Little Girl Tells Chicago Police Bedtime Story

CHICAGO, Mar. 21 (AP)—The Chicago police settled down last night to hear a little bedtime story from 7-year-old Gertrude Luchinger, expecting one about a big bear, but what they got left them pop-eyed. They found her wandering around in a park.

"I was born," she said, "in New York. My mamma's name was Jean, and my daddy was killed in a war in England. Four years ago my mamma gave me to another lady and came to see me once in a while from Philadelphia.

"My second mamma lived in New York. She came to Chicago three weeks ago on a train, but started back three days ago. At the railroad station mamma put me and a little dog and a little baby on the floor and bought the tickets. Then she picked up the baby and the dog and forgot me. Since then I've been sitting for myself. Last night I leaned up against a shack all night."

The wires hummed to New York and Philadelphia, but while they were humming the telephone rang. "My daughter," said Mrs. Luchinger, "has been missing since early in the afternoon and..."

"And," interposed the desk sergeant, "I think she's going to be a great novelist when she grows up."

NOMINATION ON MAJORITY VOTE HELD AS BEST

HARTFORD, Conn., Mar. 21 (AP)—Nomination of the first Democratic presidential candidate who receives a majority vote at the national convention was urged today by Homer S. Cummings, supporter of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The formed Democratic national chairman termed his party's two-thirds rule as unfortunate, and said party leaders feel no deadlock similar to that in 1924 should be permitted to develop.

"While welcoming all legitimate candidates," he said, "we should set our faces against any attempt by a minority to block action and wear down the majority."

Governor Roosevelt, Cummings said, is the first choice for the nomination of 33 states and the second choice of "practically all the others."

Give States Full Rights, Winter Says

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21 (AP)—Conservation by state laws rather than federal restraint of mineral rights of public lands, was urged before the house lands committee by Charles Winter of Casper, Wyo.

Winter, a former representative, testified in behalf of his state on the pending bill to turn the surface rights of public lands over to the eleven western states in which they are located.

He urged that the states be given full jurisdiction, not surface rights only.

Find More Facts About Oldway Man

LONDON, Mar. 21 (AP)—Proof that the "Oldway man," whose skeleton was found in Tanganyika, East Africa, in 1918, is the oldest modern type of man yet known has been discovered by an expedition now exploring there, according to A. T. Hopwood of the London museum of natural history.

This and other objects found by the expedition, he said, indicate that the Oldway man equaled culturally the Heidelberg man.

NO WORD OF BABY

HOPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 21 (AP)—There has been no word of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr., kidnapped from his crib March 1.

The Lindbergh telephone lines continue to buzz with reports that babies looking like the stolen child have been seen. Mrs. Lindbergh frequently takes the calls, and questions the caller closely.

All such leads have proved false but the state police have arranged for a close check on all babies who might possibly include the one being sought. Several details are now assigned to this task alone.

Between the lines of the official police communications there sounds an occasional note of despair. There has been nothing in several days to indicate that either police or private investigators have found a clue they believe will lead to a solution.

The pageant is one of a series of six events which will be held by the group during 1932, the bi-centennial celebration of the birth of the first president. The production was chosen from among a group of pageants issued by the national bi-centennial committee at Washington, D. C.

The public is invited to the event to which no admission is to be charged, they state.

Grant Bean portrays George Washington throughout the entire pageant, and the other prominent characters are Martha Custis, Miss Beatrice Wardell; fame, Francis Halling, of Union; adventure, Carlyle Nilby; home, Mrs. Edward Fitzgerald; history, Miss Fonda Hanks; and prosperity, little Miss Von Cell Bruce. The entire cast includes 150 characters.

The steateman and the man will be depicted in the second episode, first dealing with his home life at Mt. Vernon and his meeting with Martha Custis. The glory and the gloom of the Revolution will be shown in two acts of the third division, while in the fourth the nation's homage and friendship's tribute will be depicted.

BOLD BREAK FROM PRISON SHORT-LIVED

(Continued from Page One) brought from Portland was rigged up and the visitors cut through the two steel slab doors and the steel bars of the cell-room to free the prisoners, then used the torch to cut through still another steel door into the store room where the liquor recovered from the wreck of the Sea Island was stored.

