

Robbery of Bank Only a Blind To Cover Shortage

MEDFORD, Ore., May 12 (AP)—Police announced here yesterday that Alvin Tollefson, 25, cashier of the Central Point State bank, confessed that his report of the robbery of the bank Tuesday was false and that he made it in an attempt to cover a shortage.

Tollefson, whose father owns the controlling interest in the bank, told police that he was alone, held him up and escaped with a large sum of money. Suspicion was directed at the story when no one could be found who saw the robber enter or leave the bank, nor could any trace be found of him.

Officials said Tollefson admitted he fabricated the story in an attempt to cover his theft of $13,900 lost in gambling. Officers recovered $900 in a coffee pot in his home.

Tollefson's wife, a bookkeeper in the bank, was in a rear room when the cashier rushed in to tell her the bank had been robbed.

Tollefson formerly lived in Stites, Idaho.

Badger Brothers Shy From Seeking Same Grid Posts

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Four pairs of football-playing brothers on the University of Wisconsin squad are unwilling to keep from treading on each other's toes as they scramble for varsity jobs.

Capt. Greg Kabat, two-year veteran at guard, isn't worried about displacement by his younger brother, Francis, for the latter aspires to be an end.

Nello Pacetti, veteran back, has a giant younger brother, Mario, who is a leading tackle candidate.

The Rottier brothers, both freshmen, seek line jobs, Rudolph at end and Peter at tackle.

Nick and George Deanovich are striving for center and end posts, respectively.

FIN-SHAPED CAR TO RACE ON INDIANAPOLIS TRACK

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—For the first time a fin-shaped car, similar in principle to the cars used in establishing world speed records in Florida, will appear in the Indianapolis motor speedway race this year.

The fin is useful on the straightaway beach courses in holding the car to its course, but the experts are wondering what will happen when such a car barrels into the Indianapolis speedway turns at high speed.

The car is to be driven by Babe Stapp, whose arm was broken in an accident at Ascot, has announced that it will take more than a broken arm to keep him from trying out that new car.

Joe Dawson, Kansas City Blue hurler, spent two years out of baseball in the aviation game.

Kidnap Victim to Accuse Four

Horrors of captivity for 34 hours in the hands of kidnapers will be recounted by Mrs. Nell Donnelly, for picture, who is head of a $3,000,000 Kansas City, Mo., dress concern, when the trial of four alleged abductors starts in that city May 2. Mrs. Donnelly was kidnaped from the driveway of her home with her chauffeur, driven to a lonely farmhouse outside of the city and held for $75,000 ransom. She says the kidnapers, after threatening to blind her, became afraid and took her back to the city, where she was freed. Two of the alleged kidnapers who will stand trial are shown in the insets. Right is William Lacy Browning, farmer, and left is Paul Scheidt, dairyman. The two others who will be tried are Mrs. Ethel Dewey and Charles Mele. Mrs. Dewey's husband, suspected of complicity in the kidnapping plot, is still at large.

Florence Allen Is Nominated In Ohio Primaries

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 12 (AP)—Judge Florence E. Allen of the Ohio supreme court was nominated by the Democrats of the 2nd (Cleveland) congressional district in Tuesday's balloting. She will oppose Chester C. Bolton (R.) of Cleveland in November. Both are pledged to a program for a change of the national prohibition laws.

Judge Allen is the second woman to win a congressional nomination in Ohio at the current primary. Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson, of Dayton, was selected by the third Ohio district to oppose Congressman Byron B. Harlan, of Dayton, next November.

WINNING TRACK MEET EASY FOR YOUNG GEORGIA CADET

ATLANTA (AP)—Coach C. M. Paget has discovered a real "one-man track team" at Georgia Military academy.

He is Perrin Walker, 19-year-old cadet, who so far this year has scored 138 points for his team out of a possible 140. He has won 26 first places in six track meets.

Walker has no specialty—he runs in almost everything. He competes in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and takes part in the 880-yard and quarter-mile relays.

For the 100 his best time is 10-1-10. He has scored six feet one inch in the high jump, boasts a record of 22 feet in the running broad jump, has thrown the discus 120 feet and his best throw with the 12-pound shot is 48 feet.

CADDOCK TOYS WITH IDEA OF RETURN TO MAT GAME

WALNUT, Ia. (AP)—After a 12-year retirement Earl Caddock is considering a comeback campaign in the professional wrestling arena.

This one-time heavyweight champion, who won his title by throwing Joe Stecher in 1918, says he has been offered substantial sums for appearances in comeback matches. Caddock has kept in condition since his retirement and recently has been working out with wrestlers in this section of Iowa. He is in the garage business here.

LOUISIANA'S BEST FROSH ATHLETE STARS ON TRACK

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—The best all-around athlete in the freshman class at Louisiana State university this year is not a football player.

But Nathan Blair is almost a one-man track team, a crack baseball player and performs well on the hardwood. He's good enough at track to make Coach Bernie Moore plan to enter him in the Olympic decathlon tryouts at New Orleans this spring.

