RAIN COMES

TO MOISTEN DRY LANDS

Huntington at Bend was struck by a heavy bolt. Mrs. Huntington was shocked, a picture on the wall was shattered and a fire started on the roof. The fire was quickly quenched.

Fire Near Albany
Down in the Santiam forest near Albany more than 50,000 feet of valuable timber was destroyed by a forest fire which raged Saturday and Sunday before it was finally brought under control. The fire, caused by a cigaret, carelessly thrown, was confined principally to the Marion county side of the North Santiam. It covered about 125 acres of forest land.

At Salem a 21-day period of drought was broken in the early morning hours today when .09 of an inch of rain fell. Agricultural interests welcomed the precipitation, which appeared to be of some benefit to some fruits, but not of sufficient volume to damage strawberries, the earlier varieties of which are about past their seasonal peak. Cherries, the first of which will be harvested in commercial quantities next week, so far appeared undamaged. Occasional showers during the rest of the day were in prospect.

Christian Science Church Election

BOSTON, June 9 (AP)—Robert E. Buffum of Belmont, Mass., was elected president of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, at the annual meeting here yesterday. George Shaw Cook of Chicago, and Mrs. Elizabeth P. Norwood of Brookline, Mass., began the last year of their three-year terms as first and second reader, respectively.

Mr. Buffum is a native of Keene, N. H., and has been practicing attorney in Boston for many years.

Pendleton Officers May Not Get Money

LOS ANGELES, June 9 (AP)—A motion to set aside the $10,000 federal court judgment against Los Angeles awarded to two Pendleton, Ore., officers for the arrest of William Edward Hickman was taken under advisement by Federal Judge W. P. James yesterday.

Judge James had ordered the city to pay the reward to T. B. Gurdane and C. L. Lualaba, officers who apprehended Hickman, slayer of Marion Parker. Hickman was caught near Pendleton.

BANKS FAIL TO OPEN

CHICAGO, June 9 (AP)—Twelve south side banks, all members of the John Bain group, closed their doors today.

The banks, all small neighborhood institutions, had combined deposits of $15,445,000 and total resources of $21,000,000 in the last financial statement.

RAIN AT GRANTS PASS

GRANTS PASS, Ore., June 9 (AP)—A trace of rain fell here early today. Cool, cloudy weather prevailed.

LIGHT SHOWERS AT ROSEBURG

ROSEBURG, Ore., June 9 (AP)—Light showers were experienced by Roseburg and vicinity last night and early today. The weather remained cool and cloudy this morning.

1930, Called 'Bad Year', Gave Work To Forty Million

million trucks on the job, too. It made and sold a new automobile for each ten families at a cost of $2,150, 600,000, and saw registrations highest of any year, with a gasoline consumption of 399 million barrels, an all-time record. It saw electrical production hit its highest mark.

"Nineteen hundred and thirty manufactured four and a half billion yards of textiles, and 315 million pairs of shoes, the nation two and a half pairs to the person.

"It provided work for forty-two million men and women, and earnings through dividends to the amount of $4,500,000,000.

"Nineteen hundred and thirty saw to it that expenses of living did not exceed income, as evidenced by hundreds of millions of dollars increase in savings banks and eighteen and a half billions of new life insurance.

"Nineteen hundred and thirty added one million in population to our consuming public—a city the size of Cleveland.

"With all its faults, 1930 furnished a national market-place where goods, services and labor were exchanged to the extent of 100 billion dollars, and the returns are not all in yet."

That, then, is part of the epitaph of 1930. When you compare it with the present notion that our economic system has utterly collapsed, you can determine for yourselves which of the two gives a more reasonable and balanced view of our present economic situation.

Coast Leaguers Tackle 3-Game Series Today

By The Associated Press

A three game series which ends Thursday when the teams change opponents for the remainder of the week is on tap for the Pacific coast league this week. Play is resumed tonight after Monday's off day while the teams traveled.

