NEW CONCERN EXPRESSED IN WASHINGTON

against alleged bandits in Manchuria were announced by a spokesman for the war office today as reports were received of fighting in which one Japanese and 14 Chinese were killed, and several wounded.

A dispatch to the Rengo news agency from Tientsin, China, said the Chinchow situation has become acute. The Japanese residents of Shianhai were decided to evacuate the city and retire to Tientsin.

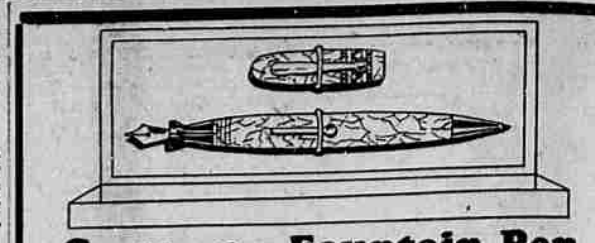

Drive Against Bandits. The new military campaign, the war office spokesman said, will be a drive against bandits in the area of the South Manchurian railway, particularly the region west of the Liao river. This is the territory just north of Chinchow in which the Japanese drive against that place was halted last month.

At the time the announcement was made the reports of fighting were received and also reports that bandits are unusually active around Changchun, Heilintun and other points.

Field Marshal Prince Kotohito Kan-in was selected today as chief of the army general staff to succeed General Kanzo Kanaya. It is the first time since the Russo-Japanese war that a prince of the royal blood has received the post. Prince Kotohito is a kinsman of Emperor Hirohito. Local newspapers said he agreed to accept.

The appointment was made with the intention of unifying and consolidating military affairs throughout Manchuria. Prince Kotohito is 66 years old.

Civil Government to Rule. Reports were current here that the government wished to establish a central Manchurian organization, linking together the civil and military phases of Manchurian relations. The reports were officially unverified, but it was said the plans called for four departments, under the civil governor of Kwantung, the president of the the South Manchurian railway zone. "Therefore our army has been obliged to decide on carrying out an expedition to suppress banditry throughout the entire area, and particularly in the district west of the Liao."

Official circles, however, expressed the hope, as the order for the new drive was issued, that Marshall Chang would withdraw his Chinchow garrison within the great wall, forestalling the possibility of a collision.
