

Dry Majority In Kansas Slight In Prohibition Pool

The only state that has had a dry majority, Kansas, comes within a fractional percentage of voting wet in the seventh weekly tabulation of The Literary Digest's prohibition poll as over 500,000 additional ballots are added to the nation wide tally, published in tomorrow's issue of the magazine.

The dry percentage of the Kansas vote has been reduced from 53.34 last week to 50.77 this week.

Throughout the country as a whole the dry vote shows a sixth consecutive gain, rising from 13.85 per cent of the total vote of the first week's tabulation.

How to Stop RHEUMATISM

New Medicine Drives Rheumatic Poisons from Joints—Muscles. EASES PAIN FIRST DAY

Poisons settling in the joints and muscles cause rheumatism. You cannot get rid of rheumatic agony till these dangerous poisons are driven out of your system.

What you need is RU-MA, the new medicine now sold by all druggists that acts directly on the liver, kidneys and blood, and helps expel through the natural channels of elimination the dangerous poisons that cause rheumatism.

No long waiting for your suffering to stop. RU-MA eases pain the first day and is the one rheumatic remedy guaranteed by Red Cross Drug Store to free muscles and joints from all painful stiffness and swelling and completely stop your rheumatic agony or nothing to pay.

returns to 25.10 per cent last week and 25.75 per cent of the current tabulation.

Forty of the forty-eight states are voting three to two wet in the present report. Of these states nine are voting more than three to one for repeal and nine more states are voting over four to one wet.

North Carolina continues to show a rising dry vote and is within one-tenth of one per cent of a majority for prohibition with 49.91 per cent of its total balloting so far in favor of the eighteenth amendment.

The east south central states of Kentucky, Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi from the dryest sectional group in the United States, although voting wet, with a percentage of their combined totals of 59.62 for repeal.

The geographic unit with the largest vote for repeal is the middle Atlantic states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania where the wet balloting is 80.88 per cent of the combined total.

Chats With Parents

THE CHILD'S SIDE OF IT

By Alice Johnson Peale It was a long rainy afternoon, and Leonard, having exhausted his toys, told mother he was going to pretend to be the minister and pay her a call.

With an umbrella from the hall stand hung over his arm and a pair of spectacles without glass askew across his nose, he sat down in the chair opposite her.

He talked about the weather, the coming church bazaar, Mrs. So-and-so's rheumatism and the like. More and more Leonard warmed to his role.

"There is something I have been wanting to ask your advice about for a long time," said mother, suddenly. "You know my boy, Leonard, don't you?" Leonard nodded his head soberly, and his mother went on, "Well, he is a fine boy, but so often he's terribly naughty."

"You don't say," said Leonard. "Yes, really. He comes late for meals. He won't go to bed when it's time. He teases and shames after he has been told 'No.' What do you think I ought to do about him?"

"I'll tell you what the trouble is, madam," said Leonard. "That boy can't ever tell when you mean what you say when you're just talking. Sometimes you scold him for doing a thing, sometimes you don't. You can't blame him for fussing and trying to get his way. I'm very much afraid that your troubles with Leonard are your own fault."

"Perhaps you are right," said mother, smiling. "I'll try to do better. Thank you so much for your help."

"Well, I must be going," said Leonard, who apparently felt there he had been enough of this. "Good-bye."

Many a child could thus prescribe for himself if given the opportunity. When some happy chance gives mother the inside track, she may well profit by what she learns.

Health

UNBURDENING ONE'S SELF

Patients frequently come to the doctor, as they put it, to unburden themselves. This is a practice useful in many ways both to the patient and to the physician.

The physician, through such contacts with the patient, is better able to understand him when acute illness arises. The patient, on the other hand, frequently finds relief from besting ills and problems through "talking it over" with the doctor.

There is, however, another form of "unburdening one's self" which has a different sort of motive, and which is a very plague to the doctor, and a trial to the patient.

In it the patient seeks escape from some exceedingly uncomfortable situation and comes to the physician complaining of some symptom complex.

