God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW

Criticism of American institutions from the other side of the ocean is not always worth listening to, but a remark made the other day by G. K. Chesterton, the English author and lecturer, as he returned to England after a long tour through the United States, contains something that we could mull over a bit without harming ourselves.

"From one end to the other of this magnificent civilization," he says, "there is no such thing as a village. When you enter a little town it is simply an eyesore to anybody of European tradition or instincts."

"The first things met are yellow tin advertisements, tin buildings with frameworks of lead and glass, and tin shops—and then, thank God, you are out of the town."

Obviously, the American small town rubbed Mr. Chesterton the wrong way; and it is quite certain that there is an enormous contrast between the orderly and attractive little hamlets of England and the villages of the United States. But are things quite as bad as he says?

We think not. Chesterton has a failing of greatly exaggerating those things which do not please him. Yet there is no reason to deny that he had good grounds for his criticism. Every American motorist can remember towns that fall into Chesterton's classification; towns that come as an acute disappointment to the traveler, and make him want to keep going, as Mr. Chesterton wanted to keep going, in the hope of finding something nicer.

It would be fairly easy to remove most of the unpleasant features from the small town landscape if a little time and money were devoted to the job. But usually nobody takes the trouble to start such a movement. Everyone agrees that this, that, or the other thing looks pretty bad—and everyone waits for the other fellow to do something about it.

Some reason, too, is found in the fact that the inhabitant of any town sees so much more than the visitor. He is used to the place. It is his Home Town, given a beauty it does not really possess by years of association. He is fond of it, and treats it as one treats an old friend—by turning a blind eye to its faults, and appreciating the loveliness which no stranger can see.

So the traveler, passing through at thirty miles an hour or more, takes a hasty glance and says, "What a horrid place!" And the native, coming home after an absence, looks about him, feels a warm glow in his breast upon seeing the old familiar sights, and murmurs a phrase about it's being the most attractive spot in the country.

LONG-RANGE FORECASTING

Forecasting drouths and seasons with abnormal rain and snowfall as far as twenty-five years in the future is possible, according to A. F. Gorton, of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography in California.

In this long-range forecasting he would use weather records of the past sixty years, and the knowledge that weather runs in cycles. He believes the trends of precipitation could be worked out through systems based on the "Brueckner Cycle" which is the result of a study revealing the years in which good wines and bad wines were produced in times past.

In the forty-first chapter of Genesis it is related that Joseph interpreted Pharaoh's dream as signifying seven years of plenty in Egypt, to be followed by seven years of famine. Perhaps to Joseph had been imparted the knowledge that rain and drouth follow each other in regular cycles.

It is recorded that many did not heed Joseph's prophecy, and did not store up grain against the impending famine. Were scientist Gorton's system to be placed in successful operation, would the recurring famines find the world prepared with a surplus of grain and water? Probably not; for human nature has changed very little in the past few thousand years.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer

WASHINGTON—The United States supreme court will soon go into its summer vacation—a period extending from June until mid-October.

Some people probably envy the lot of the justices who are able to enjoy such a long spell away from their jobs. If they do, it is because they are unfamiliar with how the court works.

For to a great extent it is only a supposed rest the justices get when the court shuts down for so long a time.

The work goes on. Justice Holmes, for example, labors just as hard as the summer retreat of "Beverly-by-the-Depot" in Massachusetts as he would in his office in the capitol. There is enough future business filed with the clerk to keep the government's great law mill grinding at all times. Huge mail sacks bulging with documents are shipped to them wherever they may be for preliminary study. The business of the court would long be delayed were this not done.

Twelve-Hour Day

As a matter of fact, justices of the supreme court are among the hardest working men in Washington. Their hours are longer than those of a manual laborer. When the court is in session a 12-hour day six days in the week is the regular order.

And it is not unusual for them to take court business to their homes for study at night. When the court is sitting to hear arguments, as it does for four weeks at a time with intervals of three-week recesses to catch up the justices from Chief Justice Hughes down, get only 30 minutes for lunch.

This luncheon period is spent in the conference room. Their messengers bring trays from their homes or from the senate restaurant. Every-

UNUSUAL LIVING ROOM

(By the Associated Press)

Individuality appears in both the interior and the exterior of this house of English type.

Brick, stone and half-timber are interestingly combined in the walls, giving a picturesque character particularly evident when the planting is in keeping.

The half-timber is stained a weathered gray or a darker tone in contrast with the stucco of light cream or gray. The roof is preferably of slate or tile, but wood or composition shingles may be used. Choice of the roof color should be made carefully with a view to harmony with the rest of the house.

Most unusual in the plan is the living room. Here, instead of a rectangular shape, the designer has provided an octagonal room, the ceiling of which is considerably higher than that of the remainder of the first floor.

Because of this design, one may glimpse the living room from a balcony on the second floor, passing over the fireplace grouping and affording opportunity for the decorator.

Draperies may be used effectively here, at the same time serving a utilitarian purpose in screening those passing on the balcony from too plain a view from the room below.

The unusual shape of the living room will result in an arrangement of furniture not at all ordinary. Happily, the windows, which should provide abundant ventilation in summer, also give views of the garden from three different angles.