Last week's series resulted in Hollywood and Portland strengthening their hold on first and second places respectively. The Missions retained a hold on third place and Los Angeles on fourth.

The Seattle Indians, who have come out of a long losing streak, have moved into sixth place, right behind the fifth place San Francisco Seals. Oakland, whose games the past two weeks have resulted in many defeats and only a few wins, has dropped to eighth and last place, the position occupied so long by Seattle in previous weeks. Sacramento is in seventh place, just a step behind the Indians but quite a ways ahead of Oakland.

Hollywood and Portland open the three game series playing at Hollywood tonight, but the Beavers cannot overtake the leaders even though they win all three games. Seattle plays at San Francisco; the Missions go to Sacramento, and Los Angeles will oppose Oakland at Emeryville. All games are night games.

MURDER CHARGES FILED AGAINST DEPUTY SHERIFFS

sage from President Hoover expressing regret over the killing of Emilio Cortes Rubio, a relative of the president, and Manuel Gomez, at Ardmore, Okla., yesterday.

Ambassador R. J. Clark delivered the note to Senator Ortiz Rubio with a statement of his own regret and that of the state department. He later made similar representations to the foreign office.

Emilio Cortes Rubio is a son of a cousin of the Mexican president. Headlines in Mexico City's newspapers this morning referred to the killings as brutal and barbarous.

"I want to the doctor—not Fergus—I didn't dare let him know. And he said—he said," Fran went on, still leaning against the railing, "that I must go away. To the mountains. He advised Arizona. He might as well have told me to go to the mountains of the moon."

They walked on through the burning heat of the sultry July afternoon.

Brutal realities poking their heads up through the wonder of her dreams. But this couldn't happen to Fran. It couldn't.

"Fran, couldn't you go away? We could manage with the children. I could get home earlier, I think. Fran was considering how she could scrimp and save. "And I'll ask old Dusenbury for more money. We can manage."

"But haven't you seen," Fran asked with a quietness that was more desperate than anything she had yet said, "that Mother isn't as strong as she was? I don't know how much longer she'll be able to keep it up."

"But Hallie's writing now," Nora cried, clutching at a straw. "Hallie's last story came back." They said nothing more the rest of the way home. The torrid summer sunshine, the pavements that seemed to burn the soles of their feet, the little patches of grass in front of the houses on Dove Street seemed to blacken before Nora's discouraged eyes.

"But there must be some way out, Fran!" Nora whispered. "There should be," Fran answered through pale lips, "but I can't find it."

Nora needed her father now to reassure her that their fortune would be made. But when she climbed to the attic room she found that he was out. And on his bureau was one of his pictures. A purple hill that seemed to topple

Monday, the latter is from the Bow and Arrow stables at Dayton. Will Collett, a local horse trainer by the name of Thomas, is closely related to Man of War and shows some of his racing spirit. This year's show will see the highest class of race horses ever assembled on the grounds.

To Show Ponies
The Shetland ponies shown by the M. S. Levy barn, and driven by their youthful drivers, will be no small feature of the parade that starts each day at one o'clock. Under the careful grooming of Dave C. Couper and with a special macel taken on a real artistic appearance. Another part of the parade that will not be overlooked, especially by the youngsters, is Homer and his trick mule. He hasn't divulged who are his trick riders that are to help in his clown stunts, but he promises some new variations in his entertainment this year.

All day yesterday and today herds of the finest cattle and sheep in Eastern Oregon have been arriving at the grounds and stalls have been decorated by the owners of the herds. In addition to the herds that were brought in yesterday three splendid exhibits of Aberdeen Angus purebreeds have arrived from the following herds: I. C. Page of Enterprise, Guttridge of Prairie City, and Riley and Son of McEwin. Kooch and son of Enterprise have brought a full car of stock.

A public address car will be used all three days to announce all events and advertise special features in addition to furnishing music for the show.

