FEAR AND HORROR
By Alice Johnson Peale
I remember that when I was a small child my nurse frequently read to me from a book designed at once to amuse the young and to impress upon them the need for obedience.

Produced Intense Cold

Prof. W. H. Keesom, physicist of the cryogenic laboratory at the university of Leyden, Netherlands, accomplished in 1929 the difficult and hazardous feat of solidifying helium gas at -458.58 below zero, Fahrenheit, or approximately 273.1 degree below zero, Centigrade.

Children's Fights

A kind woman walking along the street saw a big boy fighting a small one. The victim was crying pitifully and making attempts to protect himself.

Indignant, the woman rushed forward and pulled the two combatants apart.

"What do you mean by hitting someone half your size?" she asked the larger boy angrily.

"Aw, you keep quiet. I guess he's my brother and I can hit him if I want to," came the answer.

"Yes, go on and leave us alone," the younger one chimed in through his sobs. "It's none of your business."

The woman went, and the story teaches a lesson.

It is always doubtful wisdom to interfere in children's quarrels unless you know just what the circumstances really are. Even the sight of a big boy hitting a little one is not offhand sufficient grounds for hasty intervention.

Whenever children can manage their own affairs and give and take their own likings it is a mistake for an adult to interpose a higher moral code.

A child learns nothing so thoroughly as what he learns for himself.

A casual observer has no way of knowing what appears as an obviously unjust battle between two children is not a very good happening for both. The working out of antagonisms and aggressiveness, the loyalties involved, cannot be judged on the surface.

Unless there is danger of really severe physical hurt, it is a safe rule not to interfere with quarrels.

One must be a parent, a teacher, a neighbor or a friend of long standing before one knows when it is wise to attempt to dispense justice.

CHIAN-SHAN ASSASSINATED

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25 (AP)—Chinese reports from Harbin today said General Mah Chan-Shan, once called the hero of Taitaihar, had been assassinated there.

For his defense of Taitaihar against the Japanese advance last autumn General Mah won the gratitude of his countrymen. Subsequently he joined with other local chieftains in the establishment of the new independent Manchurian state under Japanese protection. Only a few days ago he was formally inaugurated as the governor of Heilungkiang province.

Anticipating a new rebel threat in the Tanchuua region, the Japanese command ordered a battalion there from Kingchulin.

Travelers reaching Harbin from the frontier region reported unusual military activity along the white line from Kharbarovsk to Vladivostok.

Eighty-five Japanese and 337 Koreans, practically all the Japanese subjects living at Impeno, arrived today at Harbin, having fled for their lives.

They said their homes had been looted by Chinese invaders and that the Chinese chieftain, Ting-Chao, had several thousand men at Impeno and in that vicinity along the Chinese Eastern railway.

"I like a Fair Fighter"

"THAT'S one of the things I like most about Chesterfields... the attitude of the people who make them. They positively lean over backwards to be fair and square.

"I've been watching their advertisements for years. And do you know the thing that struck me most forcibly? They're so reasonable! Just a plain straightforward statement of facts. No wild claims... Nothing that's hard to believe!

"I wouldn't want to be a competitor of Chesterfield! They make too good a cigarette! I really believe they're the mildest I ever tasted.

"I can smoke Chesterfields any hour of the day or night... They're so mild, I don't even bother to keep track of how many I've smoked. They must be purer, too... they certainly taste better to me!"
