liss Peterson Is Speaker at Final Meeting of Club

large audience followed with in-eat a delightful program which ss Jennie Peterson presented last ming before the Neighborhood sic club on "American Contribu-s to Serious Compositions, Chorals, atorios and Operas." Composers d their compositions were described Miss Peterson, who also interspers-her talk with personal recollec-ns of composers at the New Eng-d conservatory of music, in New rk, where she spent several years dying.

Miss Peterson divided American sic into three periods, and stated at there were no composers who re outstanding until the last per-l, 1860 to the present. Of these, hn Knowles Paine was the first, d the most important of his time. composed hymns for the Centen-al of 1876, and for the Chicago orld's fair, and also produced many her compositions. Composers of portance who followed include orge W. Chadwick, Arthur Foote, oratio W. Parker, Dudley Buck, Mrs. H. A. Beach and Edward Mac Dow-

Truly American compositions were ng by the girls' sextet at the East-n Oregon Normal school to illus-ate her talk. Selections were "By e Waters of the Minnetonka," by eurance; "Slumber Boat," by Gay-r; "Allah's Holiday," by Priml; and ittle Lady of the Moon," by Coates. "The Kings Henchman" and "Peter bteson," by Deems Taylor, were de-ribed by the speaker who played on e piano short selections, showing eir moods, styles and harmonies. The King's Henchman," the words of hich were written by Edna St. Vin-nt Millay, one of America's leading omen poets; and "Peter Ibbetson," dapted from the French novel by du aurier, are the most recent import-nt contributions to American com-osition.

This program brought to a close e very successful year's work of the Neighborhood Music club and the members feel that great credit is due the chairman, Mrs. H. E. Inlow, for her splendid leadership and co-operation with the program committee.

Complete Study Of Art of Florence

The study of the art of Florence, outlined in the fall by Mrs. Walter M. Pierce, was completed yesterday afternoon when the members of the Art Research met at the home of Mrs. George McDonald for the final meeting of the year. Mrs. H. H. Cleaver, who has served as president during the past year, was elected to the office again; and Mrs. H. Lawrence Hull was selected as critic.

Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Cleaver discussed Leonardo da Vinci, the fofmer dealing with Leonardo as a painter; and the latter with him as the universal genius. Leonardo was a true Renaissance man in his versatility. Mrs. C. M. Humphreys discussed Verrocchio, stressing his contribution to the church of San Lorenzo where many of his paintings were found.

Mrs. H. A. Zurbrick reviewed the autobiography of Cellini, a racy and animated account of the life of a Renaissance adventurer. "Rafael, His Art in Florence" was discussed by Mrs. Fred H. Kiddle; and Miss Minnie Holman dealt with Albertinelli, describing "The Visitation," his most famous painting.

The Art Research club will study art in Rome next winter, and the program will again be outlined by Mrs. Pierce.

Tea was served at the close of the afternoon by Mrs. McDonald, assisted by Mrs. P. A. McDonald.

R. N. A. Convention To Be Held Here

The district convention of the Royal Neighbors of America will be held in La Grande on May 12, and final plans for the event were made last night when the local lodge met at the Odd Fellows hall. La Grande, Milton, Freewater, Pendleton, Baker, Halfway and Cove will send delegates to the convention, and members of the Walla Walla, Wash., lodge also have been invited to attend. Mrs. Velma Vedder, oracle of the La Grande group, announces.

Mrs. Mabel Thompson, of La Grande, is president of the convention; Mrs. Mabel Ragsdale, of Baker, vice president; and Mrs. Bessie McManus, La Grande, secretary-treasurer.

Dinner will be served at six o'clock by the women of the Christian church, at the church, and all members of the local lodge are requested to attend. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Bunting two days before the convention.

Committee chairmen are Mrs. Pearl Wagner, reception; Mrs. Ella Koeter, decorating; Mrs. Mayme Johnson, noon lunch; Mrs. Velma Vedder, entertainment.

Following the business meeting last night, the winning team in the attendance and membership drive, headed by Mrs. Vedder, were entertained by Mrs. Tressy Suydam and her losing side. A two-course luncheon was served by the losers who were dressed to represent Chinese cooks.

