Filipino Parties Give Graft Issue Ephemistic Name

MANILA (AP)—Filipino politicians are out on the hustings hammering at their opponents for the general elections to be held June 2.

There are two parties in the national field, but no issues. Both sides say they are working for independence and for improving the condition of the poor.

Hence the campaigning consists chiefly of accusations of inefficiency.

lack of public spirit and graft, which is known under the euphemistic term of "anomalies."

The two principal organizations are the consolidated national party, commonly called the nationalists, and the democratic party. They are contesting for all the 82 seats in the house of representatives and half of the 22 places in the senate.

There were only two democrats in the last senate and 15 in the house.

Health

SPECIAL DIETS

Popular fancy eagerly lays hold of every item in science and dilates upon it until it assumes grotesque proportions.

Thus we have a craze for vitamins, as if vitamins were the only important item in dietetics.

Not so long ago vegetables were the rage and many a young life was rendered miserable by the parental insistence on spinach.

Now, spinach is a good vegetable, though rather insipid in taste. But it is no elixir among the vegetables. It possesses no peculiar virtues that may not be found in other vegetables as well.

The same may be said of diets in general. There is much good to be derived from sensibly planned diets. But the matter is too easily carried to extremes.

Some short while past we quoted in this column the good-natured fun which Dr. Eugene F. DuBois poured at a certain book which pretentious-ly offered diets for "an adult, male, stock-broker, under nerve strain," for "a traveling man who is liable to suffer from gastritis and chronic alcoholism," for "frail young mother," "fat middle-aged spinsters," etc.

A number of readers missed the fun and wrote for the name of the book and for the diet lists.

The fact is that these pretentious diet lists carry a good thing too far. They promise more than they can deliver.

For the healthy person, young and old, there are but few diets suitable for different conditions.

For the sick person, special diets can with safety be prescribed only upon a first-hand knowledge of the patient's condition.

For those interested in a more detailed statement of the subject we can recommend "Feeding the Family" by Mary Swartz Rose and "The Newer Knowledge of Nutrition," by Dr. E. V. McCollum.

Stock Certificate Forgeries Detected

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Is that stock certificate genuine? The "electric eye" can tell.

The "eye" was developed by C. C. Hein, research engineer. Material to be tested is fed through a slot in the box-like device. Lights shine upon the material, and a meter at the top shows how much light gets through. By calculation the thickness of the material under test is determined.

Hein started using the "eye" with the idea of finding how thick paper must be so that print will not show through from the other side. The purpose was to reduce a publication's paper costs.

"Its use is by no means confined to this purpose, however," he said. "It can tell at a glance whether a doubtful document or stock certificate is printed on the same thickness of paper as the genuine. Usually imitations are printed on paper of slightly different thickness and this electric Sherlock Holmes quickly brands them as false.

"Henceforth," the "eye" can tell exactly how thin sheer silk stockings are and does away with the old uncertain thumb and finger method."

BULGARIA MOVES TO LIMIT STUDENTS IN UNIVERSITIES

SOFIA (AP)—Entrance to the two universities in Bulgaria is to be limited under plans of the educational authorities.

The census revealed that whereas the population increased by 13 per cent and the enrollment in primary schools by 11 per cent in the six years between 1924 and 1930, the university enrollment grew by 80 per cent.

The authorities have advised parents to teach their sons and daughters trades, warning them that hundreds of young people who graduate from the universities can't find "white collar" jobs and have to undertake labor for which they are not fitted.

MAD PURSUIT

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Julian Lake sees in Nicholas a prospective husband for his motherless daughter, Nora. But the girl is attracted by the plan this to end her wandering with Julian always vainly seeking success as a writer. Nicholas is the brother of Jonathan Tower, whom she fondly remembers as one of the best friends she had in America.

Chapter 11 IN THE SHIP'S WAKE

NOT until she was aboard ship did she realize what she had done. Her heart came up in her throat when they reached the cabin. Nicholas was walking about nervously. It made her feel sorry for him. If she were frightened, how much more he seemed to be, as he talked in disjointed sentences about things that did not matter at all.

"Nicholas, what did the doctor say about your hand?"

"Oh, that!" he asked, his face grimly smiling. "I told you—it will be all right."

Some time in the night he had drowned himself in the wake of the ship.

Some time in the night he had drowned himself in the wake of the ship.

"Did he say how long it would take?"

"Oh, in just a little while—!" He shrugged. His thin cheeks had a dark red flush and his eyes looked wild.

"A day or two before you—before we—land you'd better cable my family. I always forget those things. You'll remember."

He caught up his hat. "I think I'll take a walk around and see what's happening."

But he came back to the doorway. "You've got the tickets and everything? The passport's on the berth—and you've got my family's address?"

She nodded. How strange and remote he was, she thought as he rushed away down the corridor. Suddenly she slipped down on her knees, her face against the berth, and began to cry.

Married. Married. Married. Why hadn't some one told her it was like this. That she was trapped. That her happiness depended on a man she did not even love. He excited her, but there was no security, no peace, no understanding.

"He's taking me home," she thought.

She was able to lie down and picture Nicholas' home so plainly, the old house dreaming on the river bank beneath its great trees, the little waves that rolled in against a pebbly shore.

Nora woke with a start. Looking about, she saw that Nicholas had not come down to the cabin.

She heard a stormy sea rage past. Suddenly she knew what she must have known from the moment she saw his face in the Naples station; the doctor had not said that Nicholas' hand would be better. He could never use it again. And he was afraid to tell her. Now she understood that flush in his cheeks, his feverish eyes, his strange movements. She put a coat over her pajamas, slid her feet into slippers and ran out. The corridors were deserted.

When she reached the deck at first the wind seemed to tear her breath away, but she fought her way forward. The deck was de-
