

Portland Now In Tie For Coast League Leadership

DUCKS WIN TWO FROM OAKLAND TEAM YESTERDAY

Seattle, With Series Won 6 to 1, Will Tackle the Portland Outfit This Week.

By the Associated Press
Portland's Ducks are tied with Hollywood for leadership of the Pacific Coast league today, following yesterday's whirlwind finish of the series with Oakland. The Ducks won the Sunday games, 4 to 0 and 3 to 0, to make it six out of seven for the series, and 16 victories in the last 18 games played.

In the second game Oakland out-hit Portland 9 to 5, but "Big Boy" Peterson kept the Oaks' singles scattered enough to prevent scoring.

Seattle also upheld the honor of the northwest by taking both ends of a Sunday doubleheader from Sacramento, to win the series six games to one. The victories put Seattle in sixth place in the league standings and forced Sacramento down to seventh. In the first game the Indians were trailing 3 to 6 in the seventh inning when Junk Walters, pinch hitter, opened the flood gates by knocking out a double. Eleven Seattle runs crossed the plate before the inning ended, the final score being 15 to 7.

Lefty Page, Seattle pitcher, held the senators to seven hits in the second game, while his team mates staged a four run rally in the second inning. The game ended 13 to 4.

Seals, Angels Split Bill
The Seals and Angels split their Sunday doubleheader, which gave the series to San Francisco four games to two, one having been rained out. Each team got 10 hits in the opener, which Los Angeles won, 15 to 13. The Angels got three homers and the Seals one during the heavy hitting.

The Seals came back in the nightcap to shut out the Angels 3 to 0, although the southerners got six hits to San Francisco's five. All the scoring was done in the fourth and fifth innings.

The tall end Missions whitewashed the leading Hollywood Stars 4 to 0 in their Sunday morning game, but the southerners came back after lunch to assert their superiority to the tune of a 15 to 4 score. Hollywood took five of the seven games in the series.

YANKEES GET MacFAYDEN TO AID PITCHING

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—The New York Yankees' hopes of winning the American league pennant perked up considerably today as the result of the acquisition of one pitcher they wanted quite badly in exchange for two who were not doing them much good.

In a last minute deal before the start of their trip west, the Yankees received Danny MacFayden from the Boston Red Sox in a trade for Henry Johnson and Ivy Paul Andrews. Although no other consideration was mentioned officially, it was believed they handed over a good amount of cash as well.

MacFayden, who will be 27 years old this week and who wears spectacles on the mound, is rated as one of the American league's best right-handers. He has won only one game for the weak-hitting Red Sox this season and had lost ten, but last year he tossed in 16 victories, more than one-fourth of the games his team won.

Acanthus in Art
The acanthus plant has been most used through the ages in decorative and sculptured art. It appears in ancient Corinthian, Greek, Roman, Byzantine, Renaissance, Louis XIV, XV and XVI decoration. The period can often be told by the particular way in which the acanthus is used.

Change Provided by Nature
The ermine, the ptarmigan, the Arctic fox and the polar hare change their fur or plumage to white in the winter time.

OLYMPIC HOPES

With Bill Graber of Southern California clearing the bar regularly near the 14 foot mark, as shown above, and with Lee Barnes of Los Angeles, Olympics champion of 1921, in fine shape for a come-back, the United States Olympic team seems likely to make a sweep of pole-vault events.

Sarazen, Smith And Armour All Qualify Today
SANDWICH, Eng., June 6 (AP)—A. R. Bradbeer, little known professional from Somerset, today led a fine international field, including three ranking American players in the first round of qualifying play of the British open golf championship, with a par-shattering 70.

Four of these, including Barnes, Ted Lee of Yale, Fred Sturdy of Los Angeles and Bill Graber of Southern California, are candidates for the Olympic team. Without resort to over-zealous patriotism we can easily visualize the selected American trio finishing 1-2-3 over the best that any foreign nation can produce.

The only missing American "fourteen-footer," Sam W. Carr, happens to be the Olympic champion and record-holder. Carr has retired from competition but, like the high jumper, the U. S. A. is so well fortified in this specialty that the ex-Yale star's withdrawal is not a source of embarrassment.

Olympic Marks Soaring
Carr topped the field at Amsterdam four years ago with a mark of 13 feet, 9 3/4 inches. It would cause no great surprise if at least three inches were added to this height by the winner at Los Angeles, who is very likely to be young Mr. Graber of U. S. C.