Miss Lois Nelson Will Review Book

Miss Lois Nelson will review "The Craft of the Critic," by S. Stephenson Smith, of the University of Oregon, at a meeting of the Literature group of the American Association of University Women tomorrow evening at 7:30 at the home of Mrs. Fred E. Kiddle, in Island City. "The Craft of the Critic" is one of the few profoundly scholarly books, written by an Oregon author, and is drawing favorable comment from many sides because of its wit, its breadth encompassing an unbelievable knowledge of books and authors, and the sagacity of the comments on literature made by the author.

Mr. Smith is himself an interesting character, one-time Rhodes scholar at Oxford, professor of English at the University of Oregon, and coach of the varsity tennis team.

Tomorrow evening's meeting will be the final meeting of the year for the group, terminating an interesting program of reviews held during the past winter and planned by the chairman, Mrs. Fred E. Kiddle.

The next meeting will be held on May 9, at 7:30 at the Moose hall.

KITTY FREW

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: "David is in love with you," Kitty Frew is told by Dorcas Taber. But Kitty has thought David, her husband's half-brother, merely a loyal friend. She needs her friends, for her husband Gar borrows money from his mother instead of earning it, and is attracted by Marge Crosby.

Chapter 34

SUSPICION

KITTY shrank as though the other had struck her. She made a little quick sound of protest. Her face flamed and paled and flamed again.

"It—isn't so!" she answered faintly.

Dorcas had quieted. She put her hand on Kitty's shoulder. "I was a beast to say that. You didn't know, of course. David wouldn't let you know by any word or sign. You must forgive my telling you. I've messed things up, I'm afraid. I lost hold of myself— You made me angry, you seemed so stupid. You see, Kitty, I happen to care a great deal about David's happiness—"

Kitty stirred only enough to draw herself away from Dorcas' hand. But Dorcas went on, unnoticing. "I used to think that David would love me, some day, the way a man must love me if I marry him. But after I saw him with you I knew. I'm not jealous—those are things one can't help. But I feel very sorry for poor old David."

Kitty felt tears on her cheeks and put up her hands to wipe them away. Her hands shut tight over her eyes.

"You are just imagining it, Dorcas—" she whispered. It wasn't so, it couldn't be so!

"Oh, no. We've talked it out, David and I."

Kitty got up quickly, moving a little blindly. "I must go." She would not look at Dorcas. She put on her coat, jammed her soft hat down on her head. "I wish you hadn't told me," she cried hotly, youthfully.

"I wish I hadn't told you. David will never forgive me. Or you, perhaps." She followed Kitty to the door, and at the door she put out a hand and resolutely detained her.

"Kitty, you must know what David's doing now. They refused that other manuscript he sent to them, but they want him to write another. He's gone down to his place to start it. He's all enthusiasm over it. You wouldn't know him, Kitty. He's found himself."

"Poor old David," Dorcas had said. Later, thinking of this, Kitty thought later. Kitty struggled to smother a sympathy for David in her own heart. She did not think any more: "It isn't so." Somehow, she knew, now, that it was so. The memory of countless moments with David, expressions she had caught on his face, words he had not said, his concern and consideration came back to her with a new understanding.

He'd finished his book to prove himself to her. He was working desperately on another one.

And she couldn't share it with him! Dorcas had made that impossible. "I'll never forgive her," Kitty thought, indignantly. She had no compassion for Dorcas, who had admitted so frankly that she cared for David. "She's spoiled everything between David and me."

That Margery Crosby was going abroad in April became an established fact. Every one talked of it; Marge talked of it.

"Mother and I are going to travel during the summer, and then I'm going to stay in Paris."

"Stay, Marge? For the winter?"

"The rest of my life, perhaps."

She said that, whenever she had a chance, always a little sadly, suggesting that she was seeking exile for some mysterious reason.

"Is Marge really going to live in Paris?" Kitty had asked Gar impulsively.

"How do I know what she'll do?" Gar had countered with such obvious annoyance as to silence Kitty, leaving her troubled.

She noticed that Gar was moody, cross, restless, these days. Her old torment of fear and unwilling suspicion doubled.

