS

Earnshaw, the victim of Ruth's first double-barreled blast of the 1931 season, failed to profit from his experiences of last season. On two separate and distinct occasions of the 1930 campaign the Big Moose of the A's was combed by Ruth for a brace of round trip blows, so that George Livingston Earnshaw's embarrassment well can be imagined when George Herman Ruth again smote him twice in the same spot. All told, in competition with the two aces of Connie Mack's "full house," Ruth has hit Earnshaw for seven homers in three years and Robert Moses Grove for six circuit clouts in five seasons.

Chats With Parents

NAMES
By Alice Judson Peale

Children often suffer acutely from little things of which their parents are not even aware.

Affectionate family nicknames or fancy names are among the things which often make life harder than it need be.

The fancy name may have been sincerely chosen, but the boy or girl who must carry it and for whom it is probably highly inappropriate as well, is actually handicapped by it. He is made to look just a little bit silly to everybody.

Pet names and baby names clinging tenaciously into the school years sometimes cause the child to suffer teasing from his playmates. A child is happiest if he carries a name which does not set him apart unnecessarily and thereby make him look foolish in the eyes of others.

In ultra-modern families there is a tendency to discard the conventional "Mother" and "Father" for the given name. A mother teaching her child to call her by her first name imagines perhaps that by that fact she is establishing a comradeship. She forgets that genuine companionship cannot depend upon anything so superficial.

The name "Mother" has a connotation of love and security which is unique in human experience and which is a part of every child's birthright.

It is perhaps not too far fetched to guess that the modern mother who trains her child to call her by her first name does so because she herself, in part at least, resents the role of motherhood.

Viewed in this light such a mother can only be regarded as immature and inadequate for her task.

CARDS' SHORTSTOP HOLDS 11 LETTERS IN COLLEGE SPORTS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Charley Gelbert, Cardinal flash, considered by many experts as the best shortstop in the majors, starred in sports long before he came under the gaze of big league "ivory hunters."

At Lebanon Valley college, in Pennsylvania, he won 11 letters, four each in football and basketball and three on the diamond. He comes by his ability honestly.

His father, Charles Saladin Gelbert, was All-American end on Walter Camp's teams of 1893, 1894 and 1895, when he played for the University of Pennsylvania.

At one time, while playing semi-pro ball for his home town of Ambler, Pa., he was under contract to try out with Connie Mack's Athletics, but at his father's request did not take advantage of the offer.

HENDERSON BACK RETURNS AS ATHLETICS DIRECTOR

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP)—Eugene "Bo" Sherman is the latest addition to the circle of college athletic directors in Arkansas.

He has been chosen to lead the activities of the Henderson State college "Reddies," beginning with football practice in September. He succeeds J. H. Rowland, who goes to Ouachita college.

Sherman, an alumnus of Henderson, is now at George Peabody college, Nashville, Tenn., taking a physical education course.

Sherman made all state tackle in his second year at Henderson and became a brilliant performer in the backfield during his last two years. He was considered the greatest all-around back the state has produced for a decade.

CLUB HEAD'S SON SHINES ON FRESHMAN BALL TEAM

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Young Pat Ankenman of Houston, son of Fred Ankenman, president of the Houston, Texas league, baseball club, seems destined to fit well in a "like father, like son" role.

Young Ankenman, a shortstop, is being hailed as an outstanding infielder on the University of Texas freshman diamond squad.

Coach "Uncle Bill" Disch said he had but one problem to worry him in dealing with Ankenman, and that was the youth's weight.

"I'll either have to order him to drink about three quarts of milk a day, or put lead in his shoes," Disch said in explaining that the Houston boy weighed but 116, stripped.

Irving Burns, Brown's first baseman in an early season game set a record for handling chances at his position with 26.

At a high school track meet sponsored by the University of Arkansas, 118 schools and 1,600 contestants were entered.

PLAYING WITH TWO HOOVER GRANDCHILDREN IS GAY EVENT FOR GIRL COUSINS FROM IOWA

Charlotte Ann and Margaret Ellen Hoover, shown above, are playmates of their cousins, Peggy Ann and Herbert Hoover, 3rd, grandchildren of President Hoover. Charlotte and Margaret have moved to the capital from Iowa.

By Sue McNamara

WASHINGTON (AP)—It's a gala day for two little girls from Iowa when they go to the White House to play with the president's grandchildren.

The two girls are Charlotte Ann and Margaret Ellen Hoover, distant cousins of little Peggy Ann and Herbert Hoover 3rd. Their father, Claude Hoover, is a second cousin of the president. They recently moved here from Fairfield, Iowa.

The girls like to go to the White House and play with Peggy Ann's dolls and the furniture Mrs. Hoover bought for her granddaughter on Christmas.

They enjoy riding over the smooth East room floor in the scooter wagon of Herbert Hoover 3rd, better known as "Peter."

Only they do not understand why they can't run over and play with the president's grandchildren as they would with any other youngsters.

"Mother, can't we go over and play with Peggy Ann and Peter today?" is a frequent question.

And when a call comes from the White House inviting them over the two little girls don their best dresses and go eagerly forth to mingle with the small daughters of cabinet members and diplomats.

Sometimes they are invited to play with their little cousins alone, and they like this the best.

When they drive past the White House they point out proudly: "There's where Peggy Ann and Peter live."

