

Wallowa Forest Official Given Okanagon Post

By Mrs. C. A. Hunter (Observer Correspondent)

WALLOWA (Special).—Ed Berkner, deputy supervisor in the Wallowa forest office has received a promotion to assistant supervisor of the Okanagon forest with headquarters at Okanagon, Wash., and his transfer will take place March 16, at which time he will move his family to their new location. The Berkners only moved here from Enterprise about a year ago and during their brief stay in Wallowa have made many friends, who regret that they are leaving the community.

Fred H. Riggie, owner of the Wallowa battery station, died Sunday morning at the local hospital following a serious illness of two months duration. Mr. Riggie was born at Smith, Ore., Jan. 26, 1905, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Riggie. He received his early education at that place and in 1921 entered Wallowa High school, graduating in 1924. He then took a course in automobile mechanics in Portland and returning here bought the Brownlee service station in 1925, which business he conducted until he became too ill to work. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Abbie Riggie, one sister, Mrs. George Wise, and three brothers, Donald, John and Leonard, all of Wallowa. His father died 12 years ago. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon.

The largest crowd that has ever attended the Washington program and family dinner, given each year on Feb. 22, by Jessica chapter O. E. S.

filled the Masonic hall Monday evening. It was estimated that there were 125 people present. The dinner which was at 6:30 was served cafeteria style and was followed by the program consisting of an address on George Washington, by C. H. Thorp, master of Stanley lodge and songs and recitations given by the Star children under the direction of the Misses Ruth Hayes, Lenore McKinnis and Agatha Martin. After the program, games and old fashioned dances were enjoyed until a late hour. J. O. Kiddle and Mrs. Earl Peffer took the prize for being the best clop dancers, while Charlie Pieter was judged to be the best at calling old-fashioned quadrilles. The evening proved to be such an enjoyable one that several present were heard to remark that there should be more than one birthday party each year.

The Wallowa Women's club gave a Washington tea and special program Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. B. Gregory. Mrs. A. E. Pollock gave an interesting talk on the life of Washington, emphasizing the religious side of his nature. This was followed by an afternoon of music. Miss Constance McKenzie played several piano solos. Verla Edelman and Ethel Scott sang a duet and Arthur Gray sang "Songs My Mother Taught Me." A girls' quartet composed of Wilda McKenzie, Ethel Scott, D'Leita Wray and Arthene Gray sang "America." Following the program, tea was served by Mrs. Gregory, assisted by Mrs. Hollis Bull, Mrs. A. L. Scott and Mrs. L. F. Allen. About 25 were present to enjoy the afternoon.

Harley W. Allen, of Portland, spent the weekend here visiting relatives and friends. Mr. Allen was formerly city attorney of Wallowa. He returned to Portland on Tuesday.

Lawrence Doak, of The Dalles, is visiting in Wallowa this week and is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Dale.

Mrs. Dale Daugherty took her son, Bobby, to La Grande for medical treatment. They returned Tuesday.

GORDON AND FULLER TOP CAGE SCORERS

SEATTLE, Feb. 29 (AP)—The same pair of sharpshooters who finished one-two in the 1931 campaign, wound up in the same relative positions in the individual scoring race with completion of northern division Pacific coast conference basketball play last weekend.

Huntly Gordon, sensational Washington State college center, was again at the head of the list, his 135 points being just seven more than John Fuller, University of Washington center, was able to garner. In his sophomore year last season, Gordon tied the northern division scoring record of 171 points, while Fuller finished not such a good second as he did this year.

Charles Roberts, Oregon center, was third with 118, and Claud Holsten, Washington State forward, was fourth with 114.

Howard Grenier, Idaho center, was the "bad boy" of the league with 40 marks against him in the personal foul column.

Acidity
Heartburn, Gas, Sour Stomach

If excess acidity sour your food and causes suffering from gas, heartburn, indigestion, coated-tongue, and bloated tins, you are bound to feel grouchy, run-down, nervous, and can't sleep well. I want you to quit suffering right now, so come in and get what I consider the best medicine I have ever found. It's only 60c and if it doesn't stop gas, pain, etc., in a few minutes and soon make your stomach feel like new, you get your money back. Just ask me for Dioxol, 17 1/2c per bottle.

What did Rusty and Judy mean? Only loyalty. Priceless, gorgeous, reliable loyalty. Their lives, their interests, their words were no longer Hope's. But Goody and Mrs. Manly brought her a peculiar balance. Goody signified the happiness of reserved and conventional young womanhood, and Mrs. Manly stood for a life graciously lived, for an age that had passed and that seemed incomprehensible but pathetically beautiful to Hope.

When summer came Hope rebelled. With one single, brittle word she rebelled. Not for fame, fortune, family or friendship would she go to Bar Harbor and face months of boredom with the same old crowd of cottonmouths and lordly nit-wits.

Mrs. Manly came to her rescue. And Papa Ross, finding his temper a matter of amusement instead of fear, changed his policy to one of large understanding. As a result, Hope and Mrs. Manly were sent out to a dude ranch in Wyoming. So great was Hope's delight in the complete change of routine, so utter her abandon to the sheer joy of physical strain and out-door life, that for the first time in years something of her old self-sufficiency returned.

"New thrills" catch Hope in the next installment. And she makes New York into a familiar territory.

