

Extreme Low Prices Near An End -- Turn Of Tide Is Seen

MANY ITEMS ON PRODUCE MARKET CLIMBING TODAY

Strawberries, Oranges, Cucumbers, Chickens, Prunes, Wheat all Appear on the Upgrade.

PORTLAND, May 9 (AP) — It may be that the tide of extreme low prices for farm products has definitely turned for there were an unusual number of items in the wholesale produce list for the week's opening that reflected advances instead of declines, the Journal said today.

Especially the low price on strawberries has already been reached and a stiff rise was shown for California during the day. Oranges were in almost unlimited supply to quote but are expected to become fairly plentiful within a few days.

On the upside of the price list again with the new season coming.

Wholesale cucumber market was firmer for the day, this being mostly the result of weather that creates a demand for such offerings.

The chicken trade felt the betterment with the low price on light hens advanced by some interests which were trying to get them over cheaper.

Recent betterment in the dried prune price was a reflection of the willingness of the world's trade to believe that the extreme low point for the season was reached some time ago.

Late demand for wheat to go to Europe, although not as yet touching the Pacific coast, indicates that in this line too the world's trade appears confident that the worst is over. For several weeks past there has been a like betterment in the market for coarse grains, such as oats and barley.

INSPECTORS ON RAMPAGE
PORTLAND, May 9 (AP) — Government inspectors are on a rampage against violators of the law which requires at least 80 per cent butterfat in stock that moves interstate. Brokers and other handlers have experienced trouble lately with creameries who ship butter that contains too little fat.

Market for butter reflects a generally steady appearance with strength indicated in spots. San Francisco is still keenly seeking supplies from the Pacific northwest. Butterfat values are firm.

Market is practically unchanged in the egg trade. No change in values is reflected and many unsatisfied producers are still holding advances in check by selling direct to retailers.

There was little change in the general cheese market situation for the week's opening. Prices at practically all leading producing and distributive centers were inclined to show more or less steadiness and even strength in spots.

Wheat Markets Slightly Firmer During the Week

WASHINGTON, May 9 (Special)

Grain markets strengthened slightly toward the close of the week ending May 6, influenced by light offerings and some improvement in demand according to the weekly grain market review of the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics. Wheat turned firmer with the advance in security markets and the sale of several cargoes of Canadian wheat to Russia. Feed grains advanced as a result of higher marketings and a material improvement in the shipping demand for corn. Rye had independent strength, reflecting an advance in Canadian markets, where export inquiry was more active. Flax was weak and lower under the influence of more favorable conditions for seeding the new crop, slightly larger offerings and continued dull demand for oil and meal.

Domestic winter wheat made generally favorable progress during the week except in Western Nebraska and the western third of Kansas, where prospects are still poor. Private estimates May 1 indicated an outlook about the same as was officially forecast from conditions April 1. Abandonment was placed at over 14 per cent. European winter wheat conditions were somewhat variable. Reports from Germany indicated winter killing somewhat below normal, with the condition of the crop May 1 a little above average. Cool weather retarded growth in France and Northern Italy. Seeding of winter wheat proceeded with generally favorable soil conditions in Argentina. Weather was also favorable for fall seeding in Australia.

Late start Spring wheat is getting a late start in both North America and Russia because of delayed seedings on account of wet soil. The moderate however, growth when the weather becomes warmer. The spring wheat crop in the U. S. made generally favorable progress during the week. Much of it was up to good stands and growing nicely in southern portions of the belt. Wet soil delayed seeding operations in Canada, but prospects for germination have been much improved throughout the prairie provinces. Seeding was well along at the close of the week in Western Manitoba and Southern Alberta, but just started in Northwestern Saskatchewan and Northern Alberta. Russian spring wheat seeding has been retarded by rains, but is somewhat ahead of last season, when it was very late. In the Lower Volga region and Northern Caucasus the combined seedings total only 3,840,000 acres to April 25, compared with 3,983,000 acres last year and 10,858,000 acres two years ago to that date. Final spring wheat acreage in these regions totaled 12,815,000 acres last year.

European wheat markets were about steady during the week, with native wheats quoted slightly higher than a week ago at important continental markets. A new Spanish decree, permitting a total importation of 100,000 tons of wheat, with the duty to be adjusted every ten days to conform to changes in exchange. Importation, however, is subject to approval of the ministry of agriculture. Russia purchased five cargoes of Canadian wheat during the week for May and June shipment from Vancouver to Vladivostok.

Black sea shipments totaled nearly 600,000 bushels of wheat during the week, but included no Russian grain. Southern hemisphere shipments continued of good volume, totaling 4,435,000 bushels from Australia. North American shipments were also fairly large and consisted principally of Canadian wheat.