They cut out pictures of the president and save them. They only know him, however, as a big, busy, kindly man who appears for a brief moment, pats them on the head, smiles and is gone.

But Peggy Ann and Peter skip along with him to his office nearly every morning and go to meet him in the evening.

Charlotte and Margaret have their own grandfather here, George Hoover, cousin of the president, an attorney for the Interstate Commerce commission. He tells them stories of boyhood days in Iowa when he and the president played together.

Progressives May Enter Candidate For Speakership

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—Progressive Republicans will sponsor a third candidate in the house speakership election next December regardless of whom party regulars nominate.

This was the prediction of Representative Schneider, Wisconsin Republican, yesterday, as the capitol discussed prospects of two of the outstanding candidates, Republican Leader Tilson and Chairman Snell of the rules committee.

Schneider emphasized that progressives are more interested in a liberal legislative program than in details of house organization.

"I am convinced there will be a third man in the race," he said. "I believe the progressives will exact an understanding for liberalization of the rules and for a program of progressive legislation."

Progressive support of a third candidate could block indefinitely the election of Democratic Leader Garner of Texas, or his regular Republican opponent, because a majority vote is required to elect a speaker.

Friends of Snell are actively pushing his candidacy, although the New Yorker has refused to make a formal announcement.

Though both Tilson and Snell have predicted that Republicans, on the basis of a close numerical majority, will organize the house, Schneider's announcement raised doubts over the final result. A compromise Western speaker was considered a possibility.

Schneider had said that he and other progressives do not intend to participate in the Republican conference nominating a speaker.

Stimson Speaks by Radio to Japanese

WASHINGTON, April 30 (AP)—In a radio speech that carried across the Pacific ocean to Japan, Secretary Stimson yesterday said that largely because of the success of the London naval conference of 1930 the ocean "no longer separates but rather unites Japan and the United States."

The secretary of state's message was part of the celebration of the thirtieth birthday anniversary of Emperor Hirohito. Baron Kijuro Shidehara, foreign minister of the Tokyo government, delivered a reply which the radio brought to the United States.

"It is a great satisfaction to me, on this day of rejoicing in Japan, to speak a few words to the Japanese people, our friendly neighbors across the Pacific ocean. We worked cordially together last year in London to bring about a limitation of naval armament and our success there proves our confidence in each other. Both the United States and Japan made sacrifices in their naval programs, but each gained, I am convinced, a fleet which guarantees national security."

Farm Group Head to Fight Crop Surplus

CHICAGO, April 30 (AP)—Edward A. O'Neal of Montgomery, Ala., installed yesterday as president of the American farm bureau federation, said he would call a conference of farm, marketing and government leaders to attack the problems of prevention and control of crop surpluses.

"The most pressing problem facing American agriculture today," said the new president, "has to do with surplus control. I shall immediately address myself to the development of an aggressive problem looking to adoption of means necessary to the permanent control of all agricultural surpluses. Organized problems must promptly adopt a workable plan under the provisions of the marketing act. I shall call into immediate conference farm bureau, marketing and governmental leaders. An orderly system of marketing cannot be established until the surplus problem is disposed of."

Receive Word From Aimee S. McPherson

LOS ANGELES, April 30 (AP)—Officials of Angelus Temple received a cablegram yesterday from their leader, Aimee Semple McPherson, saying she and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley Smythe, had sailed from Marseilles, France, to begin the last leg of a trip around the world.

Neil E. Gonyo, new coach at Marquette university high school, is only 23. Last season he was assistant at St. Mary's college, Kansas.

Resolutions Framed at Women's Council

PHOENIX, Ariz., April 30 (AP)—Mrs. Henry S. Eley of Suffolk, Va., member of the board of directors of the general federation of women's clubs, offered resolutions to the biennial council yesterday expressing faith in the 18th amendment, belief that this nation should join the world court immediately and denouncement of communism.

They will come up for adoption Friday.

Disarmament, immigration, encouragement of art education in American possessions, and a world flag were among the international aspects of resolutions, while the national group of proposals included women's war compensation and relief.

General council sentiment was that little opposition would develop because the resolutions were the result of surveys by department chairman.

Market Road Tax Is Not Impaired

SALEM, April 30 (AP)—The right of counties to levy taxes for market road purposes is not taken away by senate bill 262, which provides for the repeal of the one mill market road tax, an opinion by Attorney-General I. H. Van Winkle held yesterday. The effect of this measure on market road taxes was requested by District Attorney William E. Walsh, of Coos county.

The county always had the right to levy taxes for construction and maintenance of roads, whether the same be designated as market roads or not. The attorney-general further held, under questions asked by Walsh, that the county may levy a tax under the new bill for redemption of market road warrants, but that any levy would come under the 6 per cent limitation.

NEW TRAP MAKES OWLS LOOK DUMB

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP)—Big horned owls will need all their fabled wisdom if they are to elude the ingenious trap set for them and other predatory birds on the Ogemaw bird refuge near here.

Barnyard pigeons, favorite prey of the bigger birds, are used as decoys, and as part of a device invented by Keeper Blaine Brannon.

The pigeons are mounted with wings spread, with a spring trap resting on the back and wings. The whole device is supported by a slim yet strong coil of wire to sway some 15 inches off the ground.

The would-be killer swoops to seize his innocuous-looking victim, thrusts his claws into the feather-concealed trap, and is caught.