One evening Gar did not come home for dinner or telephone. He came in about eight o'clock, offering no explanation. No, he wasn't hungry. What did they have on for the night? Nothing? "Well, let's go to the movies. I don't want to sit here, doing nothing."

Kitty had an impulse to tell him she didn't feel like going to the movies. The waiting, the lonely dinner served by Carley, the little suspicions that had lifted their ugly heads, had worn her almost to a breaking point.

"You might at least tell me where you've been!" she said sharply.

"I stopped in at Mother's. You can't kick about that, can you?"

And she'd rather he'd said he had been with Marge! She did not answer him.

A round of informal parties in Marge's honor began. Every night Gar and Kitty joined the others to dance somewhere.

"We'll need to go to Bridgewater to rest," Kitty said to Gar, laughing. "Why, I've lost ten pounds, I believe."

She was thinner; her bright color had gone. But Gar had not noticed.

The bridesmaid's dress had come from Felicia's. She put it on for Gar to see it.

"Isn't it lovely?"

And Gar said briefly that it was all right, he guessed. He'd scowled as if irritated by something.

Fear grew sharper in Kitty's heart, a nameless fear, for she would not give it any name. She had a sensation of fighting with empty hands, blindly. She was inexpressibly lonely; she realized sharply that after all these months in Winton she had no real friends! She would not go to Dorcas, now. Carol, wrapped in her own troubles, was no comfort. She could not talk to David—and most of all she wanted to talk to David. She allowed herself a little angry resentment that David had been so stupid. He hadn't had any right to fall in love with her!

"Everything's so useless," she cried aloud one evening when she was dressing to go out with Gar. And the sound of the words frightened her. It was so.

"Go back to Bridgewater, call it a mistake." The words leaped out at her. What if she did?

And then Gar came in, hurrying. "I'm sorry I'm so late, Kit. Ready? It won't take me a minute to bathe."

She clung to him.

"Why, what's the matter, sweet? You're trembling!"

"I guess I'm just horribly tired, Gar." That was it, of course. Her lips pressed Gar's, she felt humble, shaken.

"Do you want to go to-night? Sure you're up to it, Kit?" Gar was all concern.

She was ready to tell him that she'd rather not go; she thought swiftly of an evening, alone with Gar—

"Isobel will understand. I'll tell her you're bushed."

"Oh, I'll go. I'm all right, Gar." And then that nagging suspicion that maybe Gar'd rather go without her.

Paul Somerset was always one of every party. More often than not he escorted Marge. Kitty knew that the others laughed at his devotion, commented on the indifference Marge showed him. And Gar, to Kitty, talked scathingly of him. After Isobel's party, talking it over, Gar said: "That big bounder, Somerset—I'd like to punch his face in for him."

"But why does Marge bother with him?"

Gar did not answer her. She saw him scowl. She changed the subject quickly.

More and more she looked forward to the respite of two weeks in Bridgewater. Sally had written: "We're only going to spend a few days on our honeymoon, Kitty. We'll be back in a week at the longest. I hope you stay on for awhile. You can help me get settled."

"And afterwards I'll begin again." To think it was to admit failure but Kitty faced it honestly. Here evehything was too muddled to see it clearly but there—some day she'd walk alone to the top of Cowper's hill, and think things out squarely. And then, perhaps, when she had herself in hand, she could talk it all over with Gar. She'd begin: "It's my fault, partly, Gar—"

They'd move into a less expensive apartment; she'd budget their money again.

An errand took her into Stratton's and as was her custom when she went there she hunted out Josie for a moment's chat. Josie beamed on her.

"Say, if you'd come in a day later you wouldn't of found me here, Kitty. I'm going to be married." She said it loudly and the other girls, within hearing, smiled but in a friendly way. Josie's love-affairs were their's.

Kitty rejoiced heartily with Josie. And when she left her it was with a deep respect for this girl who knew so well how to meet life.

She was thinking so intently of Josie that she did not see David, approaching, until he was confronting her, speaking her name.

"Oh—" The color poured to her face.

(Copyright, Jane Abbott)

When Kitty next sees David, on Monday, she is in a panic of terror and suspense.

