Hearing Restored; Noises Bother Him

ABERDEEN, Wash., June 8 (AP)—Roscoe E. Jensen, head filer at a sawmill here, didn't used to mind the noise so much. His car held a navy ago when he was seven years old.

Last week a surgeon extracted the bean. Jensen said the noise in the filling room was terrific, but the rattle of his car was deafening. Jensen is driving a new car now.

National Figures Discuss Economics

CHEQUERS, Eng., June 8 (AP)—Heinrich Brüning and Ramsay MacDonald, heads of two great nations, strolled arm in arm up and down the walks of Mr. MacDonald's home here Saturday, discussing Germany's position in the maelstrom of world economics.

While the chancellor and the prime minister walked together Arthur Henderson, England's foreign secretary, and Julius Curtius, foreign minister of Germany, sat on a veranda smoking, discussing the same thing.

As the farmer would revise it: Say it with shovels.

Now they're saying Germany is polite as can be in this customs-union controversy because she's depending on Curtius diplomacy.

The dagger look, says the office scribe, is often more eloquent than the sharp retort.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

Thinks War and Race Prejudice Are Necessary

LONDON, June 8 (AP)—Man's dream of a world without war can never come true, Sir Arthur Keith, the British scientist, said Saturday in an address at Aberdeen university where he is the rector.

"Nature keeps her human orchard healthy by pruning," he said, "and war is her pruning hook. We cannot dispense with her services."

That "harsh and repugnant" assertion was wrung from him, he said, even though the future of his own dreams is a time of everlasting peace. Even race prejudice has its place in the development of mankind, he said.

"I am convinced," he said, "that these inborn dislikes must be given an assigned place. The human race is like a British football league with divisions of white and yellow, black and brown, between which no transfers are possible."

"Nature endowed her tribal teams with a spirit of antagonism for her own purposes. In up it creeps out as national rivalries and jealousies. The modern name for that spirit of antagonism is race prejudice."

Indian Acquitted Of Attack Charge

SEATTLE, June 8 (AP)—Hugh Smith, Neah Bay, Indian, was acquitted Saturday by a federal jury, of attacking Mrs. James Gould, a white woman, on an Indian reservation. Smith had been convicted in a previous trial, but an appeal to the U. S. district court of appeals, won him a rehearing.

$225,000 Building Program Planned

PORTLAND, Ore., June 8 (AP)—Major General John L. De Witt, quartermaster general of the army, said here Saturday he will recommend immediate construction of buildings costing nearly $225,000 at Vancouver barracks in Washington.

A laundry building to cost $40,000 will be recommended, and plans call for sixteen duplex homes to house non-commissioned officers. These will cost $180,000.

The News Used To Be

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP)—Revision of the German reparations settlement was advocated Saturday by Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee.

Senator Borah, who conferred recently with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson on the European situation, also joined the president in criticizing heavy expenditures on armaments.

Columbia Gorge Fog No Longer Menaces

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP)—Fliers on the Salt Lake-Seaside airway need no longer fear fog hanging over the Columbia River gorge.

Instead of battling heavy clouds high in the air they now can descend to the gorge, flying through what is virtually a tunnel for 60 miles.

The airways division of the commerce department recently announced the placing of 21 lights on each side of the gorge low enough to guide airmen under an altitude of 250 feet, which often is the ceiling in this section. One side of the gorge is marked with green lights, the other with red.

The announcement said fog frequently blankets the surrounding area, but that wind currents in the lower part of the gorge keep it free from fog, enabling airmen to cover the distance when fog lifts over the top would be impossible.

MAD PURSUIT

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

Chapter 23
NORA INTERVENES

THE little red brick house began to take on a Bohemian air. There were innumerable canvases stacked against the walls which, however, no one was allowed to look at. There were armchairs being stretched, paint brushes in jars.

At midnight Julian would tell the family he was starving and they would troop down the stairs to cook impromptu meals which he would enliven with stories of adventure.

How still it was here in the little wood. She sank down beside a tiny white flower, soothed by the deep peace of the woods.

and told Damen I was a tramp. Her eyes blazed black as she poured out the accumulated feeling of all these weeks. There was nothing she spared him, accusing him of pride and treachery.

"If you lend him money I never want to see you again. Never!"

A Dove Street trolley was coming along and she darted out and swung up on the front seat beside the brakeman. The conductor had to ask her twice before she knew that he was demanding her fare. She was still trembling violently. Jon would not spare her father in his headstrong willfulness. For her father would be held up to ridicule, and that was the one thing he could not face.

The car had long since passed Dove Street. She was startled to find she had reached the end of the line. She got off and began to walk rapidly toward the woods, trying to run away from the thought that she had showed Jon just how she felt toward him. But he followed her. He would always follow her like this, through the empty days and dreams, her work, her laughter.

How still it was here in the little wood. She sank down beside a tiny white flower, soothed by the deep peace of the woods.

"Nora, haven't you known... I love you?" Jon asked.

He entertained them with such vivid plans for their future that Nora was disturbed. Although he assured her he would not ask Jon for money, she knew his promise meant less than nothing.

She swallowed her pride toward the end of the week and telephoned Jon to ask him to meet her at the office after five.

It was a warm sunny afternoon and the streets were crowded as she came down the wooden stairs. Jon was waiting for her. Her heart rose as she saw how splendid he looked in his gray flannels.

"I had to see you," she began directly. "I don't know how to tell you—but if my father should ever ask you for money," she drew a deep breath, "you must not lend it to him."

"You've seen him again?" She stood still and, lifting her spirited face, defied him with all her pride.

"Yes, why not? I like him enormously," he smilingly answered. "Don't ask why. Only I beg you not to lend him money!"

"I've given him my word I would. Besides you don't know your father's plan. He wants to exhibit his pictures."

She burned with shame. She must tell him that her father's pictures would only hold him up to ridicule. He would only be laughed at.

"Jon, you mustn't do this!" she cried with a dreadful earnestness. "Why?"

"I know what my father has done."

"But, Nora, his pride has been hurt. He wants to show us all that his work is esteemed by the critics. The show will do this for him."

"Isn't there anything I can say to make you stop before it's too late?" She lifted stormy blue eyes, dazzling with tears.

"I am doing this for you," he said stubbornly.

"You have never done anything for me, not from the first day when you took me to the Thayer house
