Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.—Galatians 6:1.

SUPPORT THE STOCK SHOW

La Grande is to be host Thursday to a group of Union business men who will be here for the purpose of selling tickets to the Eastern Oregon Livestock show to be held at Union next week, June 8, 9, and 10.

These men must not be turned down — if the stock show is to continue! A great deal depends upon La Grande because if this city fails to stand its share, the Eastern Oregon show, which is the biggest in the state outside of the Pacific International, may receive a fatal jolt.

Ten thousand dollars was appropriated by the state legislature in January, 1931, of which $5000 went for premiums last year, and a like amount will go for the same purpose this year. It might seem that the state is financing the show. This is far from the truth, for the state money can be used for premiums only, while the actual expenses of the show must come out of the gate receipts — or else go into the "red", which is what happened last year, to the amount of several hundred dollars.

We must do better this year, or risk losing the show, which is a most valuable asset to Eastern Oregon, and especially to La Grande. A careful examination of the indorsements on cancelled premium checks reveals that more than two-thirds of the premium money eventually comes to La Grande individuals and business firms. La Grande receives more benefit from the show than Union does, so La Grande business men should support it loyally.

The management of the show depends upon advance ticket sales for money to defray preliminary expenses and get the show started. Union people are buying generously; La Grande can do no less. Thursday will be either a "red letter day" or a staggering disappointment. There is no need to enumerate the many benefits of the show; we all are convinced of its value.

The ticket sale tomorrow will constitute a showdown on the question whether La Grande will support the show or not. And if La Grande should turn it down, could Union be expected to carry on?

You answer it — with a block of tickets!

HITLER, THE SOAP-BOXER

By his victories recently in Prussia, Bavaria, Wuerttemberg and other German states, Adolf Hitler has now taken a place as one of the three greatest soap-boxers in modern world history, the other two being Benito Mussolini and Leon Trotsky.

These three men all started from humble positions in life and all were originally Socialists. Trotsky swung to the left and became a Bolshevik. Mussolini swung to the right and organized the Fascist party in Italy. Hitler followed Mussolini's example, rather than Trotsky's, and his Nazi party is modeled closely after the Italian Fascist organization.

Eight years ago, in company with General Erich von Ludendorff, he started a "putsch" on Berlin, which ended ingloriously on the outskirts of Munich, where it was suppressed by a single round of fire from Bavarian soldiers.

The outlook for Hitler was dark, indeed. He was sentenced to five years imprisonment for his part in the "putsch" and it looked as though his days as a leader were over.

On the contrary, he was soon released and he began immediately to build up a military organization of his followers and to make the unbelievers pop-eyed with his brilliant soap-boxing.

In the Reichstag election of 1930, the Socialists dropped from 153 members to 143 and the Nazi's jumped from a paltry 12 to 107, thus becoming the second party in the nation.

When Hitler ran for president, he was beaten by the aging Hindenburg, but he got the amazing total of 13,000,000 votes in the run-off election.

Then, in the Prussian Diet elections, came Hitler's greatest victory. The Nazi vote in the Diet jumped from an insignificant 9 to 162, becoming the strongest party in Germany's greatest state.

Sooner or later, if he maintains his present rate of successes, Hitler will be the master of Germany.

Hitler has not yet been tested fully. As an organizer and soap-boxer he has shown himself supreme in Germany.

When and if he comes into full power, whether he can prove himself another Mussolini is still to be seen. But the soap-boxer has gone farther in eight years than any other man in Germany.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA

One day not long ago we asked a man in government service who is widely traveled, with much experience in various countries of Europe why Washington did not recognize Russia. His answer came promptly "Stupidity." Than which we know none better.

The government of Russia is the most stable in Europe today. It has lasted longer than that of any of the principal nations of that continent. But so far as the United States government is concerned Russia is simply non-existent.

The historical grounds for non-recognition grow steadily less tenable. Undoubtedly the Wilson-Lansing policy of 1917-1919 was based on the presumption that bolshevism would be of short duration. That just hope long since faded. Later the grounds advanced by Sec. Hughes were: Russia's repudiation of debts, confiscation of private property of Americans, and spreading of propaganda. He brusquely refused even to enter into conversations looking toward an adjustment of the differences.

The once sinister term "repudiation," how frequently do we hear it today, and how little does it shock us! Germany openly talks repudiation and gets scant censure. Nearly all of South America has suspended payments on indebtedness. American cities and districts have defaulted on bonds and intend through the method of "write-down" virtually to repudiate a large share of their obligations.

The western world has little now to do in pointing a finger at Russia which while nominally repudiating the czarist debt, has been willing to negotiate respecting adjustment of external obligations.

So far as spread of propaganda goes there has been no convincing evidence that Moscow's gold has been subsidizing propaganda in this country. Moreover we have no doubt that gold from capitalist countries has endeavored to spread propaganda in Russia — probably more has been spent there than Russia has spent here.

The anti-propaganda rule should work both ways. The historic policy of the United States from the time of Thomas Jefferson, our first secretary of state, was prompt recognition of de facto governments. This has never meant approval of the form of government in power. Under this policy we have recognized revolutionary rulers, czars, dictators, bloody tyrants wherever their authority seemed definitely established. Pres. Wilson was the first to deviate in sorting out the revolutions he would approve of. It was a poor departure; and Sec. Stimson wisely returned to the old precedents in promptly recognizing the new governments in South American countries.

Why should we recognize Russia? Because it, with ourselves, is the largest white nation on the globe, because Russia has been in times past a valuable friend of the United States; because diplomatic relations would lead to enlarged commercial relations at a time when our foreign trade is languishing.

Stupidity — that seems to be the only answer to the query why Washington does not act; that or inertia or fear of contaminating this country with bolshevism. If the European countries so close to Russia do not feel such compunction, why should we? Communism will not be shut out either by tariff walls or by non-recognition. It is more apt to flourish generously, by a policy of ostracism than by one of frank recognition. — Salem Statesman.

A LESSON FROM 1929
Almost every day something happens to give us a clearer vision of the sort of civilization that we had in this country before the 1929 crash.

Most recent were the tales about easy money in Wall Street, told to the senate committee in Washington by a series of witnesses. These stories make a strange, rather

AMERICAN SAILOR KILLED

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP) — The death of one sailor and injury of twelve others in an explosion of ethyl chloride aboard the gunboat Tulsa at Amoy, China, today was reported to the navy department by Admiral M. M. Taylor, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet.

A. M. DOLLAR DEAD

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 1 (AP) — A heart attack in his garage last night ended the life of A. Melville Dollar, 52, widely known Pacific coast ship-plant man and the son of the late Capt. Robert Dollar, a few minutes after he had returned home from his office.

Ermine Imitated

True ermine comes from a member of the weasel family; the lesser weasel, or stoat, which has an almost pure white coat in the winter time. However, there are a number of inferior furs which are dressed up in imitation of true ermine, the most important of which is the white rabbit.

Works Two Ways

A military officer and a lawyer were talking of war, and the former was recounting the dangers of his profession, when the lawyer observed "that those who live by the sword must expect to die by the sword." "By a similar rule," replied the officer, "those who live by the law must expect to die by the law."
