

Atypical Clinic Draws Interest at Summer Session

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, June 23 (Special)—Summer session of the University of Oregon at Eugene and Portland opened Monday, June 20, and indications at Eugene are that attendance here will equal that of last summer. It was stated here today by Dr. Dan E. Clark, director for the Eugene campus, that last summer the enrollment here was nearly 800.

Unusual interest is being shown in the clinical school for atypical children, to be conducted in connection with the school of education, and in art courses to be offered here. The law school is also offering for the first time this year an unusually complete schedule of courses.

The clinical school will be in charge of Dr. Grace M. Fernald, specialist from Los Angeles, and Dr. E. W. DeBussk and Miss Lillian Raynor of the university staff. Diagnostic examinations will be given at the outset, as the school is designed for children who are hampered by certain psychological or difficulties.

Interest in art is centering on courses to be given by Eugene G. Steinhoff, architect from Zentral Vereinigung, Austria, who will teach "The Psychology of Art Teaching." Enrollment in the school of art will be swelled this summer by a number of educators who have been granted scholarships by the Carnegie corporation. These scholarships provide the students with funds for tuition and materials while here. The university is the only school in the west to be selected for this work, which in the east centers at Harvard.

Other noted faculty members on the Eugene and Portland staffs include M. Ellwood Smith, newly chosen director of the lower division system of the state board of higher education; Jessie Gay Van Cleave, specialist in children's literature, American Library association, Chicago; Ernest Sutherland Bates, writer and lecturer of New York; Wilkie Kelson Collins, writer and world-traveler; Sadie Orr-Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association; Alexander Goldenweiser, professor of thought and culture; Bernard Hinshaw, artist of Chicago; C. R. Holloway, assistant superintendent of schools, Portland; and Charles N. Reynolds, associate professor of sociology, Stanford.

Marshall Wins Easily From Elich

PORTLAND, Ore., June 23 (Sp.)—Everett Marshall, Colorado heavyweight wrestler, former University of Washington athlete, took less than 20 minutes of actual wrestling to defeat Nick Elich, of Serbia here last night. Marshall, rated as one of the top-notchers in the wrestling game, took the first fall in 15 minutes and 2 seconds with an airplane spin. The second fall came within three minutes when Marshall dumped his opponent with a crashing body slam.

Howard Cantonwine, Iowa, went and Ivan Vakturoff, of Russia, went five rounds to a draw, each taking a fall. Vakturoff, took the first fall with a series of flying handlocks. Cantonwine evaded matters with an arm-wrenching wristlock from standing position.

Nominees of Past Years And the Winners

The following list gives the Republican and Democratic nominees of the past 50 years. In each case, the name of the nominee for president is given first, followed by the name of the vice presidential nominee and then, in parenthesis, the name of the city in which the convention was held. Asterisk denotes the winners in the election that followed.

Year	Republican	Democratic
1880	James A. Garfield and Chester A. Arthur (at Chicago)	Winfield S. Hancock and William H. English (at Cincinnati)
1884	James G. Blaine and John A. Logan (at Chicago)	Grover Cleveland and T. A. Hendricks (at Chicago)

find himself in an entirely different atmosphere when he swings into action at keynoting on the 27th. Chicago is bustling with gossip of what a show the Democrats will put on. It's a familiar phrase around hotel lobbies, uttered by the somewhat fatigued hangers-on: "Just wait until the Democrats eye hard certainly he will be an unnecessary.

This Game of Golf

The triumph of Gene Sarazen in the recent British open golf championship at Sandwich, with the record score—for either the British or the United States open—of 283 was, I think, the climax of the most thorough, careful, and painstaking course of specific training and preparation any golfer ever undertook for any event.

As far back as February, when I saw Gene at the Gasparilla tournament at Tampa, he told me frankly that he was already conditioning himself with an eye to the major championships of the coming summer. "I'm doing pretty well, in some of these winter shows," he said with a twinkle in his eye, "and certainly he out the biggest money winner. "But I'm not straining myself," he added, sagely. "These tournaments are something like a means to what I hope is an end. Of course you never can tell."

Gene nevertheless looked extremely impressive, both as to the mechanics of his game and its inspiration. "I've made a few little changes, lately," he told me. "His clubs all were a bit heavy, but I found that they seemed to swing more truly, with added weight. The end of the shaft on every club was carefully flattened, and, just where it came in contact with the "heel" of the left hand.

"Feels more comfortable," explained Gene. "And the shaft sits up to that end of my grip, and always the same way." He was hitting his big wood shots at least 20 yards farther than I'd ever seen them.

