

Weather Colder At Promise Than Week Just Past

Mrs. Bertha Carper (Observer Correspondent)

PROMISE (Special)—This week has been quite a little colder than last week and every night the snow freezes hard. The canyons are opening up some. David Garrett has some cattle and horses on the canyon and he takes grain to them every day. Mr. Garrett takes out a bunch of sheep each day but the grass is not starting very fast and most all of the old grass is rotted. Feed is very scarce.

The county caterpillar and grader are on the road now trying to break out the track. It is expected to get to Maxville Tuesday. Both mail carriers have been walking and carrying the mail. Hance had four men and Williams three.

Harvey McDonald has been suffering from an ulcerated tooth and the smallpox. He is recovering. Ivan Garrett, who has been working near Bates, Ore., and Robert Carper, who has been staying in La Grande, came in Tuesday. They left their car at Wallawa and walked on the snow, which was frozen so hard it would hold them up.

Ivan Carper visited his brother, Howard, Tuesday. He returned Wednesday, accompanied by his sister-in-law and little niece. They crossed the canyon and came by way of Charlie Moore's. The snow is getting nearly off the east side of the canyon.

Born Tuesday, to Mr. and Mrs. Lucy Trump, at Maxville, a daughter, Mrs. Allie Smith is caring for the mother and babe.

C. P. Carper went to the river Saturday to Mr. Potter. No one had seen him for some time, but he was making, it all right and came out with Mr. Carper. He returned Sunday and Bill Carper helped him part way home, as a part of the trail is very hard traveling.

L. S. McDonald, overseer, and Mrs. H. S. McDonald, chaplain, were absent from grade at the last regular meeting, the first time they have missed in six years. There will be a birthday dinner the next regular grade day in honor of Obe Swearingen and Mrs. Nellie Flesman. The neighborhood is invited to the dinner and the afternoon program.

C. P. Carper and son, Melvin, went to Siefert canyon Tuesday, and got Howard Carper's horses and brought them home to feed them there. Charlie Moore and Earl Williams made a trip to Eden Sunday to see about some cattle they have at the Paul Knight place. They reported the river to be very high. They crossed with the cable at the Porter place.

Bill Carper caught a large female coyote in a trap Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wheeler and baby have been suffering from smallpox. They are reported to be recovering now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vesper Henderson.

Melvin and Orval Carper, Erma and Ray Trump and Arthur Bursell were at Mrs. Nellie Flesman's Sunday.

day. They spent the day skiing and in the evening enjoyed themselves singing hymns. Vesper Henderson was at I. S. McDonald's Tuesday getting grain chopped for feed and Thursday, Mr. McDonald chopped a ton of grain for Obe Swearingen.

Fred Carper is recovering from the mumps.

WORLD HAS BABY CLINIC 'GLOOMY DEAN' OPINES

LONDON (AP)—Cogitating upon what's wrong with the world, the Very Rev. William R. Inge, famous "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's, said that humanity, with hundreds of thousands of years before it, has reached only "the stage of the rattle and the feeding bottle."

"We old fellows shall be in our graves in a few years," he said. "We have made a hash of things, I know, and I am glad that we shall not have to deal with the new problems."

KITTY FREW

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: "Gar, I'm terribly lonely, coming here, Kitty Frew told her new cousin, Carol, when he brought her to his vacation home after a brief but dazzling courtship and honeymoon. KITTY always has lived in a small town. She has not realized the extent of Gar's background and the social position of his family until she meets his friend, Mirra Crosby, one of the town and society set. As a result, Mirra Crosby is surprised and shocked. She makes KITTY feel an awkward outsider while she covertly reproaches Gar for his treatment and advises him to change his ways. Gar, who has been told to change his ways, is torn between the crowd to which they belong. Gar's mother would like him to get to work to reverse the young couple. Carol knows she is jealous that Gar should have a girl with no social standing. And cannot decide what her tactics will be. Mrs. Frew, Gar's stepmother, and turns to KITTY, saying, "This is your wife!"

Chapter 4 HONEYMOON INVADERS.

"THIS IS KITTY," Gar told his mother. "And she's all ready to adore you. I've told her there was never anyone like you."

"Silly boy!" Mrs. Frew took KITTY's hand and pressed it. "Sit down, my dear, and have your tea and do not listen to him. 'Carol'—She gave a little sign toward Carol as if graciously conceding the foreground to her for a moment."

But Carol did not take it. She did not move from her perch on the chair-arm. She lifted a cool cheek to Gar's kiss and nodded toward KITTY with a careless, "How-do-you-do."

Rebuffed, even a little shocked, KITTY turned quickly back to Gar's mother. Oh, she was all that Gar had pictured her, beautiful, understanding. That must discount Carol's coolness.

Gar was asking his mother about her trip. And KITTY listened, more aware of the affectionate tone of her voice than of what they said.

Carol had refused tea. Presently she rose to her feet with an abrupt jerky lift of her body.

"I've told Pound that I won't be in for dinner," she announced, moving toward the door.

Her going seemed scarcely to interrupt Gar and his mother.

"It's great to be home," Gar said. "How's that job? Did said anything about it lately?"

Mrs. Frew hesitated a moment before she answered. "Is there any berry, Gar? I've looked forward to having you here for a little while after you finished college. You've earned a little pay."

At that Gar flashed a smiling look at KITTY. "Didn't I tell you she was the real sort? That's just my mother. I saw worked like a dog this last semester—had to. Anyway, played a changing food of colored light, in the beam of voices. They called over their dinner, talking, sometimes simply gazing deeply, happily into one another's eyes.

"KITTY, it's not such a bad idea of mother's that I play around for a little while. I'll have the roadster come over to-morrow. We'll go out to the Country Club. I've got to start you at golf. I tell you we're not going to get like most married people, just fussing about the milkman and the butcher and all that sort of thing. That's what takes the edge off from romance."

KITTY, twenty, a little intimidated with the color and lights about her, knew that nothing, nothing ever was going to take the edge from their romance!

"But KITTY will be fun with us, Gar, talking about the milkman and the butcher."

"Don't fix my allowance," Gar purred with easy confidence. "Mother'll talk him into it."

"Gar, when will we see your father?"

"Best time to catch him home is at breakfast, but you have to get around by eight o'clock to do that."

"Let's have breakfast with him to-morrow, Gar." KITTY was eager.

The room had emptied of its dinner guests. KITTY and Gar had the dining room almost entirely to themselves. "I like it—like this," KITTY whispered into Gar's ear, but close to her cheek. "It's as every thing were just for us."

But presently four young people came in and Gar, seeing them, exclaimed loudly. "There's Mirra and Red Harding. That's Diana. Close with her. KIT and Tabby Wilkins."

He was across the room on the instant, shaking hands with the newcomers. KIT saw the girl whom he had called Diana. Close like Gar.
