LADD CANYON PERSONALS

By Mrs. Charles Grandy (Observer Correspondent)
LADD CANYON (Special)—The annual community Christmas tree and program was given at the schoolhouse here Christmas eve, with nearly the entire population present. The beautiful tree was laden with presents, candy, nuts and oranges for the youngsters and also many gifts for the teacher, Mrs. Joe Diehl from the school pupils. The school children gave an excellent program consisting of six plays, four songs and four recitations. The recitations were by Ethel Cross, Essie Jones, Mabel Austin and Lillian McClure, H. A. Fager and son, Fred, and Edward Counsel gave musical numbers on the violin, guitar and piano, between acts of the plays.

H. E. Cross, who was in the Grande Ronde hospital for two weeks because of a broken leg, was able to be home on Christmas with his children, although he had to be propped up in bed. The children's mother is dead and they were delighted to have their father home again.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Pebler spent Christmas day at the home of Mrs. Pebler's mother, Mrs. Fred Synhorst.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Counsell were with Mrs. Counsell's mother, Mrs. Frank McClure, on Christmas.

Francis and Donovan Beale drove to Freewater to spend Christmas with relatives. They planned on visiting a few days with friends before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Furgason had a turkey dinner on Christmas day. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Halley and son, Jim, were guests.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pebler entertained at dinner on Christmas, their guests being Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Johnson, of Cove, and Mrs. Clara Allen, of La Grande.

Most of Mr. and Mrs. William Beaton's children gathered at their home for supper on Christmas night. There were present Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pool and Eugene and "Bill" Banton, all of Ladd Canyon, Mr. and Mrs. William Winburn and daughter, Velma, Lela and Florence, of La Grande.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. Beale were dinner guests on Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tuck Conley, where there was a large gathering. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ewin had Christmas dinner at Mrs. Ewin's mother's, Mrs. Alderman, near Island City.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Grandy ate their Christmas dinner at the home of Mr. Grandy's sister, Mrs. Joie Mills, in La Grande.

TATTOO MARKS
Beauty and tattoo marks are only skin deep, but even as the first is hard to acquire, so is the second hard to get rid of.

The youthful adventurer may think of the bleeding heart, the full rigged ship or the hissing serpent as an essential decoration of the free roaming soul.

Time, however, has a settling effect upon most things.

And so, later when the glitter of adventure has been somewhat tarnished by experience, the erstwhile adventurer is liable to find his tattoo marks as bright as ever.

The bleeding heart or full rigged ship, once the badge of the roaming soul, may become an embarrassment at the seashore, or wherever brassy arms are bared.

Efforts will then be made to remove the tattoo marks. However, the task is not a simple one.

Each particle of color originally deposited must now be removed, one by one.

The task is trying both to patient and physician.

It is a somewhat hazardous job, too, and should not be entrusted to anyone but a skilled dermatologist.

Even so, there may be left at the site of the tattoo marks minute white scars, in the place of the color or grains.

Thus, even when the color has been removed, the design may be revealed under close inspection, though not as brilliant as before.

Sometimes it may prove easier and less objectionable to obliterate the tattoo picture by added markings, than to attempt its removal.

One must guard against so-called tattoo bleaching solutions, or liquids sold for self application.

Practically all such solutions consist of corrosive substances which when used destroy all the underlying skin.

These solutions are liable to give rise to ugly ulcers, which, in healing leave behind them disfiguring scars.

America's Oldest Race Track
In 1785 Kentucky's first race track was built, near Lexington, and the first jockey club was organized. This track was abandoned long ago, but the Kentucky race track, established in Lexington in 1820, is the oldest track now in use in America.

Orchards Need Windbreak
In Argentina heavy winds from all directions occur in the chief apple and pear section, and orchards are planted with a windbreak of poplars all around. Apple trees usually are planted 19 to 25 feet apart, and pears 19 by 19 feet.

Tacism
Among the virtues of Tacism are: Contentment, frugality, simplicity, non-resistance, sincerity, love, justice, reverence and wisdom.

Old Roman Law Code
The Twelve Tables are the tables of wood on which was engraved or painted the earliest codification of the Roman law. Originally ten in number, two others were afterward added, containing supplemental matter, and the whole code was termed the Lex XII Tabularum (Law of the Twelve Tables).

British Standard Measure
An Imperial quart is the measure of a quart as appointed by statute to be used throughout the United Kingdom. The standard is also adopted by the other nations forming the British federation.

SUNSET PASS by Zane Grey

Chapter 25
ROCK WEARS HIS GUN-BELT
FOUR days passed, days full of hard labor for Rock and pondering thought, and slow absorbing adaptation to the most difficult and strangest situation he had ever encountered.

Early at breakfast and late at supper he saw Thiry and then only to exchange a greeting. He did not look to see if she looked at him, though curiosity and longing consumed him.

By doing most of the fence work he made himself more than solid with the three brothers, particularly Al, who had taken a strong liking to him.

Opportunity would some day come for him to ride down to the old well on Slagle's ranch, and find out what was in it. He persuaded himself that he wanted to have plenty of time and be perfectly safe to pursue his investigations, but as a matter of fact he really was reluctant to find material proof of the Preston's guilt.