Gene put in a good many hours split up into thirty-minute periods, swinging that double-weight driver. "You can't hit with it," he said. "You have to swing it. I think it tends to groove my swing, and to give me control of the wallop, when I'm using a normal club. Of course I may be wrong."

Every raw, rainy day at Lakeville, Gene was out playing. He was preparing for British weather—which, however, suited warmly the young New Yorker at Sandwich. But Gene was not overlooking anything. He worked patiently and intelligently for that British championship. No man ever worked harder or more thoroughly, or to better effect.

EXPECT 4,000,000 PARK VISITORS—SAN FRANCISCO (Sp.)—It has been estimated more than 4,000,000 persons will visit national parks in California this year, according to the state automobile association.

Asiaties Begin Sports Invasion On West World—YOKOHAMA, Japan, June 23 (Sp.)—The shock troops of Asia's invasion of the Olympic games, as led from Yokohama today on their trans-pacific voyage with high hopes of wresting a greater share of the world sports laurels than ever before.

Dr. Selchichi Kishi, head of the Japanese Olympic committee, told the Associated Press prior to embarking that he was confident Japan's swimmers would place either first or second, and the track and field squad would capture third or fourth.

In the morning before entraining from Tokyo for Yokohama, the Japanese athletes visited the Meiji shrine, focal point of modern Japan's religion-patriotism, and prayed to the spirit of the great Emperor Meiji, coveting they would do their utmost to bring victories back to Japan.

These they crossed the great double-bridged gateway of the imperial city, and passed in honor the Japanese athletes visited the Meiji shrine, focal point of modern Japan's religion-patriotism, and prayed to the spirit of the great Emperor Meiji, coveting they would do their utmost to bring victories back to Japan.

Final selections assure Japan 129 entrants in the international games, believed to be next in size to the United States representation.

In addition to the 48 athletes who are already in Los Angeles, others en route. The remainder sail June 30 on the Taiyo Maru. They will include seven women swimmers and divers, nine women track and field stars, boxers, gymnasts, wrestlers, gamblers, and the hockey team.

HOT LAKE PERSONALS

By Mrs. Harriet McDonald (Observer Correspondent) HOT LAKE (Special)—Robert McIntosh of Portland has joined his friend Capt. W. C. McNaught at this place and is taking baths while enjoying his vacation.

Mrs. J. E. Rhodes of Seattle accompanied by Mr. Rhodes who was formerly a resident of Baker, Ore., and a special nurse, arrived here on Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes are business people of Seattle.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark Pih returned from a trip to Portland by airplane. They enjoyed good weather on the trip down and arrived in Portland at the usual time for breakfast. On the return trip a dust storm was encountered which made it necessary for them to land at Walla Walla from which place they returned home by stage.

Dr. F. Gill Edwards entertained a group of his friends for dinner in the apartment of Dr. and Mrs. Lee on Sunday evening. The piece de resistance was crawfish sent from Portland specially for the occasion and was unanimously voted a success by the guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Beam of Pasco are at the sanatorium for baths and treatment. Mrs. Beam is an old time resident of this valley. Mr. Beam is a railroad man of Pasco.

Ad H. Davis and Jay Tower of Portland are spending a few days at the sanatorium while transacting business in this vicinity. Emmet Lee and Jay Tower indulged in a most remarkable fishing trip according to their own account. They made the trip to Wallawa on Saturday. As these gentlemen have borne an unimpaired reputation for veracity up to the present, we refrain from bemoaning it by quoting their statement as to the "catch."

Joanna Dalton, two year old daughter of J. Wylie Dalton is the young patient in the hospital. Her mother is caring for her but her father has returned to his home at North Power.

The recent wedding in the sanatorium family of Dr. and Mrs. Lee has been the occasion of several very pleasant festivities. The last of these was a surprise party for Mrs. Lee given by twenty ladies of the sanatorium. They appeared unannounced at her door, laden with refreshments, congratulations and two beautiful gifts—a table lamp and a wall mirror. The men, despite their imploring entreaties, were vigorously excluded. The evening was spent socially with bridge and conversation.

Cove Personals

By Mrs. A. G. Conklin (Observer Correspondent) COVE (Special)—The Rev. Barnwell, bishop of Idaho, arrived at the summer school Tuesday and will stay until the school closes. There were several visitors at the school from La Grande that evening, among them being noted Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stearns, Miss Mac Stearns, Miss Mabel Doty, Mrs. Edna Doty, Miss Emogene Russell and Mrs. Neil.