MAD PURSUIT

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: When Nora Lake delays going to live with the Theatricals, she is left alone with her Aunt Emily and cousin, Frances and Halie, girls her. Though surrounded by their household, of which young Dr. More is a part, her heart leans toward the handsome, Nicholas, brother of her late husband, Nicholas, rescues the situation. Her courage for new life makes her overlook the dislike of Damon, Nicholas' step-sister, and Jon's abominable, and then, unexpectedly, her father, Julian, appears, at once trying to borrow money from Jon. The humiliated Nora warns Jon, who tells her he has agreed to finance an exhibition of Halie's paintings, which she knows are worthless. Their resulting bitter quarrel ends, however, in a loving embrace.

toward an impossible blue river, with a hot red house beside it. She could not bear to look at it. Julian thought he could sell pictures like this!

But there must be some way out. There must be. Jon... she longed to see him, to feel the reassurance of his gayety.

The others were sitting out under the horse chestnut tree when Nora went to Fergus' office. It was the first time she had ever gone in of her own accord. She sat in the tiny waiting room with its hard wooden chairs against the walls, staring at the bowl of petunias that Fran had doubtless picked for him. Nora's turn came at last. Fergus asked her to sit down and Nora felt here and now she would find the way out. He listened while she told him about Fran. His bent head did not even move. But when at last he lifted his eyes she saw such anguish there, that her own lips quivered.

"You will do something, won't you? You will save her?" He walked over to the window and looked down into the hot street.

"I've been cudgelling my brain to find a way out," he said at last. "Fran has been getting so thin. I told her she must get away. But she wouldn't leave the children."

Nora was on her feet. She cried fiercely: "It's all so horribly unjust. Your life, your very happiness, depends on money!"

He turned about and began to walk up and down his office. He did not seem to hear her.

"There's a sanatorium up in the mountains. The doctor who runs it is a friend of mine. I think I could get Fran in there."

"But the money—"

"Well, I've been saving to go to Germany," he told her. "Not that that matters. Not that anything matters."

In all the time that she had known him, Nora had never seen Fergus anything but hopeful. How patient he had been when the baby was born—faithful always! And now that Fran had to go away, he would be willing to sacrifice for her the sum he had wrangled from his poverty. Her heart was stirred in admiration as she stood there waiting for Fergus to continue.

"But there's another thing," he went on. "Hallie won't be able to care for the children. And her mother is doing all she can now."

Nora sat down suddenly. For he was watching her now. She twisted about in the chair and laid her cheek against its back. She could not take care of Dickie and Alice. He couldn't ask her to do that. At any other time. But not now. Not now.

"Well?" Fergus said. He was waiting for her answer; and she felt torn in two. She and Jon were going to be married. At once. As soon as her father's show was launched. They were going away without a word to anyone. She had to get away from this cramped and pitiful red brick house. She forgot at that moment all the times they had laughed together and planned together, flung out their dreams, shared their disappointments.

No, she could not stay here now. Life was growing too bitter in the red brick house, Fergus stood there waiting for her answer, his velvety dark brows drawn together, his eyes on her clasped hands. But she must be free. It was her life and she would not sacrifice it. Sacrifice was an out-worn ideal. After all what did she owe to them? They had taken her in when she came home, alone, but they would have taken in any stranger.

"You know what it will mean, don't you?" Fergus' voice was harsh as he went relentlessly on driving in the truth. "You'll have to give up much that you have now. Other friends, perhaps. But I'll help you all I can."

"I can't do it," she cried. "I can't! I don't care what you think of me. I know I'm selfish. But it's my life and I'm going to live it."

He smiled a little wistfully as he continued to look at her. "Your life?" he asked. "Does it matter so much?"

"It matters to me. Dreadfully. I won't be tied down. I won't be an old maid in this old house, always remembering what I might have had. It isn't my fault, is it, that this all happened? I'm going to be happy and nothing—nothing can stop me."
