The TINYMITES! STORY BY HAL COCHRAN PICTURES BY JOE KING. (READ THE STORY. THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) THE little cardboard house burned fast. "I wonder how long this will last," said Copy. "Maybe we should help the dogs out to the blaze. "I'd like to squirt their little hose. I'd save that strange house, goodness knows. But I guess they should do it. They've been trained for days and days. "You're right," said Scouty. "Let them do the firemen's work, instead of you. The house will crumble shortly. It is getting weak right now. "You know that cardboard isn't strong. That's why it's burning right along. The trainer likes his dog's work, so he shouldn't start a row. THE dogs kept water shooting out of all the hoses. Without doubt, they seemed almost like humans. Soon the raging fire was low. Then, with an ax, one little hound spread final embers all around. The fire was under fine control and it made quite a show. Just then a little circus miss said to the band of Tinies, "This is your chance to get lots of laughs. Come on, kids, follow me. "We have trained monkeys with this show. You'll be surprised at what they know. They set upon the trapeze and are clever as can be. "Oh, that sounds great," one Tiny said. "We'll follow you just ahead." And, in about a minute all the lads were laughing loud. The way the monkeys swung through air at times gave Duncy quite a scare. "Those tricks are wonderful," said he. "No wonder they feel proud." And then one monkey swung up high. Said Scouty, "Look! He's going to try to catch the other by his feet. I hope he doesn't miss." The Tinies watched the stunt in awe. Complete success was what they saw. Wee Windy shouted, "That was great! I sure like things like this." (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.) (The Tinies ride a hippo in the next story.)