Of interest to many people in Cove is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Ida Underwood, of Grande Valley, Colo., who is a sister of Mrs. T. C. Hefty, of Cove, to Floyd Clarke, of Grande Junction, Colo. The wedding was an event of June 21 at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Underwood in Grande Valley. J. E. Anderson, postmaster, returned Tuesday evening from Portland and The Dalles where he attended the grand chapter of the Eastern Star and the convention of postmasters.

The Epworth League held a very enjoyable party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Koger Saturday evening. There were 38 present and games were played on the lawn, fought for the occasion. The refreshments were ice cream and cake.

Averi Harris, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harris, is carrying an arm in a sling, broken when she jumped from a swing.

Mrs. A. G. Conklin, Mrs. T. E. Conklin, Clarice Gale and Dickey were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Conklin in Union Tuesday. Other guests were Mrs. Mary H. Geer and Mrs. H. C. Rees, of Union and Mrs. E. B. Conklin of Ontario.

COVE PERSONALS

By Mrs. Nell Knight (Observer Correspondent) LOWER COVE (Special)—Farmers here are all busy in the hay field. The hay crop is fine.

Several farmers shipped their fat lambs this week, selling them through the lamb pool.

Mr. Boyles and family arrived from Eastville Saturday and immediately moved to the Hartley farm, which they have rented. They began haying Monday morning.

At the annual school meeting of Frosty district No. 16, the budget was accepted. T. B. Johnson was re-elected a director and Mrs. Nell Knight as clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. Nell Knight and family were business visitors in La Grande Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Koger and family were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Towse on Sunday.

Typewriters' Click, Roar Of Presses Inspires Newspaper Music

NEW YORK (Sp.)—Ferde Grofe, composer of the popular "Three Shades of Blue" and other orchestral works, including the recently completed "Grand Canyon" suite, has found his latest inspiration in the newspaper office.

"The composition on which he now is engaged has tentatively been titled "Tabloid," and in it Grofe will essay a musical picture of newsmen. The composer's inspiration came when he listened to the chatter of automatic printers, the click of typewriters and the roar of presses in a newspaper plant, and the musical themes that came to him at that time are now being elaborated in a typical Grofe score.

Grofe's ambition is to "interpret the American scene in modern American music; to express musically the things I see and feel and hear of the ever changing aspects of American life."

His big orchestral work "Metropolis" of a few years back gave his impressions of big city life; his "Canyon Suite" represented his reaction to a trip to the Grand Canyon; his "Mississippi Suite," was his interpretation of life along the Father of Waters; "Kauike Hockne" caught the staccato accents in the life of a great football coach. Now, in "Tabloid" he has turned to newspaper life.

The composition starts with a scene at the city editor's desk, with telephones ringing, typewriters clicking and printing machines clacking," said Grofe, as he turned to the piano to run over the dominant phrases of the work. "The clang of police patrols and fire engines and other themselves will be introduced. "Near the end will come a pause of 30." Then in conclusion will be heard the roar of presses. There is something dynamic in the roll of a great newspaper press. The first time I heard that sound it thrilled and inspired me."

Grofe recently directed the New York premier of his "Five Pictures of the Grand Canyon." He now is scoring the work for full symphonic orchestra. Both the Philadelphia and Boston symphony orchestras have expressed interest in a production of the composition.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer CHICAGO — Senator Barkley of Kentucky must have read with a big "Y" in his eyes the keynoting of his friend Dickinson of Iowa was received at the Republican national convention.

The big Kentuckian has the same sort of an assignment before him the latter part of the month. He has been giving the job of stirring up the Democrats and rallying them around the party standard.

But in all probability, Barkley will have an easier time of it than did Dickinson. For one thing, Chicago expects he'll have an enthusiastic audience, and that's necessary for a keynote speech to get over.

If Dickinson, on the other hand, had been counting on a Fourth of July convention spirit to help him along he was disappointed.

Unsettled The Republican keynoter must have felt very much alone in that vast Chicago stadium at times. Big as voted as he is, often he was unable to make his words penetrate the buzz of conversation and hubbub below him.

There can be little doubt that he found it disheartening. After all, it's a big moment in a man's life when he steps out before his party convention to found the rallying cry.

He had spent hundreds of hours in the preparation of his address; then to face yawning gaps in what was expected to be jammed galleries, an apathetic floor expected to be cheering and enthusiastic mob — it must take a fellow down a bit.

But then, perhaps, Dickinson anticipated something like that. He had opportunity several days before he spoke to observe the lack of any noisy enthusiasm around convention head-quarters.

Also in the various hotels around the city there was little of the jam and crush which usually attend a pre-convention period.

Wait For The 27th! From all indications Barkley will
