UNION PERSONALS

By Mrs. L. Z. Ferrill (Observer Correspondent)

UNION, Ore. (Special)—The Misses Nell and Harriet Eckertley, of Portland were callers at the home of Mrs. Bell Wright on Friday. They were taking their mother to Cove for a visit and planned to go on to Idaho for a visit before returning to Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Goddard arrived from Portland Thursday to spend a few days at the home of her sister, Mrs. Anna Barber.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miller, of Wallowa, spent a few days in Union the past week.

Miss Veina King, of Portland, came to Union for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Alex Slater over Decoration day. Another daughter, Mrs. John Wortman and family, from La Grande, were also weekend visitors. Mrs. Alex Slater expects to undergo a tonsil operation at La Grande on Monday.

Miss Alice Caldwell left Friday morning for Stanwood, Wash., for a ten-day visit.

Mrs. Ed Wolf and daughters, Emma Wolf and Mrs. Earl Hetrick and Mrs. Donald Lamb visited with Mrs. Vergil Hill in Teloceno, on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Winslip and Miss Winslip of La Grande were Union visitors on Saturday. Mr. Winslip is playing in the band. They are planning another move this week. Mr. Winslip having been transferred to Pendleton by the company for which he works.

Mrs. Cecil Lovell, of Alce, and Miss Mabel Westenkow, of Imbler, visited a few days last week at the W. W. Stevens home.

Kem Cadwell came up from Portland for a visit with his father, C. L. Cadwell, over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sutherland, former residents of Union, were registered at the Union hotel several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Blunt, of La Grande, were Union visitors on Sunday.

Paul Cook, son of A. C. Cook, former minister in the Methodist church here, stopped over Saturday night in Union on his way to his home in Nampa.

Two members of the Parochial club drove to Hilgard Saturday to play with Millard Stearns.

Mrs. Connie Blunker arrived from Portland Saturday morning for a two day visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Rees.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fisher and two children spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Ghtes, and attended the Decoration day exercises.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ross and Mr. and Mrs. Pejo were visitors in Union Friday, returning to Esker in the evening.

Eldon Cooper and family, Winifred Metcalf, of the down town, Astoria, Wash., to spend Decoration day with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Caspar, at Hot Lake. They were Union visitors Saturday afternoon.

Cyrus Williams has been having trouble with his ankle broken several weeks ago and has spent the past week at Hot Lake.

Health

Autopsies

Here is an extraordinary topic for a health column. Autopsies! And yet it isn't so very extraordinary. Much of the knowledge in medicine has been gained at the autopsy table.

The first students of human anatomy were undoubtedly the ancient embalmer. Their craft, however, was of a mysterious and religious nature and they were little concerned with medicine or the study of diseases.

During the middle ages, the dissection of human bodies for the study of anatomy or of disease conditions was not looked on with favor and in many parts of the world was strictly forbidden.

This prohibition seriously handicapped the progress of medicine.

After the Renaissance, the attitude toward dissection became more liberal. The study of the constitution and structure of the human body made great progress. Then with a proper knowledge of the normal, it was possible to study the abnormal conditions associated with disease.

Autopsies became a common practice. From the bodies of the dead were gathered facts that could be applied to the safeguarding of the life and health of the living.

There is hardly a branch of medicine that has not profited by autopsies. And there is not a human being alive today whose existence hasn't been rendered more secure and more comfortable because of the hundreds of fundamental facts which were and are being discovered at the autopsy table.

As an illustration we may take the disease, parrot fever or psittacosis. When it first appeared it mystified the entire medical world. But by means of a few autopsies and other studies its nature was discovered and means for its control established.

HILGARD PERSONALS

By Winifred Weimer (Observer Correspondent)

HILGARD, Ore. (Special)—Hilgard school closed Friday afternoon after report cards were distributed. A picnic dinner, furnished by the students, was served at the school house at noon, after which the children with Miss Lola Martin took a hike up one of the many canyons which open into the Five Points canyon. Miss Martin will be succeeded next year by Miss Blanche Whiting, of Mt. Glen.

Marion Sailing is working on the Debbins ranch in the valley.

Mrs. Lester Sloop was called to Enterprise recently by the illness of her mother. She returned to her home at the Mt. Emily logging camp Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lenarda, of Roosevelt, Wash., have been visiting friends at Hilgard for the last several days. They are also visiting their daughter, Miss Donna Scott, in La Grande.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Michael drove to Pilot Rock Sunday morning to visit his mother. They returned home Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Weimer, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rees and Messrs. Jack Newman, Allen Moore and Glen Bates, were swimming at Cove Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Petzold left for Rainier, Wash. Saturday. Mr. Petzold is a carpenter for the Johnson Construction company and will help install a rock crusher and buildings there so that work can begin as soon as the work here is completed.

Grant Williams, of Walla Walla, Wash., visited at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Winced Abel, Monday.

Mrs. Claire Blair and two daughters spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Ghtes, and attended the Decoration day exercises.

By Blosser

"Yes, more beautiful for the Van Vorsts," he admitted.

She flashed a glance at him. He did not approve of her, she could see, but who was this poor straggling young doctor to approve or disapprove?

After supper when Fran had carried the sleepy baby up to bed, she returned to play the violin for them. Nora was carried out of herself, away from the freight and intent faces to the old Dutch house standing high above the river. There life was lived, beautifully, gracefully and there she too would live it.

That night as she sat and Frances went to bed, she told her plans "Don't you want us to help you with your clothes?" Fran offered generously.

"I don't want them to be ashamed of me," Nora admitted.

"But how could they? Poverty is nothing to be ashamed of. And your father's father was governor of the state and Uncle Chapman was a judge of the Supreme Court."

"And my own mother was the daughter of a little shopkeeper in Cork!" Nora said laughing. "And I'm proud of it!"

They discussed just how far her money should go, what she would need.

Hallie had joined them and she offered her opinion:

"The most important things are shoes and hats. A well dressed woman should think of those first."

Nora looked at Hallie in the drab brown dress with the sleeves that showed her bony wrists, and the high black shoes faced about her distorted ankles. . .

In the evenings now they clustered about the table where Frances pinned lengths of crepe de chine to tissue paper patterns while Aunt Em made the sewing machine hum, and Hallie sat in one fine ditch after the other.

There was something pleasantly

"Van Vorst," Fergus More mused. "I think I do remember that name now. Was it he who bought up a whole village so that the people who were foreigners had no place to go and had to give up their livelihood—it seemed a great pity to make those people leave what had once been a thriving settlement," he concluded.

Nora said impulsively, at this hint of criticism, "I'm sure it's much more important to preserve that beautiful country without ugly small shacks—"

"Yes, more beautiful for the Van Vorsts," he admitted.

She flashed a glance at him. He did not approve of her, she could see, but who was this poor straggling young doctor to approve or disapprove?

"It would be heartless to go."

In some way that was obscure to her she knew that she and Jon were fighting a battle with hidden weapons; Jon with his indifference and she with her distrust. He must urge her! He must reassure her; tell her that he had been expecting her, and she waited.

"Damon expects you," he smiled. He did not say that he wanted her to come.

"No, I can't come."

"Very soon then, next week, when he is out of danger?"

He stood smiling on the steps. He drew in a breath of fresh air as though the atmosphere of the dingy old house had clouded his lungs. Then he ran down to his car.

A letter from Damon tomorrow confronts Nora with hard reality, and tears blot out a doctor's compliment.