If the kitchen and garage are placed on the north side, the important rooms downstairs will get the sun from the south. The convenient arrangement of kitchen has a large window area and the dining room is cross-ventilated.

There are three bedrooms and two bathrooms upstairs. The two end bedrooms are large and have windows on two sides and one side of the small bedroom is a large bay window.

Such a house, preferably located on a lot 75 by 125 feet, would cost between $8,000 and $10,000, depending on local conditions.

ers flocked to cooler retreats—swimming holes, fishing streams and lakes, etc. The cooler wearing apparel—pajamas, flimsy dresses, no stockings, etc.—have made an earlier appearance than usual with people in general trying to become accustomed to an early summer.

The weather bureau in Portland does not hold up any immediate relief for Eastern Oregon.

Sweet With a Glance

Proof that the eye is quicker than the hand lies in the fact that a pair of eyes can sweep a room in a moment, while it takes a pair of hands half an hour to accomplish the same thing.

ices called. On two occasions under the personal direction of Prince Dmitry Sviatiansky, the original founder of the choir, they sang before the Pope in Rome and at St. Peter's Cathedral. On their first European tour they brought back over 50 medals, decoration and diplomas that were bestowed upon them.

King Edward of England, bestowed upon them the British Medal of Merit and invited them to sing at Windsor castle.

In their first American tour, some years ago, the president invited them to sing at the White House, in Washington, and bestowed upon them the first and possibly the only presidential medal ever given to a musical organization.

Their most recent Royal honors were bestowed upon them in Japan two years ago at the coronation ceremony in Kyoto, where they were invited by the Japanese Government as a special foreign entertainment feature of the enthronement festivities.

The day of the departure from Yokohama, Prince Chichibu, eldest brother of the Japanese Emperor, presented Princess Sviatiansky, the present conductor, with an Imperial medal, and the Imperial Conservatory of Music, Tokyo, honored her by making her an honorary member of their faculty, the first foreign woman to have ever received this honor.

This group of singers and dancers, with balalaika instruments will give one concert here on June 13 at the L. D. S. Tabernacle under the local management of Andrew J. Loney Jr., as chairman of the American Legation committee.

Building for 1931 to Date Lower Than Usual; No Permits Last Week.

No additional building permits were issued in La Grande last week, but the several applied for earlier in the month, boosted the May total to $4475.

Considerable building is under way over the city, but with hardly an exception, it is of a minor character, either garages or remodeling and repair work.

The total for the first five months of 1931 amounted to $42,995, the smallest five-month total in several years.

Permits issued this year follow:

WAY OPENED TO PATCH UP ITALIAN ROW

Knights of Columbus in Rome, filed a protest against closing of three playgrounds operated by that organization.

He asked Ambassador Garret to pass the protest on to the Italian government and to demand an explanation for what he called "an unjustified and unjustifiable action."

He said he had not been informed as to when the playgrounds would be permitted to reopen and he had been obliged to discharge 25 playground directors.

Virtually a Consistory was held at the Vatican on June 1, called only on extraordinary occasions or for the creation of cardinals. For two hours the pontiff and the cardinals discussed the situation.

Several of the cardinals were said to have expressed continuance of the pope's firm stand.

It was said the pontiff told his advisors he had no desire to break the concordat with Italy but he wished the Italian government would regard that agreement not as one which could be violated by either party but as an international treaty subject to the regulations of international law.

If Italy takes that view, it was said, the Vatican will not think of renouncing the concordat.

Prospect of a settlement of the strained relations was reached as Italy and the papal state stood at the crossroads of an open rupture. The situation was regarded by some Vatican authorities as a de facto severance of diplomatic relations.

Tenacious Aggravated

The tenaciousness of the situation was aggravated by the explosion of four bombs near Catholic institutions in Bologna Saturday night. Though no damage was done, a Carabinieri brigadier was killed and two persons were injured by fragments.

Thirty persons were arrested, presumably Fascist youths opposed to the church.

The pontiff said in an address to a group of ecclesiastics in Vatican City Sunday that he would invoke the Lateran treaty and concordat in protesting the closing of the Catholic clubs by Dr. Duce.

The events of the last few days, he said, were "the first manifestation of proof of an education that is the antithesis of Christian and civil education and entirely given to hate, to irreverence and to violence."

"It is the saddest spectacle to which Rome and Italy have been treated and it has revealed already how far advanced is the work of destruction of all good education."

Calling his "birthday" sad and unhappy, the pope continued: "It is well known that we have the right and therefore the duty to invoke the treaty and the concordat. The Catholic world and the whole world has the right to know that when we were confronted with opposition and non-observance of the eventual unilateral decisions we have not failed to take the proper measures and that these measures are now in progress."

"As we said last night, one can ask for our life but not our silence, when all the things that form the delight of our heart and the delight of God are being ruined."

Therefore, it is useless to tell you not to fear. We add also that we shall be with you forever."

Observatore Romano published a list two and one-half columns in length, of alleged assaults by Fascist adherents on the persons of clerics and on the property of the church.

The bishop's palace at Verona was
