HEALTHY

Among the distressing consequences of previous re-adjustment periods was a decided increase in disease and the death rate. People weakened by undernourishment and suffering from exposure fall easy prey to disease, and though there may have been few deaths due directly to starvation, lack of adequate food, clothing and fuel was responsible for a great many deaths.

The present situation is exacting no such terrible price. The year 1930 broke all preceding public-health records in the United States, and 1931 has equalled, if it did not do better, than the record for 1930. There has been less disease and the mortality rate has dropped.

President Hoover a year ago pointed out as an encouraging feature of the dislocation the improvement in public health. He recognized in it evidence that there has been little actual starvation or exposure and that the medical needs of the unemployed were being met by doctors, hospitals and welfare agencies.

For the absence of serious epidemics, lessened disease and lower mortality rate society is indebted to medical science, more competent physicians and surgeons, and a more efficient public health service. These have not broken down.

Here is one of the best answers to the short-sighted cry that the American economic system has broken down and must be radically altered. It is not a perfect system, but where is there another that has carried a great nation through trying times with as little suffering and hardship?

ARMAMENTS

University and college students in the United States are not pacifists, neither are they militarists. They are for preparedness up to the point of safety and for disarmament down to the absolute minimum demanded by the requirements of adequate national defense.

This is disclosed by a poll of the students at a number of representative institutions. At Yale only 107 voted for continued heavy armaments; 1,269 favored moderate armament; 987 were for complete disarmament. Some would have the United States disarm irrespective of the action of other nations.

Dartmouth's poll was 76 for heavy armament, 226 for a 50 per cent arms cut and 309 for total disarmament. These figures are representative of the results obtained everywhere.

The student mind is not mature, but it is probably better informed in international matters than the average man on the street and certainly can think more clearly than the non-scholastic mind of the same age.

This poll is important, not because it will have great weight in contemporary world affairs, but because it reveals a trend away from competitive armaments. And if that is true in the United States it must be true in the other civilized countries of the world.

Real disarmament and its handmaiden, world peace, will come only when world leaders and the popular majority abandon the old theory that might makes right and international disputes can only be settled by force of arms.

Nothing worries some people more than the fear of getting down and out and having to work for a living.

Among the things that run in all families are shortings.

In Washington

By Robert Bunker

WASHINGTON — Meetings of the Republican and Democratic national committees in the capital to choose their convention cities were significant things that the great controversy of the season of presidential politics was at hand.

But it remained for an announcement appearing in the Evening Republican, Elks organ, how the crowd, purpose of Republicanizing young men and young women to serve the Republican party in its political affairs the real "drive" to effect the job that is now on.

The weekly lessons in campaign speaking will be given young Republicans beginning the first week in January.

That is the way to read it, in cadet fashion that.

. . . So largely, so possible, the course will consist of the presentation and delivery of actual campaign speeches. . . .

Rolls Won't Roll Ballots.

One frequently hears that the secret will eliminate the old political party. Many now think so.

In the 1928 presidential campaign the ballot as a political instrument, actually did not

In 1930 it was old, yet Murray's records show that in that year — an off year — from the western speakers' bureau of the party, more speakers were called for and sent out than in 1924.

JAMES BEVERLY PICKED FOR POST

NOT TO INCREASE RATES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—An indication that first class postal rates will not be increased at this time came today after the house ways and means committee had decided to leave the matter in the hands of the postoffice committee.

Chairman Mead of the postoffice committee predicted his group would not approve the request of Postmaster General Brown to hike the first class postal rates from 2 to 3 cents an ounce.

Mead said other legislation to meet the postoffice department's prospective $150,000,000 deficit would be drafted.

TWO TAX PLANS OUTLINED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Two methods of increasing the government's revenue were outlined today to the house ways and means committee.

Postmaster General Brown, telling of the $150,000,000 deficit confronting the postoffice department, asked that first class postal rates be raised from two to three cents and for a small increase in second class rates.

Two treasury experts gave their opinion that a manufacturers sales tax such as the Canadian system could be used in this country. Their views were based upon a study of the Canadian plan.