Rock dreamed as well as thought while at work, and every day seemed to make more certain the thing that had transformed him.

On the fifth morning Al remarked, laconically, "Was sure gotta hustle today, for Pa will be home."

"Why the particular hustle today, Al?" queried Rock.

"Pa has a way of slipping up on us, an' it'd never do to be ketch'd loafin'. He wouldn't let us go to the rodeo and dance on the Fourth."

"I'd forgotten about that," rejoined Rock, with enthusiasm. "Are all the folks goin'?"

"Pa and Ma ain't goin', but sure the rest of us Prestons are."

"Includin' Ash?" asked Rock, casually.

"He never missed one yet that Thiry went to—last waga a dance. Al and the kids will stop at Leslie's. Thiry said she was goin' to Wint's. Reckon you'll ride in with us? We aim to start on the first, so's to get in the day before the Fourth."

"I'll ask your dad," returned Rock, thoughtfully. It would be very much better, perhaps, for him to remain on the ranch. Yet the urge held him, persuasively at first, and then, augmented by a very contrary spirit, it grew compelling.

He could look on at the rodeo, and take just a peep in at the dance, to see Thiry in a party dress. But then he would be certain to see her in the arms of some moonstruck cowboy. That sent a hot tingle through Rock—an unfamiliar sensation. It was his introduction to jealousy.

"Reckon, on second thought, I will go," he said to Al, and certain it was that this sudden, almost involuntary decision made him realize how far he was from knowing his self.

Late in the afternoon the brothers left off work and rode home. This time Rock went with them.

They reached the barns, to ascertain that Ash and the others had not yet come in. Rock, after caring for his horse, slowly sauntered up the slope to his cabin, finding himself subservient to an oppressive mood. What had he done with Egypt? And over against this cold speculation, with its incalculable possibilities, balanced the warmth of his assurances to Thiry. How could he fall her? Yet, equally impossible—how could he be otherwise than True Rock?

While he was soberly debating the matter, and cleaning up for supper, he heard the clip-clop of trotting horses, then a rattle of wheels. With a start he went to the door. Scoot Preston was driving up on the seat of a big empty wagon. Two more wagons had topped the slope. Soon they halted before the cabins. Rock waited for riders to appear. And he was not disappointed. The burly form of the older Preston hove in sight, riding a roan and leading two saddle-horses. A little afterward, eight of Ash on Egypt shot a quick stab through Rock. The next instant he relaxed. The white horse appeared tired, but none the worse for the absence.

"Aw!" exclaimed Trueman, aloud, and his relief told him just how much he had cared—how he had absolutely put thought of Egypt from him. "Reckon I might as well go out and get it over."

But first he went inside. While pondering over how best to meet this situation and still be true to Thiry, he had buckled on his gun-belt. Suddenly the fact dawned on him, and he laid hard hands on the belt buckle. But he got no farther. There was more here to be true to than Thiry Preston; there was the code of the West. He had no right to face this vicious unknown problem. Ash Preston, without being armed.

Whereupon he strolled out leisurely. As he came in sight of the arriving Prestons, halfway between the cabins, Gage espied him, and with a start he wheeled about from the family, who were welcoming him, to dismount like any cowboy, and hurried to intercept Rock. He drew near, his deep gray eyes betrayed considerable anxiety.

"Wal, Rock, how are you?" was his greeting, accompanied by extended hand. "The boys say you-all got on fine. I'm sure glad."

"Howdy, boss!" returned Rock, cordially. "We got the fence job 'most done."

"Hat! You don't say? Wal, I'll be dog-goned. How'd you ever get that out of them?"

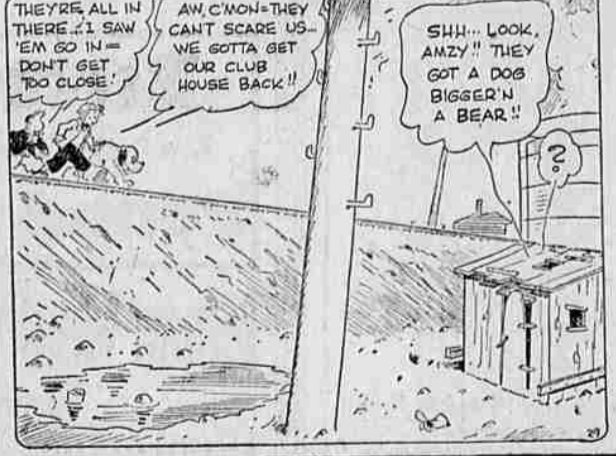

Preston fell in step with Rock, though it was significant that he kept a couple of yards distant. Rock replied with good humor, somewhat subsiding the young Prestons. In this manner they approached the double cabin, where on the wide porch were collected the women and children. Ash was the only one of the returning brothers who got down on the ground. His movement was almost stealthy. Perhaps more significant than his father's action was his slow step forward and to one side.

(Copyright, Zane Grey.)
Ash stands on guard. Rock advances. The enquiring lighters swiftly, Monday.