PROMISE PERSONALS

By Mrs. Bertha Carper
(Observer Correspondent)

PROMISE (Special)—C. P. Carper and son, Melvin, spent most of last week in the valley. They returned home Friday by way of the Powwatka ridge.

Miss Lilian Carper visited from Wednesday until Friday at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Ravenna McDonald.

Charles Moore and wife moved to the Truman Poulson place near the McNees canyon the first of the week.

Jack Smith bought some hay of C. P. Carper and was hauling it Monday and Tuesday.

Monday, Ivan Garrett and Robert Carper left for Whitney, Ore., where they expect to saw logs.

Vesper Henderson and John Carper spent last week repairing some bridges which the high water had washed out, this side of Maxville.

Henry Snuffer went to Wallowa Tuesday to purchase a new plow.

C. R. Robey and John Carper went to Wallowa the first of the week, going to secure some seed grain.

Roy Henderson is plowing for Mrs. Nellie Fleshman.

Grandpa Thompson and Fay Bursall visited Saturday at Fred Trump's.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Poulson, of Upper Powwatka, visited over the weekend at Obe Swearingen's.

Charles and Dee Moore were packing some grain to the river, Saturday and put it across the river with the cable Sunday. It was for George Knight, of Eden.

Mr. Gorbett and his son, Duane, have been digging a trail across the Wallupi canyon making a trail by which they could move their sheep to Middle Point. Mr. Gorbett has always gone around several miles to get to Middle Point but this will make it much easier to get the sheep to the range.

Winnie Roby is staying with Mrs. Alice Smith and going to school.

Hoover Puts Veto On Act Pertaining To Indian Claims

WASHINGTON, Apr. 26 (AP)—President Hoover Monday vetoed his second bill of the present session of congress, sending back to the senate an act pertaining to certain claims of Indians residing in the state of Oregon on the grounds that it would place upon the government "unknown burdens of expenditure."

The rejected bill would confer upon the court of claims jurisdiction to hear and determine claims of certain tribes in Oregon.

The president, in a brief veto message, asserted the bill "throws the door wide open" to many unknown claims of ancient origin.

"I want full justice for our Indian wards," the president said, "and would have no objection to the presentation of claims arising under the treaties named in the bill, both ratified and unratified treaties."

The president said, however, he had been advised all funds promised to the Indians in question under ratified treaties had been appropriated and paid. He contended it would not be proper for the government to obligate itself after 75 years to defend suits for unknown claims not based upon any regular treaty, agreement, act of congress, or executive order.

The first bill vetoed by Mr. Hoover this session was a measure for the private relief of a single individual.

STATE POLICE NAB HIT-RUN TRUCK DRIVER

SALEM, Apr. 26 (AP)—Paul Bendele, 50, of Drain, was captured by state police last night near Jefferson, following an automobile accident alleged caused by the truck driven by Bendele, and which sent Mrs. G. H. Hibarger, of Marshfield, to the hospital critically injured. Bendele was held in lieu of $2000 bail, charged with reckless driving.

Mrs. Hibarger, about 69, was in a touring car going south when her car was sideswiped by the truck, witnesses said. The truck did not stop when the touring car turned over, pinning both Mr. and Mrs. Hibarger under the front seat. The woman suffered a fractured vertebra and several bruises and burns about her face from acid. Her husband was not injured.

State police officers said that Bendele had previously been involved in traffic troubles. On March 2, they said, a truck driven by him collided with another machine near Drain, resulting in the death of a child. He was exonerated by a coroner's jury.

with Mr. Hoover, the manufacturer apparently made reference to the administration's recent anti-hoarding campaign.

"I told the president," he said, "that we're selling all the motor cars we can make, and we're getting lots of cash—much of it in big bills. I mean by that old-style, large size bills that might have been hidden for some time."

"If the people who quit business to go into gambling several years ago would quit that and go back to work at producing something, they could sell all they produce," he said.

Antique Temple Is Found In Ashes

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Apr. 26 (AP)—German archaeologists, looking for the ancient Greek theatre at Smyrna, have excavated an antique temple with eleven domes and many marble columns buried deep in the ashes of volcanic eruptions.

They called specialists from Germany to identify the edifice. The German Professor Weygant has offered to finance extensive excavations at Smyrna, one of the greatest of the ancient cities of Asia Minor.

