"SO BIG," FAMED AS NOVEL, DUE SUNDAY

Kay Francis Coming in Fine Picture Listed Soon at Liberty.

PROGRAM FOR THE WEEK AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE

Sunday and Monday: Edna Ferber's "So Big," with Barbara Stanwyck.

Tuesday and Wednesday: "The Mouthpiece," with Warren William and Sydney Fox.

Thursday and Friday: Kay Francis in "Street of Women."

A talkie version of Edna Ferber's charming Pulitzer prize novel "So Big" and a picture starring that most sophisticated person, Kay Francis—these two particular events make the coming week at the Liberty theater a tray one.

With the newly announced features, Jack Wright, manager of the theater called attention to a change in the mid-week program. Two features, each running two days, will replace the long mid-week picture of three days.

"So Big" has an all-star cast supporting Barbara Stanwyck. It has been given an elaborate production in the Hollywood studios, and as the story covers a period of years, the characters appear in costumes of the eighties, nineties and the nineteenth century. Some of the prominent players in the cast are George Brent, Bette Davis, Mae Madison, Hardie Albright, Alan Hale and Dickie Moore.

"So Big" tells the story of Selina Peake who marries Ferrus DeJong, a Dutch farmer. Selina, though she has to become a drudge, finds beauty in everything connected with the soil. When her son, Dirk, is born, her whole life centers about him, and the description of her struggle for her boy is an absorbing one.

"The Mouthpiece" Frank J. Collins, who wrote the play from which "The Mouthpiece" is taken, based his story on actual incidents in the life of a notorious New Yorker, now dead.

The legal practitioner acquired fame because of his dramatic defense of doubtful characters and his ability to sway juries. He led a dissolute life, wasting it on bad associations, and died a broken man. Warren William portrays the title role. "The Mouthpiece" and is said to give an exceedingly eloquent and faithful performance. Others in the cast are Sidney Fox, Alina MacMahon, Guy Kibbee, Noel Francis, Ralph Ince and William Janney.

"Street of Women" This drama of modern skyscrapers, the men who conceive and build them and the women who inspire them, is an excellent vehicle for Miss Francis' beauty and dramatic ability. No one portrays better than she the young woman of 1932, talented and attractive, who makes a career for herself, only to find that success is only half of life, and the lesser half without love.

As Natalie Upton, the celebrated modiste who, against all her instincts finds herself the unwelcome side of a domestic triangle because of her love for Lawrence Baldwin, Miss Francis is in her element. Allan Dinehart, as Larry, and Roland Young, as Link Gibson—the two men equally devoted to Natalie—are not only fine actors but splendid folk for each other.

WARLIKE AIMS ATTRIBUTED TO U. S. BY SOVIET

MOSCOW, June 18 (AP)—A charge that "certain Imperialist circles in the United States" are encouraging Japan to make war against the Soviet union was made today by the newspaper Pravda, organ of the communist party.

Pravda said the American effort was being made in the hope that Japan would thereby weaken itself so that America could conquer "the enemy in the Pacific." It warned that such efforts should meet the resistance of the American working masses.

Declaring that increasing differences between the United States and Japan are indicated by America's action in strengthening her naval bases in the Pacific, the communist party organ added sarcastically: "But this does not prevent certain specialists circles in America from supplying arms and credit to its future rival."

"This policy of encouragement of Russo-Japanese war have been carried on in connection with attempts to weaken Japan and thus allow American imperialism to warm hands."

PORTLAND, Ore., June 18 (AP)—Campers going into national forests in Washington and Oregon by automobile, other vehicles or with pack horses between July 1 and September 30 will be required to carry fire-fighting equipment, said an announcement issued today from the regional forester's office here.

The equipment must include an ax, shovel and water container. Persons camped at improved and posted forest camps were exempted.

The regulation applies to all forests except the Sitka national forest.

Long Putt Gave Sarazen Biggest Thrill of Match

By Alan Gould (Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—The biggest moment Gene Sarazen derived from winning the British open golf championship with a record score came when he walked onto the home green at Sandwich and realized the could take four putts and still, in all likelihood, win with something to spare.

"I said to my caddy: 'Dan, maybe I'm a little dizzy from all this, but do you know I have this championship won?' He said: 'Yes, you can take four putts and still be safe.' And I replied: 'Dan, I know that but I am going to try to sink this one from 50 feet.' I missed doing it by ten inches and then the roar went up. Lady Astor grabbed my arm and I don't mind telling you now that I never felt a greater satisfaction in my life."

That's how Sarazen described the climax to his remarkable British triumph, still feeling the thrill of it as he came home to New York yesterday to receive an enthusiastic greeting to be wined and told he was about to be crowned, if not already so, as the world golf champion, successor to Bobby Jones.