Should the unsuspecting physician make an earnest attempt to cure the patient of his complaints, either he will find himself balked on every step of the way, or the patient will develop a new set of symptoms to take the place of those which have been "cured."

For such a patient does not really want to be cured of his symptoms. To be cured means to be confronted once again by the very uncomfortable situation from which escape was sought by way of physical illness.

The histories of such persons are most disconcerting. It is not long before the physician discovers the neurotic element in the disease picture.

Should the physician then inform his patient that the physical complaints merely mask emotional and psychologic disabilities, he is liable to bring down wrath upon his own head, or — what is perhaps as bad for the physician and worse for the patient — there will be change in doctors.

Every physician knows of such wandering patients and knows that it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to cure one unwilling to be cured.

Averill Says No Cause For Alarm

SALEM, Ore., Apr. 1 (Special)—Investigation of the report of application for a receivership for the Missouri State Life Insurance company in the courts of Missouri, which appeared in the press, has convinced Insurance Commissioner A. H. Averill that there is no occasion for alarm on the part of Oregon policyholders or the public in general; and in his opinion, which is borne out by the examination reports and recent financial statements on file in his office, the company is solvent and in sound financial condition, having transacted business in this state for the past 22 years in a manner satisfactory to its policyholders and to the insurance department.

Commissioner Averill, in a telephone conversation with Joseph B. Thompson, superintendent of insurance of the state of Missouri, was reassured that there is no basis for the attack which was made by a disgruntled stockholder who owns only five shares of stock in the company.

It is not only Commissioner Averill's desire to reassure policyholders that their interests are not endangered, but to warn the public and the insurance fraternity in particular that in effect, injuries any individual or organization is not only extremely unethical, but is unlawful. While the commissioner feels sure that the responsible people in the insurance business in this state will use every effort to discredit any rumors, there are those who, for personal gain or with malice aforethought always uppermost in their minds, need to be warned.

Brave Baby Boy Rescued From Deep Mine Drill

result of exposure. Taddling after his workbound father, Gerald stopped to play about the 250-foot drill hole yesterday morning. Its maximum diameter is about a foot. He fell in and with his knees doubled up and his arms pinned above his head, wedged 30 feet down. There he stayed until volunteers and miners of the Tri-state lead and zinc district got him out after a frantic battle to pierce solid rock.

"Hurry daddy, take me, take me!" The little boy called out as his rescuers, working in small squads, neared success.

"Cbe, but he's a gritty one," cried "Daddy" Collins, young mine prospector.

"God love you!" sobbed his blue-eyed mother, with her baby at last in her arms.

First efforts to drag the baby to safety with a rope were futile. A pick and shovel brigade moved quickly to sink the parallel shaft. A steam shovel was wheeled into play, but it balked above his head. Then a compressed air drill was found, and shifts of two and four men, working with all their might, conquered the barrier.

Down to 22 feet, a two foot tunnel was dug into the drill hole. Tearing loose stones and earth from Gerald's small body, the workers drew the baby with infinite care to the shaft.

Dr. F. L. Worthington and Dr. Frank Merriweather, the latter head of the bureau of mines clinic, rendered first aid.

Fresh air, warmed electrically at the first chill of dusk was pumped to Gerald. Gas fumes were feared. Light and telephone lines were set up. Self appointed marshals pressed the crowd back.

Ivan Fisher, assistant state's mine inspector, directed the rescue.

Moons of Mars No moon belonging to Mars were known in Swh's day, but he makes the astronomer at Lilliput discover two Martian satellites, one revolving in ten hours and the other in twenty-one and a half hours. One hundred and fifty years after the publication of the book the two moons of Mars were actually discovered. One revolved in seven and a half hours and the other in thirty and a quarter hours—many times faster than the moons of any other planet.

Indian Prophet Hiawatha is a name and a title of a chiefdom hereditary in the Fortoise clan of the Mohawk tribe; it is the second on the roll of federal chiefdoms of the Iroquois confederation. The first known person to bear the name was a noted reformer, statesman, legislator and magician, justly celebrated as one of the founders of the League of Five Nations. Tradition makes him a prophet also. He probably flourished about 1570 A. D.
