Consider Plans Effecting Child Welfare Program

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 5 (AP)—The national congress of parents and teachers yesterday considered plans to "translate into action" the "children's charter" formulated at the White House conference on child health and protection last November.

The program is built around the theme of parental education as the surest means of providing "for every child understanding and the guarding of his personality as his most precious right."

As the thirty-fifth meeting got under way with Mrs. Hugh Bradford of Sacramento, Cal., president in the chair, some 1,500 delegates had before them a proposal for a "five year plan of stamping out illiteracy" as one of the goals in accomplishing the aims of the "children's charter."

Dr. Lewis R. Alderman, adult education expert of the United States office of education, laid before the congress last night a plan of making "functionally literate" the twelve to fifteen millions of illiterate adults in the country.

"The most worthwhile task in the world is being a good parent," he said. "To secure this educated parenthood is one of the most important projects any organization can undertake. Now that we have an increasing amount of leisure, there is every reason why parents should become pupils. We realize that with 250,000 school houses and 1,000,000 public school teachers we have an agency that can make the children's charter an actuality. We need to open our school buildings at night as well as during the day."

Fall Looks For Pardon As Only Means of Escape

THREE RIVERS, N. M., May 5 (AP)—Albert B. Fall looked to President Hoover yesterday for a pardon as his only avenue of escape from a sentence of a year in jail and $100,000 fine on conviction of accepting a bribe from E. L. Doherty, oil man.

The former secretary of the Interior announced Sunday he would not again appeal his sentence by a District of Columbia court in which he was found guilty on charges growing out of the leasing of naval oil reserves.

Petitions have been circulated by friends in New Mexico and elsewhere asking a presidential pardon for the Harding cabinet officer.

The District of Columbia court of appeals recently upheld Fall's sentence. The next step would have been application to the supreme court for a writ of error.

Mr. Fall, interviewed at his ranch here after action of the court of appeals, said his attitude toward a presidential pardon was largely passive.

"I am an old man," he said. "I am not guilty of the crime of which I was accused. I have fought until I am worn out, and considerations for my family impel me to carry the fight no further."

He said he had no money with which to pay the fine and explained he had lost ownership of the ranch on which he lives, when a mortgage was foreclosed several years ago.

SPANISH AMBASSADOR

MADRID, May 5 (AP)—Salvador Derradariga, noted Spanish author, diplomat and lecturer, yesterday was named as ambassador to Washington from the new Spanish republic.

PAIN IN YOUR SHOULDER?

Use Tysmol for Relief

Knife-like jabs of pain in the vicinity of the shoulder blade are generally due to neuritis, brought on by exposure to draughts or sudden changes of weather. In some cases there is stiffness or soreness in the muscles, making it difficult to raise the arm.

The safest and easiest way to relieve such an attack is to apply a small quantity of Tysmol over the affected area. This soothing, healing preparation is quickly absorbed through the pores and carried to the throbbing aching peripheral nerves. The pains usually stop at once, and in a very short time the last trace of soreness should disappear.

Tysmol is absolutely harmless—free from dope. Recommended for all forms of nerve pain, whether caused by neuritis, neuralgia, sciatica or rheumatism, sold by leading drug stores. Always on hand at Glass Drugs, Inc.—Adv.

By Percival Christopher Wren Author of MYSTERIOUS WAYS BEAU GESTE BEAU IDEAL

And in the same hour I lost her, or rather, learned that I had found her too late.

Perhaps suffering does—as poets and moralists have sung and said—act upon the human mind as does the furnace fire upon the earthly ore.

Perhaps pain and sorrow and suffering are, and it is true that we do, stronger and braver and better, I don't know.

But I do know that I was able to meet this fresh blow as a man should, and to stand up to it, and while standing up to it, conceal its terrible effects.

Or, again, of course, it may be that I had received so shattering a blow when Rosemary met her dreadful fate, that my mind and soul had lost some of their capacity for suffering.