There was a time when Sarazen's glib reply to all this would have been: "Sure I'm the big shot, watch me," but the ten years of campaigning since he won the American open in 1922 have altered his perspective. So, last night, he remarked:

"Don't think I'm kidding myself about this. I know the game too well now to let me get up here to stick, just because I happened to have some good luck—and some good golf—in my system."

Hocus Pocus Recipe Will Not Work

While a hundred or so spectators, huddled in overcoats, looked on in breathless silence, Miss Gordon, the "maiden pure of heart," jerked off the white sheet.

But no handsome young man stepped out to greet her. Instead, there stood the same bearded billygoat, shivering in the cold.

The witches had failed, and everybody applauded, for that is what they set out to prove. As Dr. Erich Bohm, a German scholar interested in the experiment said:

"It is far from our expectation to summon witches and spirits. Nevertheless, there is no reason why these ancient recipes and rituals should be merely cast aside, for it is the business of science to reject nothing so long as the method it employs is a scientific one."

The scientists will beard the spirits on the spot again tonight. But all the dunking in the world won't change "The Broken" for its neighbors. When ominous blue-black clouds pour over the top and the wind swoops down the valleys in a frenzy, uprooting mammoth firs and screeching around the eaves, it's creepy story time in the little timbered houses of the Harz mountain dwellers—and probably always will be.

(P. S.) The billygoat, was all right this morning but Gloria Gordon, the "maiden pure of heart" was confined to her bed with a severe cold, caught in the night wind of the magic mountain.

Gloria, a pretty blonde with wavy bobbed hair, broke down and confessed that she was really Uria Bohn, daughter of a Bremen attorney. "Dad wanted to avoid publicity," she said.

Several of the spectators at last night's experiment were rubbing sore eyes today from the fumes of the powder flares, which, they said, were more diabolical than any medieval witches' incense.

discussed suicide for both of them, but he specifically denied they had entered any suicide pact.

The Tribune, in tracing the lives of the couple, found that Warner lost his money in Chicago about 17 years ago, came to California, and here met the woman he married. They had lived in the San Francisco Bay district since except for about four years in Los Angeles.

That ill luck, the newspaper said, had divided them for the rest of their lives, to the extent they were forced to hitch hike when they came here about a month ago from Los Angeles.

One of Mrs. Warner's four sisters, Mrs. Rita Leo, is widely known as a writer under the maiden name, Rita Wellman.

Public Records Are Open Affair Court Decides

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 18 (AP)—Holding no public officer has authority to treat public records as his own private records, Judge D. F. Wright of the Thurston county superior court today upheld the state senate investigating committee in its court battle to compel Governor Hartley to give it free access to state records under its control.

The only way the committee's investigation now can be delayed or forestalled is by an appeal to the state supreme court on the part of the governor.

Through Judge Wright's decision the committee members are armed with a writ of mandate ordering the governor to open the accounts of all code departments to the inspection of the committee. Regardless of whether the senators are acting as a committee, as individuals or as private citizens.

"It is of no importance whether the committee demanded an inspection of public records as a senatorial committee or as individuals or as private citizens."

"It is of no importance whether the committee demanded an inspection of public records as a senatorial committee or as individuals, the fact still remains that they are citizens of the state of Washington asking to see the records for a legitimate public purpose," Judge Wright said in his decision.

"No public officer has authority or right to treat public records as his own private records, that is, to exclude the public from an examination thereof."

prohibition in its preamble.

The tentative picked members of the Democratic resolutions committee will assemble next Thursday to begin work on that party's platform, hoping that they can saw out the rough outlines of most of the planks by the time the convention assembles. Opening hearings probably will be held on some of the disputed issues. The convention, itself will have to ratify the make-up of the committee later.

Expects Fight

While the resolutions committee may have a ready-made plank for the convention when it meets, Shouse does not believe the prohibition question will be disposed of without a floor fight such as provided the dramatic high spot for the newly adjourned Republican meeting.

The last paper from the littered work room floors had hardly been cleared away from that Republican convention before Shouse and others who will help to arrange for the Democratic meeting were on the ground.

Already the headquarters of two of the Democratic presidential contenders are set up. But that of the leading candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, has not yet been opened. # Look Sharp On "Dull" Days

OUR ADVERTISING MANAGER SENDS A LITTLE SHOPPING-TIP TO GENTLE READERS

You have noticed that on some days there is more advertising in your newspaper than on other days.

Friday, for instance, we carry many messages to help you with your over-Sunday shopping. Certain department stores have their favorite days for advertising certain merchandise.

But — here's the tip — on days when the paper seems "thinest," you sometimes discover the biggest bargains. It stands to reason that some advertisers prefer to run their announcements on days when the advertising columns are less crowded. And thus by looking sharp on the seemingly dull days you encounter surprises!

In fact, we don't think there's ever a time when one can draw an honest yawn and say "nothing in the paper today."

When it comes to Advertising-News, there's nothing in the paper that one can afford to miss!