At the close of the market May 6 U. S. No. 1 hard winter was offered at Liverpool for May shipment at 60 @ 1/4c, compared with quotations of Australian wheat at 60 @ 1/4c. No. 2 Manitoba for May shipment at 60 @ 1/4c. Argentine Rosado at 56 @ 1/2c per bushel. Native milling wheat was quoted May 6 at Hamburg at $1.78 1/2, at Paris at $1.78 1/2, and at Milan at $1.67 1/2. Italian Durum was selling at Naples at $1.88 1/2, and a Franco Durum at Marseilles at $1.59 per bushel.

Slightly Firmer Domestic cash wheat markets were mostly slightly firmer with futures, but were influenced also by lighter offerings. Receipts of winter wheat at the principal central and southern western markets totaled only 1,280 cars. Receipts at Kansas City dropped to 494 cars, with the protein of the inspections averaging 12.3 per cent. The average protein of the receipts for the crop year to date was 11.86 per cent compared with 12.21 per cent for the same period last season. The smaller receipts made a more active and general demand, with mills, shippers and elevator operators in the market for supplies. Premiums on the intermediate types strengthened slightly and at the close of the market May 6 ordinary protein No. 1 hard winter was quoted at 51 1/2 @ 51 1/2c and 12 per cent protein at 51 1/2 @ 54c and 13 per cent protein at 56 @ 57 1/2c per bu. No. 2 hard winter, ordinary protein, sold at Omaha at 49c and No. 2 yellow hard at 49 1/2c per bu. Local mills absorbed most of the offerings at that market.

Western mills continued to provide the principal outlet for wheat at the Denver market, but receipts were light and readily taken. 12-14 per cent protein wheat was in the best demand and 12 1/2 per cent protein No. 2 hard winter was quoted at 40 @ 41c, 13 1/2 per cent at 44 @ 45c and 14 1/2 per cent protein at 48 @ 49c f. o. b. Eastern Colorado points. Export inquiry continued inactive at Port Worth, but mill demand was fairly active, with 12 per cent protein No. 1 hard winter quoted at 60 1/2 @ 61c delivered Galveston export rate points. Hard winter wheat brought a premium of about 2 1/2c over soft wheat at St. Louis because of an active mill inquiry for the light offerings of hard wheat. No. 2 hard winter was quoted in that market May 6 at 56 1/2c. Soft winter wheat was quoted at 53 1/2c for No. 2 red, with demand only fair and principally from local elevators. Milling inquiry for soft winter wheat was also less active at Cincinnati. Most of the offerings at that market were going directly to elevators. No. 2 soft red winter wheat was quoted at the close of the week at 52 @ 55 1/2c per bushel.

Coast Market Pacific coast markets remained about unchanged. Trading in the Pacific northwest was dull and featureless, with demand light and offerings of small volume. While spring wheat seeding in Washington and Oregon was delayed, crop conditions were reported mostly favorable. Marketings remained light, receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals totaling only 339 cars for the week. Demand was quiet and principally from local mills. Exporters were not actively in the market because of lack of export sales. One sale of 250 tons of wheat to the United Kingdom was reported at Portland, which was the first export business at that time for some time. Demand from California was slack with millers in that area taking only sufficient for immediate needs and feeders turning more to lower priced barley. At the close of the market May 6 B. B. bluestem hard winter wheat was quoted at Portland at 74c, soft and western white at 63 1/2 @ 65c, hard winter, northern spring and western red at 63c, sacked, basis No. 1. Western white sold at Seattle at 65c, western red at 64 1/2c and bluestem hard white at 75c, sacked. The outstanding feature of the Vancouver market was the sale of five cargoes of wheat to Russia at prices around 13 cents per bushel under Portland quotations. At the close of the market May 6, No. 1 Manitoba northern was quoted at Vancouver at 63 @ 1/4c and No. 2 Manitoba at 59 @ 1/4c which are equivalent in United States currency to 57 and 53 @ 1/4c respectively.

