ARTERIOSCLEROSIS—II
Since Professor Plesch's hypothesis concerning arteriosclerosis holds that the deposition of calcium salts in arteries is a defensive measure, it follows that arteriosclerosis prevention consists in avoidance of all conditions that might cause the arteries to become atonic—lacking in strength or tone.

Value of Goat's Milk Very early in history it was discovered that goat's milk is more nutritious and more valuable to human existence than that of other animals. This is due at least in part to the fact that it does not curdle easily when taken into the stomach, and so is well fitted to be the food of infants, invalids, and aged people.

Gambler's Throw
by Eustace L. Adams.

SYNOPSIS: Detective work by airplane is necessary. Jerry Calhoun and Emory Huttler decide, in dealing with an ultra-modern kidnaping gang who have carried off Nancy Westworth and a number of wealthy men and are demanding "board money" while they hold the captives in some unknown hide-out. Jerry is determined to rescue Nancy, since she was abducted while he was with her, and his niece, one approved by Stevens, a government detective assigned to the case. Stevens is especially concerned with locating One-shot Lucel, a gangster among the kidnapers, who are headed Lucel and Nancy—Mallory, a stockbroker, Hamilton, a millionaire business man, and Meris and Williams of Chicago. No clues have been found as to the whereabouts of the gang and their prisoners. Jerry and Emory try to follow the hunchman who collects the board money from a stipulated round-off on the coast, but their own plane falls in both speed and fact. Jerry wants to buy an up-to-date airplane.

Chapter 8
"YOU'RE BEWITCHED ME"
THE implacable glare of the afternoon sun hammered down upon the low, rambling house. The blazing light, undimmed by any cloud, turned the white shell beach into a dazzling meanness which burned its way into one's eyeballs like a white hot needle. The palm trees themselves seemed to find the oppressive heat unbearable, so dry and brown and weary-looking were their rattling leaves. Their golligollig clusters gave little shade and less rest to the eye, serving only to accentuate the glare of the brassy sky and the burnished iridescence of the flattened sea.

Suddenly Nancy felt, rather than heard a sharp, ringing crack. something that will give them a little gun practice. If you weren't here, I'd have run amuck long ago. I will yet, if something doesn't happen to break the monotony! "That will be very helpful to me." The girl's voice was heavy with sarcasm. "You fill me with admiration for your self-control." "See here, Nancy," he complained querulously. "It's all your fault. You know I've not been myself. I'm madly in love with you and you treat me like a dog. I've loved you ever since your opening night at the Crierion, two years ago. I've tried, God knows how many times, to meet you. But you never went out on parties, never met people. And now we're together here, I can't think of anything but you." "You've thought of nothing else," she countered scornfully, "but the heat and the liquor and the chances of escape. Have you given any thought to your wife, lately?" "My wife? I've told you that my wife and I have been separated for years!" he declared tempestuously. "I'll have her get a divorce the moment we return to New York!" New York! A million miles away from this madness. It hardly seemed to exist. "That might be a favor to your wife," she said drearily, "but please, please, let's talk of something else!" "Nancy!" His voice was vibrant with intensity. "I can't—you're bewitched me! You are—" In another instant she was in his arms, kicking, hammering with her little fists at his burly chest and shoulders, squirming silently to break his hold. His kisses fell upon her cheek. A guard, strolling along the beach, stopped and watched them in frank, cynical enjoyment. She was sick and giddy. Then, suddenly, she fell, rather than heard, a sharp, ringing crack. The straining arms sagged as his body relaxed, became limp and settled toward the floor. She was dragged down with him. Strong hands seized her by the shoulders and jerked her back to her feet. (Copyright, Dial Press)

Nancy escapes from one pursuer to find herself facing another, tomorrow.
Homes in Barracks
Limerick, Ireland, took over the famous old barracks which face the Shannon river at Thomond bridge, and erected 27 workers' homes on part of the site and converted the buildings into three-room flats. The ancient walls of the bastle, which were built in the reign of King John, are preserved under the provisions of the national monuments act.
Worthy Philanthropist
William Tuke, an English philanthropist, born 200 years ago, founded the "Retreat" under the management of the Quakers and discovered what are called the best modern methods of dealing with the insane.
Waterloo Casualties
The exact losses at the battle of Waterloo are undetermined. The French probably lost over 31,000 persons, killed, wounded and missing. The allies' losses, according to official returns, amounted to 22,425.
Exception and Rule
The familiar saying, "The exception proves the rule," is based on the fact that so frequently does some condition prevail that the few occasions when it does not emphasize the frequency of its occurrence.

The TINNIES
Story by HAL COCHRAN
Pictures by JOE KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)
It made two of the Tinnies grin to see the others hidden in the crazy looking horse hide. Scouty cried, "Let's see you run." "You'd better do it slow. Don't dart, or you will pull the horse apart. I'd like to try that stunt, myself. I'll bet it's lots of fun." "It's all right," Coppy said, "but, gee, we both are warm as warm can be. However, we will stay here till we've given you a thrill." And then to Windy he cried out, "You're up in front, so when I shout, giddap, just start to run. I surely hope that we don't spill." "All right," said Windy. "I'm all set. I'll start off easy, you can bet." Then Coppy shouted, "Giddap," and the horse began to go. The other Tinnies laughed in glee and Scouty shouted, "Mercy me! How are we going to stop that horse? I guess that I'll yell whoa." His "whoa," however, was no use. The big horse still was running loose. It jumped and pranced in crazy style and then sat on the ground. In just a minute it jumped high and Scouty dodged as it whizzed by. Said he, "You'll both get tired out, if you keep on running 'round." "DON'T worry," answered Coppy, "we are just as frisky as can be. You see, a horse has lots of pep. We have to have it, too." And then to Scouty, Duncy said, "A plan has popped into my head. You'll hurt your side from laughing when you see what I will do." He rushed up to the horse and cried, "Here's where I get a dandy ride. I'm going to leap upon this horse. It will be something new." But, when he tried to take a seat, the horse sagged down on both its feet. It bent right in the middle and then almost broke in two. (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.) Value of Goat's Milk Very early in history it was discovered that goat's milk is more nutritious and more valuable to human existence than that of other animals. This is due at least in part to the fact that it does not curdle easily when taken into the stomach, and so is well fitted to be the food of infants, invalids, and aged people.
