Winn then concluded: "After Cristy left they voted on the three bills on two separate occasions. Each time they voted 'no bill' and when the report was offered to Cristy he refused to accept it. Finally the grand jury returned a bill for second degree murder—which we contend was coercion."

ALL IN READINESS FOR HEALTH ROUND-UP ON MONDAY MORNING (Continued from Page One) ailments be carried out.

A number of health talks, pertaining to diseases most prevalent in young children, have been discussed. The first concerned teeth and their relation to health: nose, throat, eyes and ears; immunization; and the final health talk is on malnutrition.

Poor posture in young children is often the result of faulty nutrition. Fatigue may also be a factor and in some instances there may be actual disease of the bones.

Malnutrition, they state, affects children, rich or poor, and therefore the training of good health habits is one of the most important parts of a child's education.

Such a condition among pre-school children is most often the result of poor health habits, such as insufficient rest, irregular meals, or unbalanced diet; or it may be the result of conditions as diseased tonsils or defective teeth.

The body requires three kinds of food, protein, carbohydrates and fats, and for a balanced diet for children, it is suggested that a physician be consulted.

Among the most common diseases caused by malnutrition is rickets, and scurvy is also found sometimes among children.

Both can be prevented by sunshine, proper foods, fresh air. Signs of rickets are pale, pasty complexion, nervousness, swells about the head and neck, and the bones are soft while the teeth are slow in forming.

Scurvy is not so well known, but when suffering from it, children are very restless, cry easily, are pale and have a tenderness just above or below the knee. The child may appear fat but has no appetite for food and does not gain.

The things which cure rickets and scurvy would have prevented them. All children should have fresh fruits, milk, vegetables and fruits; fresh air, sunshine and exercise.

Training the child in good health habits is important and should be begun early so as to become a routine. Some of the essential habits are eating slowly, chewing thoroughly, eating regularly, drinking a quantity of water, cleanliness, lots of sleep, out-of-doors exercises, and should be taught in the school if not in the home.

Colt, Mrs. Pierce, Callister Cause New Move Today (Continued from Page One) of approximately 10 per cent as compared to former budgets. All salaries were not reduced but some teachers were eliminated.

The board adopted a report of the curricula committee providing for the granting of bachelors and masters degrees in vocational education at Oregon State. This matter had been the subject of considerable controversy.

New President Walter Redford, teacher of geography at the Ashland Normal school, was named to the presidency of the school. Redford has been at the Normal school six years. He will serve under J. A. Churchill, former president of the school, and now dean of elementary teacher training and president of Monmouth Normal.

Sammons, in accepting the job of going east with Starr in search of the new chancellor, announced he was going "without cost to the taxpayers." He said he was going away on private business and would be glad to take some of his time next month while in the east to look for the new man.

A. B. Hall, president of the University of Oregon, reported that at a recent meeting of heads of educational institutions in the east, he outlined the new Oregon program. He said all the educators who saw it approved it. Lucy Lewis of Corvallis was named director of libraries and R. H. Thomas of Portland was appointed superintendent of buildings and grounds of all the schools.
