TWO KINDS OF EDUCATION

A great deal of unnecessary furore seems to have been raised by the decision of Yale university to drop Latin and Greek from the list of required subjects for undergraduates.

For a long time we have been demanding that education be "practical"; and Latin and Greek, undoubtedly, are not in that classification.

Yet these subjects will remain on the curriculum, and such students as attend college in the hope of getting some genuine culture can still take them.

After all, why does a young man go to college? A desire for social prestige and a belief that a degree will boost his future earning power probably account for many enrollments.

To these youngsters it will make no difference whether or not they "have to" study Latin or Greek. They want to study them; a desire to get acquainted with the mighty literature of those languages is one of the things that got them into college in the first place.

WORLD AIR CONNECTIONS

What are the established air facilities throughout the world? Two Japanese are setting out from Tokyo to find the answer to this question, and to learn how quickly an ordinary traveler can go around the world by using every available air service.

It isn't the usual type of round-the-world race. No special planes will be chartered to meet ships and trains. Connections that any regular traveler would be able to make are what the Japanese will seek.

This should be an interesting and informing trip and a report of their experiences will be awaited with interest.

Says Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce: "One may hesitate to forecast, but as far as one can judge the indications of business activity, there is trend for some improvement."

The June economic bulletin of the National City Bank of New York has a diagram representing four authoritative indexes of the volume of business for the first four months of this year.

People often will give three cheers for something they wouldn't give anything else for.

In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP)—Six months in the United States senate has convinced "Puddler Jim" Davis of Pennsylvania that he would rather be a senator than a member of the president's cabinet.

For nine years, in the last chair at the table, close to the fireplace, he sat in the deliberations of the cabinet. Three presidents, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, have looked down that table at the stocky, white haired, brown eyes man who sat as secretary of labor.

WONT EMULATE KNOX

Philippine Chase Knox, also of Pennsylvania, shuttled from cabinet to senate until it was hard to tell which was his first choice.

"Then, too, I wanted vindication of my labor policies by an election in the labor state of Pennsylvania. And besides, the senate is one of the nicest things a man can aspire to."

"They're too often and too good. I've got a poodler's appetite. And after one of those state dinners, I would have to go all day without eating, sleep from getting as big as my desk."

But he admits the lessons he learned on the executive side of the administration are coming in handy in the legislative field.

An labor secretary he dealt with personal problems—the separation of families through immigration laws, working conditions of women, working hours of children, the psychological state of strike mediation, the tragedy of unemployment.

And he has discovered that the work of the legislature is closely woven with the same sort of definite human problems.

Chats With Parents

FOR SUMMER PLAY By Alice Jackson Peale The country is, of course, the ideal place for children in the summer.

The quiet woods, empty beach day after day offer an infinite field for the young child who never is permitted to get far out of sight it may be rather barren.

All little children, no matter where they are, should have a sand-box or a sand pile during the summer months. Tin cups, long handled spoons, strainers and small pots from the kitchen are the most satisfactory sand toys.

The city child who has learned how to get the best possible fun out of the restricted opportunities of his backyard and street is often at a loss for getting the most out of a summer in the country.

Walks with someone who knows something of the strange and wonderful things in brook and pond and field and wood across the child's curiosity and give him a living contact with the new world about him.

Joseph, George Cherry, and Orval J. Milford, of Esteryport, returned to Mr. and Mrs. T. T. They will return on Thursday accompanied by their son, Thorsten Shell, who has just finished his junior year at the state university.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Gray, of Esteryport, plan to move into the Maxwell home in a few days. Mr. Gray is the manager of the Community Meat market here.

Health

TREATING HYPERTENSION Every case of hypertension, or high blood pressure, as it is often called, should be under competent medical treatment.

Treatment be it medical, dietetic or hygienic must be prescribed individually for each case, on the basis of a careful study for one man's remedy may be another man's ruin.

There are, however, a number of general points of hygiene by which all those who suffer from no matter what type of high blood pressure may benefit.

First among these hygienic rules comes the mental attitude of the patient.

Worry has never been known to benefit or cure a case of hypertension.

On the contrary, it is more likely to raise the blood pressure.

Raywood, Brown, the columnist, reports that one doctor told him his blood pressure was too low.

He immediately went across town to another physician, who found his blood pressure a little too high. Worry did that!

High blood pressure does not promote, but it is not incompatible with long life.

Rest, in full measure, is of great value in hypertension. While in severe conditions a week's rest or more in bed may be required, the average hypertension patient may secure added rest by merely avoiding undue physical exertion.

In other words, he may profit by merely "taking things easy."

On the other hand, a certain amount of exercise is also good for the hypertension patient.

Thus it is best for him to keep active, but not to the point of fatigue.

A special diet is required in certain types of high blood pressure.

The News

Used To Be

SPokane, Wash., June 16 (AP)—A. R. Shumway, Milton, Ore., is the new president of North Pacific Grain Growers, Inc., northwest regional marketing cooperative. He defeated F. J. Wilmer, Rosalia, Wash., who sought re-election last night.

Wilmer's defeat came as a surprise to many stockholders who predicted his re-election, but it was expected, directors said, because of his unsuccessful fight against direct marketing between local units and the Farmers' National Grain corporation, key asset in the set-up. The directors accepted his plan recently and stockholders adopted it yesterday.

Other officers are: Victor R. Hyslop, Deep Creek, Wash., vice president; and Albert C. Adams, Spokane, treasurer. Re-election of a secretary-manager was deferred.

The following directors were re-elected: F. J. Wilmer; W. J. Sutton, Cheney, Wash.; Orris Dorman, Lacrosse, Wash.; V. R. Hyslop; A. C. Linham, Genesee, Idaho; R. B. McCallister, Kalispell, Mont.; J. W. Swazey, Waukegan, was elected to the board to succeed O. T. Cornwall, who declined re-election.

Added to Language "Vitaphone" is a coined word derived from vita, meaning life, and phone, meaning sound.

STITCHED ORGANDY TAKES PLACE OF LACE PARIS (AP)—Stitched organdy is a new fashionable fancy used instead of lace this season. Many black or dark blue street frocks are trimmed with ruchings or flat roses made of stitched crisp organdy. The organdy is so fine that wherever it is stitched, the threads pull, giving it hem-stitched lacy appearance.