The tax brings $44,000,000 annually to Canada, but the experts declined to estimate what might be expected from it in this country.

AGED ELEPHANT BURIED

CINCINNATI, Jan. 20 (AP) — "Tilly" the elephant was buried yesterday. Three of her companions in a circus military act fired a cannon over her grave. A floral tribute was dropped from an airplane. "Tilly" was 120 years old and ranked the world's oldest performing elephant. She weighed 7,000 pounds.

Albany played at Whiteman last night in a conference game but the score had not been learned here today.

The game Thursday will be played at the L. D. S. Recreational hall at 8 o'clock, following a preliminary game at 7 between the Builder town team and the E. O. N. seconds.

In the event that Belts should not be able to play, Halvorson will start at center for the Mountaineers.

ANNUAL SESSION OF COUNTRY CLUB HELD ON TUESDAY

Siegrist, W. C. Perkins and William Siegrist, who will hold office until 1934.

Outgoing directors are Mr. Meyers, C. W. Rongner, M. E. Dixon, C. M. Hollenbeck, M. A. Starbuck and Paul Meyers, the latter having been appointed to fill the vacancy of S. M. Bay, who has moved to Marysville.

It was reported that since last fall 20 Chinese elm trees have been planted on the golf course. The Chinese elm is a tree that makes a rapid growth, has long life and is of fine size. Many of the old trees in the orchard are gradually dying, and it has been the intent to replace these with ornamental trees as rapidly as possible.

Growing New Turf

During the fall year a new watering has been established near the club house, planted with grass obtained from the Walla Walla golf club, and it is estimated that there is enough the three large greens in the park. It is expected that this will develop into splendid turf.

It also was announced that 1932 provides twelve months of golf. Although the golf was played in December that for several years, historically, some of the members played on the course the first Sunday in January this year, and there is a chance to equal last year's record.

SOLDIERS' HOME AT ROSEBURG TO BE HUGE PROJECT

[illegible] of the home will be grouped about a rectangular park on the hill side of the entrance, back about 500 feet from the county road.

The second to be erected, to accommodate about 2000 men south, three above six barracks buildings which will be about 100 by 300 feet, each three stories high with a capacity of 1200 men each.

The hospital buildings are grouped on two sides of a huge oval park to the rear of the west barracks section. There will be general hospitals and three for consumptives. A heating plant, garage, laundry, storehouses, a commissary and other such buildings will be located on the extreme northwest portion of the site.

The map shows the institution as it will look when eventually completed. It is expected to be constructed at about $2,000,000, having been appropriated for the first units, with an initial amount built to reserve for further construction as needed. It was said commercially that these $2,000,000 will be required to complete the institution in accordance with the plans, received here.

It is understood the veterans bureau will advertise for bids for the first unit about Feb. 15, and that construction probably will start in April or May.

Wait Play Used By Culbertson On The Defense

(This is the first of three articles on methods of play demonstrated in the recent Lenz-Culbertson contract bridge match. In most respects the play of the participants was similar. Their methods of bidding differed. Today's article is on a play that is largely Culbertsonian. The next two articles will discuss plays common to all masters and often necessary for success even after proper bidding.)

By Tom O'Neil

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—Bridge sharps who have been giving second thought to principles demonstrated in the Culbertson-Lenz contract match are convinced that at times in playing the cards it is highly profitable to wait before attacking.

Often the side which essays a game contract succeeds or fails through the first lead of an opponent. The wait, which emerges from the match as the one play not generally used by all experts and as successfully demonstrated in most cases by its great proponent, Ely Culbertson, consists of the lead of the highest card of a short suit, a doubleton or tripleton. Time and again it has caused a contract to be set when any other lead would have resulted in the defending side failing to stop game.

When It Is Used

The play is employed when the first player to lead has no guide in the way of a bid by partner, lacks good recentries or holds tenaces, that is suits containing honors not in sequence, such as ace-queen and one or more small, or king-knave and small cards. To lead from such tenaces usually would give a trick to the opponents. It is highly desirable to have the lead come up to the holder of tenaces. In such cases, for instance, the queen would take a trick when otherwise it might not.