Anyhow—Rosemary was engaged to be married—a fact the possibility of which had positively never entered my mind.

I had had so much else of which to think that I had almost visualized her as having no outside relationships save with her weak, worthless uncle and his infamous wife.

Marjorie was engaged to be married. Her fiancé was in India. She would shortly be of age, and she wished to go out to him.

Chapter 43 THE LOST JEWEL

DASHING into Charters' vacant bedroom, as Marjorie and Sister Weldon waited safely outside the walls—I took his keys from beneath his pillow and rushed to his consulting room. Swiftly I unlocked a little door in the upper part of his big desk, the part that, consisting of pigeon-holes and cupboards, rose up at the back of the leather-covered table part at which he wrote.

From a locked drawer in this cupboard I took another bunch of keys, among which was a small instrument shaped something like the blade of a screw-driver.

In Charters' desk I found the tin containing my diamond.

With one of these keys, I opened yet another little cupboard, and on the floor of this, I discovered a neat round hole. Inserting the screw-driver blade, I soon found the head of a large screw, and withdrew it.

Having done this, I seized one end of the upper part of the desk in both hands, and swung it round on its hidden central axis, so that it stood across the desk at right angles to its usual position.

This exposed, at each end of the desk, an area that was covered by the back of the desk when in normal position.

In each of these horizontal areas was a keyhole. With one of the keys of the second bunch, I unlocked and raised a flap that covered a box, of which it was the lid.

In this cavity were a number of small bottles labeled "Poison." From one containing a red powder, I withdrew the stopper, tipped out the contents, and exposed a small key.

With this I unlocked and raised the lid of the cavity on the right-hand side of the desk. This cavity also contained bottles, boxes, and tins. One of the latter, apparently a quarter-pound tobacco-tin that had never been opened, I removed and pocketed.

It contained my diamond, The Unsetting Gem.

My knowledge of its hiding-place was due partly to the skill, cleverness, courage, and persistence of Williams' William, and partly to my own night prowling, generally fruitless, behind the heavy curtain that had served me so well on the first day of my visit to The Monastery.

I had recovered my diamond, now more to me a symbol of success than a thing of intrinsic value. My diamond—that had cost me Rosemary's life—and yet had saved Marjorie's.

I had triumphed over my enemies and had seen the worst and vilest of them die at my feet like a poisoned dog.

I had found Love—and with it Faith, Hope and Charity—and I had found Marjorie.

By Blosser

So be it. I would take her and see her safe into his care.

For three weeks I should be continually in her company. In that time I would find out something about her lover, and at the end of it I would meet him and sum him up.

If Marjorie loved him, doubtless he was worthy.

But did she love him—or was it a boy and girl affair? Well... I should have that three weeks. Three weeks of Paradise ineffable, and, if it must be, "Paradise enow."

How shall I tell of that voyage? I cannot tell. Like Dante, I have been in Heaven, but I am no Dante to tell of it.

It lasted for a moment. It lasted for years—21 wonderful days, each of which was a year—each filled with wonderful and innumerable happenings of indescribable, unimaginable loveliness, joy and glory; a smile upon Marjorie's lovely lips; a happy laugh, the sweetest music in this world; a pressure of loving hands upon my arm as we walked the moon-lit deck... For they were loving hands. Marjorie loved me, I'm sure, and, but for her cousin, might have fallen in love with me. I verily believe.

But who was I, gray, grim and battered—although scarce 40 years of age—a hunted convict with a price upon his head? Who was I that I should make love to Marjorie Lauderbell?

One of the few things to which, in reviewing my life, I can look back with satisfaction, is the fact that loving, worshiping adoring her as I did, I was able to refrain from making love to her. But I love to know that Marjorie loved me, and I love to think, in happier circumstances, she might perchance have fallen in love with me, and loved me indeed as I loved her.

There is much of love in this last sentence. Well, it is better than hate and so, thanking Marjorie and God, let me end upon that note.

THE END
