Chats With Parents

NEEDED—A FRIEND

By Alice Judson Peale
A 16-year-old boy was brought to the hospital as a case of attempted suicide. He had sought to kill himself with gas, but was found before his purpose had been accomplished. On the kitchen table he had left a letter:
"Dear father and mother: I cannot go on living. I am glad that nobody, nobody at all, will miss me. That is what makes it easier for me to do this thing. The whole world laughs at me and hates me. Always I have wanted to have friends and to be loved and happy as others are. But I have no one. Good-bye."
That such a letter could have been written only by a psychopathic personality does not remove it from consideration by the parents of ordinary children. Many apparently quite normal children go through periods of profound depression during the difficult years of adolescence.

That many more children are secretly most unhappy during this time and that their entire later adjustment is marred by the unsolved difficulties of this period, all who have worked much with children of this age will bear witness.

What such unhappy children need more than anything, is a friend—someone who will understand them and establish the contact which for some reason or other their parents have failed to do.

A really melancholy adolescent should be taken to a psychiatrist who will himself prove to be the friend he needs and who will show him the way out of his difficulties through the development of wholesome interests and associations.

Adolescence offers to the parent the last opportunity to correct the mistakes of earlier training. If the child is not now helped to become a healthy personality he will undoubtedly carry his emotional difficulties through the rest of his life.

GANGSTER TRIO SHOT TO DEATH

Bank of Lincoln, Neb., in 1930, but was released after witnesses of the robbery were unable to identify him. After breaking with the Cuckoo gang, Hayes joined the Shelton gang of East St. Louis.

The St. Louis police had been seeking him since a recent confession by Peter Stevens, former Cuckoo gangster, in which he named Hayes as instigator of the murders of Eddie Menken and Milton Root, two of the latest victims in the gunmen's warfare. Stevens also implicated Hayes in the bombing of two buildings, one of which was the quarters of a racing news service and the other occupied by a handbook agency.

The record of Hayes as a gunman extends as far back as 1922, when he was convicted at Springfield, Ill., for robbing a mail messenger of $40,000 intended as the payroll for a Standard Oil company refinery.
