CHARGES AGAINST DRY LAW VOICED

hibitionists argued during the war the liquor issue was "not the temperance issue" but was needed as a war measure.

"It is not the temperance issue now," he said. "It is an economic issue to fight the depression." Bingham said the prohibition law had increased taxation and the amount of drinking in "the smaller places" was alarming.

He cited the number of arrests in Medford, Mass., for drunkenness as an example. In 1914, he said there were only 105 arrests for drunkenness while in 1930 there were 419.

Other cities he mentioned included: Vicksburg, Mass., Little Rock, Ark., Oak Park, Ill., Davenport, Iowa, Minot, N. D., Denver, Idaho Falls, Idaho, Albuquerque, N. M., Ogden, Utah, and Seattle.

This, he said, showed that drinking has increased, particularly among the young.

In St. Louis and other cities with great brewing interests, Bingham contended, prohibition had vastly increased drinking.

"Nothing that I say, however," he added, "nothing I can say will change the ardent dry—but the making of alcohol in any kitchen is easy."

He urged prohibition as a question back to the states" and added that financial experts estimated that if the tax on liquor had increased in proportion to tobacco taxes it would yield $1,290,000,000 a year.

Bingham declared it is "impossible to make the descendants of generations of temperate drinkers believe there is anything morally wrong in drinking."

CONGENITAL DEFECTS The study of the development of a many-celled living being from a common cell is called embryology, and the science of embryology has a unique fascination.

The cell resulting from inception of the reproductive process has a phenomenal impetus for growth and multiplication.

Most of this impetus is spent before the infant is born.

The single cell, with which, as we say, life begins, multiplies so rapidly and so extensively that during the time of development before birth its weight increases nearly a billion fold.

In all the years of life after his birth the average human being increases in weight only up to approximately 20 times that at birth.

But there is still a further difference between existence before and existence after birth.

The former has a qualitative character which the latter lacks. The child grows up to be a man or woman.

True the child is essentially different from the adult. But a fundamental pattern of eyes, nose, head, arms, legs, among other things, prevails throughout.

In the period before birth, however, we begin with a cell, and from this cell there ultimately develop all those marvelous mechanisms that go toward making a human being.

The scientist who is unwilling to account for things and events by all inclusive supernatural forces asks whence comes this systematic direction, this expert guidance that evolves an amazing complicated living being from a single cell.

And he marvels, not at the uncommon failures of normal prenatal development, but that they are not more common.

Many experiments have been performed in an attempt to answer this whence and wherefore. But the mystery is still profound. Some practical value has come out of these studies bearing on congenital defects which will be discussed in the next installment.

LESS DRUNK CASES HELSINGFORS, FINLAND, APR. 14

Senate Committee Favors Plan For Indian Welfare

WASHINGTON, Apr. 14 (AP)—Legislation under which the federal government would pay the cost of schooling, charitable relief, law enforcement and highway construction among the Indians was recommended Wednesday by a senate Indian subcommittee.

The report followed months of investigation by the committee headed by Senator Steiwer, Republican, Oregon, in an effort to work out a plan of cooperation under which the United States may make its equitable contribution toward carrying on governmental activities in the areas in which the tax exempt Indian lands are located.

The recommendations reported to the full committee called also for authorization for payment by the United States of the proportionate cost in the construction of school buildings, for the United States to contract with local governmental agencies to provide health service and indigent relief; for the local agencies to afford necessary law enforcement under a plan by which the United States will pay the cost, and the United States to proceed with development of highways, paying the full cost where they are built primarily for benefit of the Indians on Indian lands, and a proportionate share if partly for the benefit of whites.

The recommendations proposed that the secretary of interior make a report on law enforcement among the Indians and recommend legislation for extending state laws to them "on all those reservations where the Indians are already partially assimilated by the whites and where the Indians have progressed sufficiently to live under the white man's law."

How To Select Your Evergreens Almost all of the evergreens are valued for their distinct shape and symmetry. In selecting and grouping evergreens it is well to consider their shape if a pleasant result is to be secured.

Evergreens can be divided according to shape into six general groups. A classification which makes it much easier to select the right evergreen for the right place. It must be remembered that the members in each group are alike only in shape or outline. Each has its own characteristics and may be a dwarf grower to tall grower according to its class.

Group 1. This broadly pyramidal group of the Christmas tree type embraces quite a few of the common evergreens including some of the firs, hemlocks, spruces and pines. As a rule they make large trees at maturity and make most perfect specimens when growing without interference. This class is good for lawn groups, shelter planting, avenues or specimens.

Group 2. The evergreens in this group are usually medium height growers suitable for backgrounds and foundation plantings. They are useful to give height at corners and accent at each side of a doorway, gateway or garden entrance. Various varieties of arborvitae, junipers, taxus and retinosporas are included in this group.

Group 3. These are the upright columnar varieties which introduce an exclamatory note in the landscape, wherever an accent plant is needed or where formal effects are striven for. These plants may be fitly grouped. The junipers and arborvitae both offer such narrow types.

Group 4. In the family of evergreens there are many fine dwarf varieties which grow more or less globular. These are very useful for specimen planting or for foundation planting, either alone or in combination with taller growing varieties planted in back. The Mugo pine and Globe arborvitae belong to this group.

Group 5. The evergreens in this group constitute an intermediate stage between creeping juniper and upright growers. All are dwarf and consequently make desirable plants for foundation planting. Two of the most commonly known of this group are Pfitzer's Juniper and Savin Juniper.

Group 6. The creeping variety of juniper which constitute this group are at home on slopes where they can spread out at will or wherever a low carpet of evergreen foliage is desirable.

VANCOUVER, Wash., April 14 (AP)—A. L. Bowers, 57, was taken to a hospital here today with severe scalp wounds, the result of an encounter with a robber who held him up with Bowers' own rifle.

Bowers conducts a sporting goods store. Yesterday a man came in to inspect a rifle. He left without buying. Today he reappeared and asked to look at it. Bowers placed it in his hands the man then asked to see another in the showcase. As Bowers stooped the robber slipped a cartridge in the rifle and threatened the storekeeper.

Bowers grabbed the rifle barrel and the two struggled the length of the store and into the street, shattering showcases from one end of the shop to the other. The bandit escaped but police said they had his automobile license numbers. Bowers was badly cut by blows from the robber as he fled.

Later the police said the attempted hold-up bandit has been identified as Elmer W. Lovegren, about 40 years of age, recently released from the Portland jail.

PAINFUL PILES Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonard's prescription—HEM-ROID—to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly, even in old, stubborn cases. HEH-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. Red Cross Drug store says HEH-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back. —Adv.