Interest. The royal Hawaiian band was playing on the pier and lots of flowers were piled high on the shoulders of departing individuals. Almost unnoticed, the submarine tender from Pearl Harbor naval station 12 miles away edged up beside the big liner Mrs. Fortescue appeared on its deck. Then came blue-jackets with Lieutenant Massie's dog, "Chris," and an assortment of baggage. Lieut. and Mrs. Massie then emerged, accompanied by Captain the submarine base, to which Massie had been attached. The party stepped into a cargo port of the Malolo. Subpoena in hand, Dewey Mookini, a Honolulu policeman, stood there waiting for Mrs. Massie. Captain Wortman lowered his heavy shoulder and collided with Mookini while Mrs. Massie started up a corridor to her stateroom. "I shall report you to your superior officer," Wortman stormed. "You assaulted me!" shouted the policeman. Wortman, panting, thrust Mookini against a wall while Mrs. Massie got into her stateroom and Mrs. Fortescue followed. Mookini wiggled away, pushed the door open and tried to read it to Mrs. Massie. The door slammed shut in his face. Then Mrs. Fortescue emerged, eyes blazing. "Will someone go for Mr. Darrow?" she pleaded. There was an exchange of words between Captain Wortman and the policeman. Massie approached them, extending his hand to Mookini. "No hard feelings here," said Massie. "I know what your duty is." Captain Wortman then extended his hand to the policeman and they also made up. The lieutenant then invited Lono McCallum and Arthur Stagar, detectives accompanying Mookini, into the Massie stateroom. They remained several minutes and signed Massie's scrap book. As the moment for sailing neared, Massie knocked at the stateroom door and Mrs. Massie appeared. Her eyes were wet with tears. "You won't try to go in again?" Massie pleaded, turning to the policeman. They assured him they would not. Stagar extended his hand through the door to say good-bye to Mrs. Massie. Mrs. Fortescue saw him and seized him by the arm, thinking he was trying to force his way in. She apologized when she saw she had misunderstood his motive.

Subpoena Not Served His shoulders piled high with leas. Darrow went to the stateroom and conferred with Mrs. Fortescue and the Massies. On emerging he said the subpoena had not been served. Frank Thompson, another defense attorney, also said the subpoena had not been served and separate the only effect it would have would be to subject Mrs. Massie to contempt proceedings should she ever return.

But no member of the Fortescue-Massie party cast his lei into the harbor as the Malolo headed out for San Francisco. There is an old belief that if a departing visitor casts his lei into the waters he will come back. Mrs. Fortescue, Mr. and Mrs. Lefebvre, Mrs. Helen Ripley, sister of Mrs. Fortescue, Robert Bell, their brother, and Lieut. L. H. C. Johnson, a lawyer who represented the navy in the defense of the lynching case, were at the rail as the ship left the dock. Darrow and the Massies were nowhere in sight. Their sailing left none of the lynching case principals in Honolulu. Jones and Lord, the enlisted men, having sailed yesterday on San Francisco bound destroyers. Mrs. Massie's departure was generally interpreted as putting an end to the attack case trial. She had told her story twice in court, once in the first attack trial in which the jury disagreed, and again as a defense witness in the lynching case. Darrow had urged her not to go on with it. Public Prosecutor John C. Kelley, at whose instance the strenuous efforts were made to serve the subpoena, seemed bitter at her departure. After the ship sailed it became known that Darrow was considering a series of mass meetings, the first to be in San Francisco, with the idea of bringing pressure upon Governor Judd to give Mrs. Fortescue and the convicted men a full pardon. Governor Judd said last night he had not reached a decision on behalf of the quartet. He termed as "a lot of bosh" reports that he planned to resign.

Intermediaries, refused to give any information today concerning the negotiations. The finding of a note referring to the Lindbergh baby was reported to Elizabeth City, N. It follows: "We are afraid to return the Lindbergh baby home. It is on Broad street, Elizabeth City, N. C." The note was unsigned and bore no symbol of any kind.

Exchange of Ham For Stale Bread Brings Mad Rush to Moscow Stores

One smart boa, made of white coque feathers falling from the chin to the shoulder line is worn with a small white lacquered straw hat tipped with a black ribbon cockade.

BUTTERFAT

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9 (AP) — Butterfat f. o. b. San Francisco 20c.

Liked Disorderly Hair

The celebrated Norwegian author, Ibsen, loved to keep his hair in disorder and always carried a little toilet case, containing a looking glass and a comb attached to the lining of his gray suit. He would often remove his hat to look into the mirror to see how his hair was lying and if not rough enough to suit would use the comb to give it the requisite tangle.

antipathy of the population—born of long hours of patient waiting to buy food—toward forming in queues to take their turn to enter the stores.

Hundreds of men and women with great packs of bread in their hands or strapped to their backs besieged the three stores in an effort to get in. The scramble became so great that the stores were finally forced to provide quantities as hard to provide enough to grow stale, that the stores finally had to revert to the queue system in an effort to preserve order. One citizen in his hunger for ham or sausage brought eight kilos of flour, which the stores refused to accept. He probably had been hoarding it for years. A number of customers tried to sell fresh bread without success, and later it was found that sales from the bread stores had so great a not-mously during the period that the ham and sausage offer was in effect. After the three stores had collected a ton and a half of stale bread before the first day ended, the stores forced their price for the bread to three kopecks a kilo. The action of the swine trust was severely criticized by the newspapers, which termed it speculation.