Blair refused to accept several opportunities to play professional baseball this spring.

COUGARS GET NEW TRACK

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP)—A new $30,000 quarter-mile track replacing a half-mile oval has been completed at Washington State college. A 220-yard straightaway, concrete curbing, jumping pits and a thorough drainage system are features of the new construction. A new baseball diamond also has been added to the W. S. C. athletic layout.

Ten Democratic Senators Agree To Aid Beer Tax

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Ten Democratic senators have signed a statement agreeing to support a tax on legalized beer to provide for a $15,000,000 public construction program.

The senators announced they would vote and work for the Tydings amendment to the revenue bill to legalize and tax 2.75 per cent beer, which they estimated would raise $500,000,000.

The amendment also proposes a federal bond issue for construction, which would be amortized from the beer tax.

Those signing the statement in addition to Tydings were Senators Walsh and Coolidge of Massachusetts; Copeland and Wagner, New York; Lewis of Illinois; Hawes of Missouri; Bulkley, Ohio; Wheeler, Montana; and Broussard of Louisiana.

A BACK FOR HEWITT'S SHOES

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A full-back for Bill Hewitt's shoes is the most pressing problem of Coach Harry Kipke as he tapers off spring football practice, and he thinks he has found him in Leonard Meldman, freshman. Hewitt, who is to be graduated in June, is coaching his would-be successor.

You Can't Marry

by Julia Cleft-Addams

SYNOPSIS: A late evening call from her mother, Miss George Grattan Matching, takes George Revell away from a dinner party with her cousin Jenny, Gorka Carey, and Ryder Vale, but her interest in her work keeps her from minding the interruption. She is so fascinated by her job that she cannot decide to marry Eddie Townsend, whom she loves, because Matching will fire any woman working for him who marries. George does not know that she is under suspicion of being the source of continued leakage of information about the business. Matching and his manager, Gross, separately have been trying to run down the guilty person. When Gross suggests George as a possible suspect, to Matching, his employer realizes that he is attending to investigating her. Arriving at Matching's house, George rings the bell in a special code, and the door is opened.

Chapter 5 YES OR NO?

THE footman greeted George deferentially and went to pay the driver, while she took the steps of the main staircase two at a time. She did not slow down until she gained a bedroom at the back of the upper hall and was throwing her cloak on to the bed.

On the back of the door hung an overall of dark linen and this George whisked over the gleaming apricot of her dress. The overall was made long but a gleam of velleather helmet made his head smaller but his leather coat, hung open, added width to his already massive shoulders. The room vibrated faintly as he bore down upon her.

"No, Ed—not in office hours, dear boy!" She put the desk between them but her eyes hung upon him, glowing in his height that, tall as she was, overtopped her by some inches. "I wondered if you'd be here tonight. I suppose you're flying with that!" She touched the finished typescript.

"Darkey. My orders were just 'a packet.' Old Man's in a devil mood tonight—dries me up when he yaps at me like that! Can't think how you stick him."

"I don't let him get on my mind." She smiled her brilliant, confident smile and Eddie Townsend smiled back at her. They understood each other well. Each felt in the other a reckless courage, an almost animal joy in effort and success.

"You don't let anything get on your mind, George?"

"Well, do you?"

"Only you—and you're on it a darn sight too much. Spoiling my nerve, you are, and it's got to stop. I mean it, girl. . . . Look here, I reckoned on getting a word with vet still showed round her ankles—that was, however, unavoidable. She changed her brocade shoes for dark leather and at the dressing-table wiped all make-up off her face and passed a comb through her hair. Then she swung out of the room and entered the one next to it.

This, as richly carpeted and curtained as the bedroom, was one of her many working-rooms. There was a desk with telephones, typewriter, and next to the typewriter a dictaphone transcribing machine. On the desk, just under the curved, green-shaded lamp, a cylinder of black and shiny wax awaited her. She slipped it on to the transcriber, pulled a pair of ear-phones over her head, poised her hands upon the keyboard of her typewriter and presently was typing at great speed while the cylinder, slowly turning on its roller, transmitted the faint voice of Grattan Matching into her ears.

Entirely concentrated, she typed, paused, listened, typed again. From the maddening indistinctness of the record she knew that the document she was typing was a highly confidential one. The Old Man almost grunted into his dictaphone when the matter was secret. He knew that, in the end, she would be able to make it out. Even if she could only hear an occasional snatch of words, her experience of him and his affairs, her quick-wittedness and that brilliant, half-telepathic intuition that rarely failed her, would manage the rest.

The task, though immensely exacting, was not lengthy. In less than half-an-hour, she took off the ear-phones and re-read what she had typed. Fixed into the surface of her desk was a bell, which she rang; three short whirrs. Then she got up and walked over to the hearth.

The door opened and a young brown giant of a man came in. "Eddie!" she cried.

"Hullo, girl!"