No single Olympic event has reflected more rapid improvement than the pole vault. Twice vaults of less than 11 feet were sufficient to win. When Carr soared to his new record in 1928 he lifted himself three feet higher than the first Olympic winner needed to do in 1896.

Most of this improvement, with the notable exception of Hoff's performances, has been registered by Americans. Of the 18 point winners in the last three Olympiads, 11 have worn the U. S. shield.

Graber in Good Form
Lee Barnes, a native of Utah and product of Southern California, will not be 26 until this July, but the world record-holder is a veteran of two Olympiads. As a schoolboy he won the championship in 1924, at 12 feet, 11 1/2 inches, but the same height got him no better than fifth in 1928. He is now trying a comeback and stands a good chance of making his third Olympic appearance.

Graber, even with a bad ankle, has been doing close to 14 feet this spring. Besides Lee, Yale has a pair of other young stars in Brown and Thompson. The veteran, Fred Sturdy, another Eli product, is trying a comeback. Verne McDermott and Tommy Wynn, former U. S. rivals, also remain in competition.

From abroad come reports of four vaulters of 13-6 or better, representing as many different countries, but the dispatches do not state they are consistent at this mark. Nishida of Japan is credited with 13-7, Linblad of Sweden and Wegener of Germany with 13-6 and Castro of Brazil, South American record-holder, with 13-5 1/2. One or two of these names may appear in the summaries at Los Angeles, but it would be a shock to our national confidence if one of them happened to be the winner.

Minor leagues may be having their troubles, some may be folding up under the strain of the times but the International league, hardest of the "AA" circuits, is finding more cause to cheer than to complain.

Attendance generally in the International has shown an increase over the same period for 1930. The acquisition of the two Jersey clubs by big league organizations, Newark by the Yankees and Jersey City by Brooklyn, has stimulated interest in those communities. Buffalo and Montreal have played before extraordinary crowds, and the southern half of the circuit including Baltimore and Reading, has done well in spite of some poor weather.

As "Bill" Manley, the league's able secretary-treasurer points out, the $1000 award to go to the club showing the most hustling spirit this season has served to put the athletes on their toes.

and consequently no menace whatever in the forthcoming Olympics. Hoff is the only vaulter outside this country credited with clearing 14 feet. His mark of 14-2 and a fraction is slightly better than the world amateur record of 14-1 1/2, held by Lee Barnes of Los Angeles. Barnes, however, is only one of five American youths who have topped 14 feet.

American Pole Vaulters Expected To Wear Down Olympic Opponents

Moreover, the appearance of a real flag battle, involving at least four or five teams, has helped to lighten the situation. The four-time winner, Rochester, will be hard-pressed to repeat, even with the resources of the Cardinal farm system at the disposal of the Redwings.

BABE A MANAGER?
It may be that Colonel Jacob Ruppert will become very philanthropic and decide to let Babe Ruth go back to his old love, Boston, as manager of the Red Sox for 1933, but in these times so noble a gesture is unlikely.

Ruth has long had the ambition to become a big league pilot in the twilight of his baseball career. Some thought he would get the job of directing the Yankees when Miller Huggins died, but Col. Ruppert showed no disposition to weigh down his star batsman and gate attraction with the worrisome responsibilities of a manager.

Boston or Chicago would be the spot for the Babe, if he shifted jobs and scenery, but there will be plenty of time for consideration of this. The big fellow has had a severe spring slump, but he is far from being all through as a major league regular. Only about a dozen other clubs, if not the entire 15, would like to take on Ruth, on one leg, if he happened to be available at a reasonable price.

The Yankees paid about $135,000 for the man who became a million-dollar asset to them.

There has never been any serious discussion of what the Babe would bring on the open market, for the simple reason he has not been on the market, but the Colonel might be excused for figuring Ruth's release would be worth at least a quarter of a million dollars, even in a period of shrinking values.

When it is figured that New York clubs within the past year valued the services of minor leaguers like Koencke and Crosetti at $75,000 each, the suggested value of the home run king is conservative.

SOUTHPAW DUEL
It looks like a great race for southpaw honors this season in the American league between Grove and Gomez.

Grove, after a slightly shaky start, has recovered his 1931 form and control. Meanwhile Gomez has shown the most spectacular stuff of the Yankee staff. Thaim Spaniard looked especially effective against the champion Athletics, but he has yet to hook up in a real duel with Grove.

With a little advance notice, Grove and Gomez would draw more to the Yankee Stadium right now than Ruth and Simmons.
