OUT OUR WAY

By J. R. Williams

The local Epworth League is busy making plans for the three-day winter home party for the held here Jan. 29, 30 and 31. Delegates are expected from Baker, Haines, North Powder, Island City, La Grande, Elgin, Enterprise, Joseph, Wallowa and Cove.

All that we can do is to make these weeks available to our children by having them about the house and trying to communicate our own enthusiasm about them.

In buying books for a child, we should be guided chiefly by his shown preferences. If he likes stories of mystery and adventure, let him have as many of them as he likes but they should be the best of their kind.

Most children are quick to appreciate the best of the thing that appeals to them. Stevenson's "Treasure Island" in spite of the fact that it is a required reading in some part of every child's school course, continues to hold its place mostly because it is one of the best pirate stories ever written.

Through familiarity with good examples of the kind of story that he likes, a child's pleasure in reading may be raised from a delight chiefly in what is false and trashy to an appreciation of what is really fine.

At this brooding juncture of Rock's meditations he became aware that Thiry was stirring. She rose from her knees.

"Can you forgive me?" she whispered. "Thiry, you talk nonsense sometimes."

"But I might have shot you." "Sure I thought you were going to."

"I was out of my head. I should have known you would never betray us. . . . My wits were gone. Everything went but a hot terrible fire. Oh, Truman, I am a Preston."

"Well, I reckon I don't want you anybody else."

"Can anything be done to save us?" she queried, appealingly. "It must be done, Thiry. Sure I don't know what. We've got time. I'll find some way."

"Oh, Truman, you are my one hope. To think I've tried to drive you away! . . . How little I know myself. But I do know this—if you stop this selling of stolen beef—if you prevent it before they're arrested—I'll love you with all my heart and soul."

"Darling, I will do it somehow," promised Rock.

"I'll go now," she said, rising, and swaying unsteadily. "I'm glad now you came to Sunset Pass," she whispered. "But you've added to my fears. It's now you, too, who might fall under the Preston shadow."

"Be brave, Thiry. Don't give up. . . . Never lose faith in me. . . . Good night," he concluded, and, loosening her hand, he kissed it and fled silently into the darkness.

Forty-eight hours later Rock rode into Wagon Tongue.

Gage Preston had been more than glad to give him leave of absence, sensing no doubt in Rock something not inimical to his precarious fortunes. In a note to Thiry, Rock explained the reason for his going, importuning her to wait patiently and not to be a victim to imagined evils—that somehow he would find a solution.

When Rock dropped in to see Winter it was not with any definite purpose, but that night he and his old friend locked themselves in a room at the hotel. There were range channels open to Winter to which Rock had no access. The Preston situation was graver—actual accusations had been made, it seemed. But by whom was not manifest.

"Sol, old timer, I'm in deep," said Rock at the conclusion of Winter's confidence, and he opened his palms expressively. "Thiry loves me!"

"Do you know anything that makes Preston's guilt shore?" "Yes, but I promised Thiry not to tell," Rock answered.

"But you can go to Preston an' tell him you know. Scare him to sense."

"Sol, Gage Preston can't call his soul his own. I reckon Ash led him into this and now has got 'em bifalced. Nothing on earth or in heaven can stop Ash Preston."

"Dabb offers a solution to Rock's problem, in Monday's installment. But there are complications for Rock."

"Nothin'" echoed Winter, but the incredulity of the West rang in his sarcasm.

"Nothin' but lead!" "Ahnh! . . . Wal, I never yet seen that kind of a hombre miss meed'n' it. . . . Now, Rock, I've an idea. If Dabb an' Lincoln know what I know—an' it's a good bet they know more—they will tell you. They obviate any broken promise on your part. Dabb is human. Lincoln is the whitest man in these parts. They're both fish an' they're the Cattle Association. Hesbitt is the only president. What Dabb an' Lincoln say is law. . . . Now you go to them."

"But, Sol, good Heavens! What for?"

"If you can get Dabb an' Lincoln to sympathize with you an' Thiry, that'll be sympathizin' with Preston. Ten years ago there was a case somethin' like this. Wal, his friends got him to make good what he'd stole an' saved him from jail. 'n' no more. Preston's case ain't so bad, that's, yet. . . . If you've got the nerve an' the wit you can keep Preston from ruin an' Thiry from a broken heart."

Rock leaped up, inspired, suddenly on fire with the vision Winter's sagacity had conjured up. He pushed aside table and chair and hugged his startled friend.

"Old-timer, I've sure got the nerve and you've supplied the wit."

Rock presented himself at Dabb's office the next morning.

"Hello, Rock!" replied Dabb in answer to his greeting. "Have a chair and a cigar. I've been hopin' you'd run into town."

Dabb appeared cordial. "How's Amy?" queried Rock.

"She was fit as a filly when I saw her last. She went to Denver to visit. Expect her home next week."

"John, I told you I was in love with Thiry. Well, that wasn't so bad. But now she's in love with me. And the situation is hell."

"Man, you've only yourself to blame. You were advised not to go. I myself told you not to stay."

"I loved the girl," replied Rock, simply.

"Humph!" said Dabb, chewing at his cigar. "Rock, some of us cattlemen know you haven't looked for anything shady about Preston."

"How do you know?" asked Rock.

"Well, that question came up the other night at our Association meeting. Hesbitt gave you a hard rub. Over this Preston scandal, Tom Lincoln an' I an' one or two others took exception to Hesbitt. We claimed you not only weren't in with Preston on anything crooked, but you hadn't trailed around lookin' for it. The reason, of course, was you were sweet on Thiry Preston."

"John, that was most damned good of you," returned Rock, warmly. "You an' Lincoln figured that if I had looked for shady work I'd have found it?"

"Sure. We knew that. No out-at-could fool you."

"Well, what then?" "Not so easy. But personally I believe you'd have come to me for advice an' help."

"I don't know that I'd have presumed so far," went on Rock.

"What's worryin' you now, Rock?" "Hesbitt's outfits are after Preston," replied Rock, and he gave Dabb a detailed account of Dunne's maneuver at the Notch camp and what had come of it.

"You dared that foreman Dunne to throw his gun?" exclaimed Dabb, gravely.

"I sure did."

"Rock, that was a bold move an' a wise one. I'm darn glad you told me this. Reckon it didn't seem important to you—that I knew—for you'd have told it quick. But it is important."

"How so?" asked Rock, curiously.

"Well, in the first place it vindicates Lincoln an' me in our stand for you. An' it'll stump Hesbitt."

"Ahnh! Then this new rancher is dead set against Preston?"

"Is he? Well, I guess. An' he has his outfits 'arin' . . . Now, Rock, the strange thing is Hesbitt has been losin' a good deal of stock most Half Moon brand—an' his men can't locate them. Hide nor hair! . . . But other men have!"

"Dabb, what're you tellin' me?"

"Abouted Rock, ferociously."

"Rock, now listen. You once rode for Jim Slagle. Preston ruined Slagle. An' Slagle has hung around out there to get even. Reckon he's in a fair way to do it. For he has tracked the Prestons down."

"Aw, this's awful!" groaned Rock. "Jim Slagle. . . . An' he has tracked Preston down? What to, John?"