Hurriedly the men loaded the liquor onto the trucks, which, each now carrying two men and preceded by the sedan with six men in it, started for Portland over the coast highway.

Late Saturday, however, officers at Tillamook had received a mysterious warning that something was likely to happen down the coast, and when this warning was later repeated, they left for Toledo. Before reaching here they met Sheriff McIlwain who told them the news. They wheeled about and hurried after two trucks they had passed on the way down.

Officers Stop Trucks

With leveled pistols the officers stopped the trucks and arrested Mel Kruger, George Fisher, Elbert Johnson and Arthur Adams, all claiming to be from Seattle. They were taken to the Tillamook county jail. Police said two of the men, one riding on each truck, were armed. Search of the trucks revealed 275 cases of bonded liquor, a drum of alcohol and a drum of whiskey.

Meanwhile officers speeding from the east overtook the sedan and arrested its six occupants, all of whom the police said were armed. Besides the three escaped prisoners three men giving their names as Paul Remaley, Bert Chapman and Sidney Carrick and their address as Portland, were arrested. Police, however, believe they are from Seattle.

The officers said they thought the entire ten are members of a coast-wide rum-running clique.

TO TRANSFER PRISONERS

CORVALLIS, Ore., Mar. 21 (AP)—Six men who were held in jail here in connection with Sunday's jail delivery and liquor hi-jacking episode at Toledo, were expected to be returned to Toledo this afternoon for arraignment. They face a multiplicity of charges.

The three men who were being held in the Lincoln county jail, and the seven men who were arrested after having freed the trio, were divided between the Tillamook and Corvallis jails because of the unsafe condition in which the liquor runners left the Toledo jail.

Charges upon which the seven who engineered the temporary escape may be arraigned include effecting a jail delivery, possession and transportation of liquor, destruction of public property, carrying weapons, and theft of government evidence.

Police here said Paul Remaley, of Portland, one of those held, is the ring-leader of the group.

REMALEY KNOWN TO OFFICERS

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 21 (AP)—Paul Remaley of Portland, who maintains an elaborate residence in the Laurelhurst district here, now being held in connection with the Toledo jail delivery and hi-jacking venture, is said by prohibition officers to be known to them. They said he long has been suspected of being in some way connected with a large liquor ring here.

He was arrested by state dry agents a year ago and was released on bail, Sidney Carrick, sometimes known as Garrick, also under arrest, has a long record here as a liquor dealer. Last October he came to the attention of police when he allegedly threatened to shoot a police patrolman.

Another escapee in which he gained the local limelight was in the attempt by two men who escaped to smash off his ears. The trouble was said to have developed from enmity between two liquor factions.

Men's Suits Of Subdued Hue This Spring

Only the millionaire can afford to be indifferent to his clothes, can wear an old antiquated hat or a last year's model suit. The average La Grande must give attention to his wardrobe to the minutest detail if he is to be counted among the well dressed men of the city. He has to know that his suits must be subdued in hue, that blacks are taking the place of golf knickers and dozens of other details of correct dress.

The gentleman's business hat is different again from the one he wore last year. In the spring and summer of 1932, a jaunty pearl gray hat with a black felt band, narrow brim turned down in front and up in the back and with a high crown, will be absolutely correct. A double-breasted coat with set-in sleeves will serve as a coat.

When he goes out for the evening, Mr. La Grande must be a study in black and white this year. He may wear his tuxedo and with it a black felt hat. Felt should be unlined, fashion dealers state, since every man should know that derbies are not correct to wear with dinner jackets. With the tuxedo he should wear a shirt with a two-stud closing and the bosom either perfectly plain or with small ribs. Completing the ensemble, he wears a wing collar, butterfly tie with straight ends, white or black double-breasted vest, carved, crystal or smoked pearl studs and links; black sock, black shoes and a black and white muffler.

A suggestion for sports wear has also been made by fashion experts, who say that a man's golf jacket should be of leather with a zipper opening, either with long sleeves or sleeveless.

Although 97 years old, Edward Stewart of Davie county, N. C., still hunts rabbits and shoots them with deadly accuracy.

Gregory G. Henley, 59-year-old strawberry grower and church lawn caretaker of Loudonville, O., hopes to live to 100 by walking five miles daily.