He stood there, smiling at her, very light on his feet for all his huge bulk. His deep-set, slightly blood-shot eyes held that hunger for her that she adored because it so profoundly disturbed her. His you tonight. There's something I want to say."

She glanced at the house-telephone.

"I'll have to go the instant he rings for me."

"I'll risk that. . . . George, the Old Man's transferring me to the Mexican depot for at least a year. And I'm to go at the end of the month."

"Ed!"

"You see what that means, girl? We shan't see each other for the year, at least. It's not an eternity, I'm not pretending that. All the same, it's long for me to go on wondering whether at the end of it you'll be any more willing than you are now to chuck your job and marry me. To come straight out with it—will you marry me in a day or two so as to have a bit of fun together before I leave? Or shall I forget you?"

The golden tone of her skin paled a little, her wide mouth was trembling.

"Sure you can forget me?"

"No, of course I'm not sure. But a fellow who's trying to forget a girl will do a lot of things to help him. And if you were to want to whistle me back, well, I mightn't be free to come. . . ."

She didn't resent his stand-and-deliver attitude—she would have done the same in his place; but although she had so much in common with him, she was shrewder than he—and she had studied old Matching's methods for three years. Meet a bluff with a bluff. . . . She played for time.

"Why does he send you to Mexico?"

Eddie shrugged.

"He did mention something about a relation of his," he said. "Nephew, I think it was, who'd been out there and is going out again. Wants to take a pilot and observer out with him. Chap's in town now and I'm to meet him in a day or two. . . . But that's neither here nor there. What I want, girl, is your yes or no. I can stand up to it if it's no, but I won't wait for it any longer."

Bluffing can't last forever, and George gives Eddie her answer tomorrow.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A stalwart among Republican forces "on the hill" for nearly 17 years is expected to wield the gavel as permanent chairman of the G. O. P. national convention.

He is Representative Bertrand H. Snell, an upstate New Yorker, whose qualities as presiding officer his party had hoped to honor earlier by electing him "speaker" of the house.

Representative Snell was not elected speaker, polling 207 votes to the 218 which put Representative John Nance Garner in the chair, and is expected instead to be "speaker" of the party's nominating and platform-making deliberations.

Grim and dogged, slow to flare up, but relentless in driving toward his belief of the right, he is a leader who learned to handle men in logging camps along the Haquette river, near where the St. Lawrence river divides Canada from the United States.

Brain and brawn both played their part in Snell's advance from logger to bookkeeper to big business executive and continue to contribute their share in his political life.

Words for him are not wings for fine oratory, but mediums for making a point and stating a purpose or cause. He is serious and taciturn, though as he sits in the house with his fingers playing over his full-checked face, the movement interrupted only by the hasty scribbling of a "reminder," he chuckles often over the words of a speaker.

Rep. Snell is known to his colleagues as a fighter—and an honest one—and his dogged determination lies as much in his actions as in his physical appearance. He is well built, of medium stature, and has a well-filled and ruddy face with sandy brows and thinning hair.

After graduation from Amherst college, Snell began his business career as a bookkeeper for a lumbering concern and amassed a fortune in paper pulp, power and cheese enterprises.

He will be no stranger in the Chicago convention, for he was a delegate to the party conventions held there in 1916 and 1920 and in 1924 in Cleveland.

FRENCH TENNIS HARD HIT
PARIS (AP)—A deficit of $2,600 has given the French Lawn Tennis association added incentive to urge the tri-colored forces on to victory in the 1932 Davis Cup matches. Dr. Georges Collet, treasurer, reports that unless the cup remains in France for at least another year the obligation can not be met.

Colonists' Descendants

Greatly differing estimates have been made as to how many descendants an American settler has at the tenth generation. Donald L. Jacobs, the New England genealogist, is of the opinion that the total number of descendants of any one Colonist of the period from 1620-1640 amounts to over 200,000. J. Gardner Bartlett, from examination of 10,000 families in New England, estimates 78,125 descendants in eight generations.

Almost the Same

When you have no ice and require a cold cloth for a compress, try wringing a cloth out of cold water and dunking it briskly through the air. The rapid evaporation will give almost the same results as if wrung out of ice water.

1st ACTION 2nd ACTION

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that Calumet specially provides to take place in your mixing bowl.

After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture reaches the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that Calumet holds in reserve to take place in your oven. Make this test to-day. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

It's wonderful what Calumet's DOUBLE-ACTION does for cakes and biscuits

You can feel sure your biscuits and cakes will be perfect when you use Calumet Baking Powder, for it has double-action. Two leavening actions that protect your baking from failure and make it light, fluffy, fine-textured.

Calumet's first action, in the mixing bowl, gets the leavening properly started. Then, in the oven, the second action swells through the batter and holds it high and light—even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature perfectly. Bake a Calumet cake, some muffins or quick bread. See why it is the largest-selling baking powder in the world to-day.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action nor in the amount that should be used. And not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action—Double-Action. Get a can of Calumet from your grocer to-day. Notice Calumet comes in full-sized 16 ounce cans.