Ralph Guldahl, young Texan now golf pro at St. Louis Country club, won his first four starts in early season matches and tournaments.

Complete Plans For Merging Of Three Churches

By Mrs. C. A. Hunter
(Observer Correspondent)

WALLOWA (Special) — Dr. D. A. Thompson, of Portland, synodical missionary in the Presbyterian church was in Wallowa Sunday morning to hold services and discuss plans made at the meeting of the Grande Ronde presbytery held in Baker, to merge the Wallowa, Lostine and Elgin churches. Rev. L. B. Williams, who has been pastor of the Elgin church for the past four years, was recommended as pastor of the three churches with his home to be in Wallowa. Dr. Thompson also made a visit to the Lostine church Sunday and both congregations voted unanimously to accept the arrangement and it is expected that Mr. Williams will be in Wallowa to begin work in the new field on May 1.

The junior-senior banquet was held Saturday evening in the banquet hall at the High school with 60 in attendance. Spring flowers formed attractive decorations for the table and small favors, with a rosebud the class flower, were used at each place. Tom Willett, junior class wizard, acted as toastmaster and kept the party in gales of laughter. Speeches were made by Howard Johnson, student body president, Miss Catherine Calouri, senior class advisor, Miss Melba Hanks, junior class advisor and by Supt. O. F. Campbell. Arthur Thompson, junior student, played a piano solo and Betty McCrae and Shirley Peffer, fifth grade girls danced the minuet. The banquet was prepared and served by the women of the Christian church.

Mrs. J. B. Gregory accompanied by Mrs. L. F. Allen, Mrs. George Dale, Mrs. O. F. Campbell, Mrs. Fred Furst and Mrs. C. A. Hunter motored to Baker Thursday morning and the women spent the day as guests of Mrs. J. L. Peterson. Mrs. Peterson had several Baker guests in for luncheon, which was served at 1 o'clock and contract bridge was played at three tables during the afternoon. Mrs. Gregory held high score and was awarded a beautiful prize. Mrs. Peterson presented each of the Wallowa guests with a bouquet of sweet peas.

Mrs. J. B. Gregory entertained at a delightful 1 o'clock luncheon for members of the Friday Bridge club at her home Friday afternoon. Two tables were at play during the afternoon and the prize for high score was awarded to Mrs. Fred Furst and consolation prize fell to Mrs. O. F. Campbell. The club will meet with Mrs. Furst in two weeks.

A baby daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Pete Brandon on Wednesday, Apr. 13, at the Wallowa hospital.

Clarence Mumford drove to Halfway Saturday for his wife and small daughter who have been visiting there for ten days. They returned home Sunday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. F. F. Jones left by car Saturday for Portland and Eugene to be away a week on a business trip for a visit with relatives.

Lyle Kiddle, of La Grande, was a Wallowa visitor Wednesday en route home from Joseph where he had been transacting business.

Joe Thompson, who has been dangerously ill for a week of pneumonia, is still very low, it is reported. Mrs. E. Z. Thompson is caring for him at his home.

Ruth Osborne, 19-year-old Sherbyville, Mo., girl athlete, recently broke three high school records in one afternoon.

A hundred University of Oklahoma football players held a meeting to pledge support to Lewie Hardage, their new head coach.

TROUBLED ALL LIFE WITH CONSTIPATION

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Real Relief

If you are subject to headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness and other effects that so often result from constipation, read Mrs. Turner's voluntary letter.

"For the past six months I have been eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and cannot praise it too highly.

"Am fifty years of age. All my life have been troubled with constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but has cured me.

"I thought I couldn't like the taste of bran, but Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delicious." — Mrs. C. J. Turner, 507 Hanover Street, Fall River, Mass.

Tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things which overcome constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Certainly this is more natural than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

What have you to trade? The Liberty will place your "Swap" ad free of charge! Each day in the Liberty ad, space will be provided to advertise the things which you have to trade.

HERE'S HOW . . . .

Place the name of the article you have to trade and article that you wish to get on a slip of paper and turn it in at the Observer office, limiting the ad to 15 words. Ads will be placed in the order received. Watch this space tomorrow for the first "swap" ad.