A lead from the top of nothing is made with the deliberate intention of giving the first trick to opponents and is used in defending both against trump and no trump contracts. The card led is the highest of the short suit so that partner will not confuse the lead with the standard fourth best of longest suit. For that reason cards above the seven usually are the most desirable for the waiting lead.

Here is a hand illustrating the principle:

North—
S—A Q 10 6 3
H—A 7 4
D—A K Q
C—K 5

West—
S—K J 5
H—K 10 8 6 3
D—9 5 2
C—Q 4

South—
S—9 8 2
H—Q 5 2
D—8 6 3
C—10 6 3 2

East—
S—7 4
H—J 9
D—J 10 7 4
C—A J 9 8 7

North, the dealer, opened with a forcing bid of two spades. South responded with the mandatory two no trump required of a poor hand in answer. North rebid the spades and south went to three no trump, which became the contract. West and east did not bid.

The lead of the nine of diamonds by west caused the contract to be defeated. Any other lead, especially the fourth best heart would enable south to make game.

The short suit lead is not recommended when the original leader has a good suit to establish or knows his partner's best suit or should cash in high cards against a trump contract before the contracting side can make discards. There is danger in failure by partner to recognize suit lead. For instance in the Culbertson-Lenz match Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson could have taken the first five tricks in hearts against a no trump, but each thought the other had a short suit.

NEW SALEM GUN FIGHT WORST IN KENTUCKY ANNALS

wronging their 17-year-old sister, Ruby.

Tells of Mock Wedding

The girl, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Settles, near Connersville, Ind., said she and Willie Johnson were principals in a mock wedding which she thought was legally solemnized. Sheriff W. H. Steele said no charge would be placed against Willie unless further investigation revealed he took part in the shooting.

Kentucky's worst gun battle during the twentieth century heretofore was the Clayhole election shooting in Breathitt county in 1921 in which four men were killed and 17 wounded. Four men were killed and five wounded in the battle of Evarts in Harlan county last May, arising from mine labor troubles. These three shootings, the New Salem, Clayhole and Evarts battles, occurred in Kentucky mountain counties.

Miss Mabel Doty Main Speaker At Club Meet Tuesday

Miss Mabel Doty discussed Oregon authors, illustrating her talk with an exhibit of pictures of the leading writers of the state, yesterday afternoon before the Neighborhood club meeting at the La Grande hotel. Among the books displayed and briefly discussed were "The Enchanted Lake," by Stanton Lapham, a former La Grande resident; "Cabin at the Trail's End" and "West of the Rockies," by Sheba Hargreaves; "Singing in the Rain" and "Feelin' Fine," by Anne Shannon Monroe; "Step of the Painted Bills," by Ruben Marshall.

"The Loop," a novel by 13 Oregon authors which is now appearing in serial form, was discussed by the speaker, but critics believe that it is not typical of Oregon, since such outstanding authors of the state as Anne Shannon Monroe, Albert Wolfen, Ernest Haycox, Kay Cleaver Strahan, Theodore Ashland Harper and Ariel White are omitted.

Among the journalists Miss Doty listed Harvey Scott, Ben Hur Lampman, Phillip Parrish, Fred Lockley and Professor John B. Horner.

A girl, formerly of La Grande, but who is now in New York writing and giving her own monologues, Miss Gwendolyn Skinner, was included among the dramatists of the state by Miss Doty.

Miss Seville Evald played a violin concerto number, accompanied by Miss Barbara Klatt, after which Miss Gertrude Wagner gave an illustration of the type of talks she gives to children of junior high school age as she carries on her work as children's librarian. Among the books which she included in her interesting talk were "Mackenzie in Cedar Lake," by Alfred Powers, "A Country Boy," by Homer Dunnigan, "Before the Covered Wagon," Phillip Parrish; "Silver and Gold" and "The Settler's Cat," by Theodore Ashland Harper and Winifred Harper; "Sweet Water Trail," Sabra Conner, and "Blue Buckle Mine," by Dan Poling, all books by Oregon authors.