BOY CRAZY

by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: From a boy who goes to a dude ranch in Wyoming, where he falls in love with a girl, Hope, who becomes bitter when her father and her mother die, she thinks that Dickey, who stands by her, under her father's opposition, but she does not know that Dickey, who attacked Dickey when Dickey tried to rescue her.

Chapter 25
HOPE REBELS

WHAT Betty Preston said, even as she accepted the promise of money for her nervous, bootlegging Tyosome, hardly mattered; but certainly Hope had outgrown her queenly reign in the younger smart set. She was known in her own circle as a wild, un, and was considered by the fond parents of fifty miles radius "an unwholesome influence." As a temptress, deliberately raised, Hope refused pointblank to "come out." She laughed at the idea raucously. She came out! It was too idiotic! She, who had been a horrified whisper in Westchester, in Harbourn, and in Italy, protested triumphantly against Mama's mingled pride, and decided that society should never know her officially.

Again Hope found two steady and reliable reins in guiding the balky horse of her career, Rusty Crandall, now out of college himself, and confined from ten to four in the office of his father's huge chocolate firm—while Hope went horseback riding each morning, generally in the company of Rusty Crandall. More and more frequently Hope drove over to her sister's house in the afternoons, staying only when Goody was alone, and finding a strange solace in long talks with the puzzling stranger who had grown up with her. Often, Hope would sit for long spaces in silence, while Goody checked bills or made out weekly menus, or wrote invitations to dinner parties. Listening to Goody's quiet, low-voiced confidences with only occasional monosyllables for an answer.

It was a strange friendship between the sisters who had grown up despising each other. At sight of Hope, Goody would get about mixing a highball (which she never drank herself) and upon each visit Hope would drag a new piece of linen, a bodor cloth, an attaching, or a fresh supply of liquor—and would frown upon Goody if she dared express gratitude. Yes, a strange companionship and understanding, especially when Goody was a bit frightened of her husband's criticism of Hope, and especially above all, when she longed to break faith with the Rosses Sr., and tell her the thimble, mousy-eyed child of all that happened to Dickey in the billiard room. But an exaggerated honor soiled Goody's lips, and an where Angel had been given him as his personal secretary. (She succeeded in running Rusty's office so that he might go out and enjoy himself; Angel knew much more about the business than Rusty ever would.) And Judy Hunt, who had made a debut (and an exceedingly successful one, her parents' financial reverses notwithstanding) while Hope was abroad that fall.

Judy and Rusty. That was all that Hope's life held. With a generous sprinkling of Goody who wanted desperately to be kind in spite of the fact that Charlie vigorously disapproved of Hope. Marriage seemed to have humanized her; love seemed to have softened her. It was her turn, now, to pity Hope. The tables were turned. But she did her pitying with magnificent kindness and ease. Hope marveled—and turned to her sister with mute appeal, half hating herself for doing it, and never really confiding, for somehow she knew that with all Goody's new but very natural sweetness, she would tell anything and everything to Charlie. And as a result Charlie would grant offense at the sight of his wife's young sister, and criticize her the more for her eternal refuge in drink.

In the spring, Hope took a four weeks' trip with Judy to Bermuda, accepting without protest Papa's insistence upon a chaperon. This chaperon, one Mrs. Manly, was a forlorn remnant of the Ross family on Mama's side. A woman who had been too true to be good, and who, as a widow of a war hero, was surviving with magnificent grace.

The trip to Bermuda, however, was cut short by a week because Sassy was taken ill. Back to New York rushed Hope, magnificently tanned and far more rested and staid than she dreamed. And in her trail came Mrs. Manly, slightly broken-hearted at having so abruptly to end her first vacation in seven years, and Judy who had quite tired of Bermuda anyway.

Sassy, given personal treatment and home visits by the best cat doctor in New York, recovered shortly, and Hope breathed with a relief that brought a puff of disgust from Mama Ross.

The spring dragged interminably exaggerated—pride kept Hope's closed, so the two talked of everything but a hapless marriage in the face of a blissful marriage.

Often, too, when she was in town shopping, Hope would drop over to the tiny apartment in Gramercy Park that was Mrs. Manly's home. There she would listen to past sorrows, untarnished joys and triumphs, unforgetten heartaches and grief. Those hours with Mrs. Manly seeped into Hope's heart. A life spread out before her—a story lived and told to her for the first time—a human being capable of sitting back and taking the rough deals when life had held so much. It drew Hope strangely close, particularly when, without a painful word between them, Mrs. Manly understood Hope's listless silence, and understood about Sassy.

What did Rusty and Judy mean? Only loyalty. Priceless, gorgeous, reliable loyalty. Their lives, their interests, their words were no longer Hope's. But Goody and Mrs. Manly brought her a peculiar balance. Goody signified the happiness of reserved and conventional young womanhood, and Mrs. Manly stood for a life graciously lived, for an age that had passed and that seemed incomprehensible but pathetically beautiful to Hope.

When summer came Hope rebelled. With one single, brittle word she rebelled. Not for fame, fortune, family or friendship would she go to Bar Harbor and face months of boredom with the same old crowd of cottonmouths and lordly nit-wits.

PORLAND, Ore., Feb. 29 (AP)—Prompt response of the Portland fire department would have prevented a fire from spreading in the downtown district Sunday if there had been any fire to spread.

Four engine companies and a truck arrived to the scene when a downtown alarm sounded, only to discover that what had been taken for clouds of smoke were really clouds of vapor rolling from the face of a building being steam-cleaned.
