

NOTED AMERICANS ORGANIZED for PEACE

WENTY-FIVE men of vision and extraordinary contact with the world at large direct the activities of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, one of the foremost world-wide organizations working for peace. Ambassadors, college presidents, philanthropists, editors and educators are included in the group of men who are working to bring about the realization of Andrew Carnegie's dream of world peace.

Since the formation of the Endowment in 1910, the ways in which the "will to peace" among nations has been striven for, have been many and varied. Under three division heads, Dr. Butler, of the Division of Intercourse and Education, Dr. James T. Shotwell, Division of Economics and History, and Dr. James Brown Scott of Washington, D. C., Division of International Law, educational work is going on in all parts of the globe. Distinguished statesmen and educators come to the United States to lecture in our universities; economists, editors and professors journey to other parts of the world carrying out the Endowment's progressive ideas.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler,

President of the Endowment, who in 1931 was a recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, in his annual report said:

"Far from being discouraged, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace must find in the happenings of the past year a new challenge and a new stimulus to multiply and strengthen every possible effort for the enlightenment of public opinion to the end that there may be the fullest possible understanding of what has been going on and of what the consequences may be."

Besides Dr. Butler, Dr. Scott and Dr. Shotwell, the trustees of the Endowment include:

David P. Barrows of Berkeley, California, former president of the University of California; Robert S. Brookings of Washington, D. C., philanthropist, founder of Brookings Institution; Daniel K. Catlin of St. Louis, distinguished lawyer and a director in many large business corporations and in charitable and educational institutions;

John W. Davis of New York, former Ambassador to Great Britain and president of the English-Speaking Union for the United States; Norman H. Davis of New York, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and American delegate to the Disarmament Conference; Frederic A. Delano, treasurer of the Endowment, former member of the Federal Reserve Board; Lawton B. Evans of Augusta, Georgia, superintendent of Schools of Augusta, and author; Austen G. Fox of New York, long prominent in legal work in relation to civic betterment; Robert A. Franks, retired steel manufacturer; Charles S. Hamlin of Washington, D. C., twice Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, member of the Federal Reserve Board and of many arbitration commissions to foreign countries; Howard Heinz of Pittsburgh, well known for his philanthropic activities; Alanson B. Houghton, former Ambassador to Japan; Robert E. Olds of New York and Paris, member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague; Henry S. Pritchett of New York, former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Elihu Root of New York, former Secretary of State, recipient of the 1912 Nobel Peace Prize and champion of the Permanent Court of International Justice; James R. Sheffield of New York, former Ambassador to Mexico; Maurice S. Sherman, editor of the Hartford Courant; Jeremiah Smith, Jr., of Boston, who as commissioner general of the League of Nations for Hungary from 1924 to 1926, accomplished the tremendous task of reconstructing Hungary financially, and Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, vice president for the United States of the International Chamber of Commerce.

Japanese Sprint Star Clips Off Century in 10.7

LOS ANGELES, July 13 (AP)—Takanori Yoshoka, Japan's ranking sprinter, served notice on the world today that he must be reckoned with in the 100 meters dash of the Xth Olympiad here July 30 to August 14.

Racing through the short sprint instructions to do 11.3, Yoshoka clipped the metric century in 10.7 yesterday, almost walking through the tape at the finish. It was his first test since he left the land of the cherry blossoms 21 days ago where he left behind a top mark of 10.5 seconds.

Yoshoka displayed a brilliant start, but apparently realizing he was overstepping instructions just eased into the tape. Two experienced timers caught him at 10.7. Yoshoka is the son of a Shinto Priest.

FRANSES OLYMPIC VILLAGE

LOS ANGELES, July 13 (AP)—Major George Van Roessem, secretary of the Netherlands Olympic committee, seen in the Olympic village where the athletes of the world are being housed, a medium for continued world peace on a par with the Geneva conference.

"It is a wonderful idea," said Major Van Roessem, who was general manager of the organizing committee which staged the 1928 games at Amsterdam. "This idea of the athletes of the world living together as neighbors will go a long way toward the promoting of world peace."

Someone suggested it might be even better than the world court, now in session. The major smiled broadly and shrugged his shoulders, but would make no such drastic comment.

He predicted complete success of the Xth Olympiad July 30 to August 14, praising the work of the Los Angeles organizing committee in its preparations.

It was his opinion that the athletes of the world would find climatic conditions and the games courses here very much to their liking, but tempered the statement with the remark that it is only natural for those who lose to blame defeat on attendant circumstances.

Major Van Roessem is a veteran of many international contests. He competed for Holland in the fencing events in three Olympic games starting in 1906, and has attended the last six of them.

Those Three "Firsts"

The expression, "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen" may be interpreted as meaning that George Washington was victorious in war, was first to head the new government, and was ranked as the most loved by his compatriots.

Bogus Bills Are Passed in Oregon

Two stores in an Oregon chain have been unfortunate enough to take counterfeit $20 bills in payment for merchandise. To avoid more losses of this type we are giving a detailed description of these bills as given by the newspaper from Dallas, Ore.

"An examination of the bills revealed that they are a very clever piece of work, with the exception of the printing. The impression is uneven and the upper part of the face of the bill is lightly inked.

"While it is difficult to determine what process was used in securing the plate used in the printing, it would seem probable that an original bill was photographed and a line etching made by a photo engraver. This would have been a simple matter for the back of the bill, printed in green, but was somewhat more difficult for the face as the series figures and seal are in green and the balance in black. The seal is imprinted in green over shaded letters TWENTY making it necessary to rout out the seal from the original cut and restore the shaded portion. It is apparent that this has been done as the shaded portion under the seal is heavier than the balance. The plate used for the back evidently became

Mayans Used Jade And Hematite As Fillings For Teeth

PHILADELPHIA, July 13 (AP)—An organ throne and a complete burial vault dating back to 785 A. D., found in Pedras Negras, Guatemala, by the Edwidge R. Johnson expedition of the University of Pennsylvania museum, were described Tuesday by J. Aiden Mason, field director.

The bones of a person of high rank and the partial remains of two children were found in the vault, along with a number of ornaments. These included jewelry of translucent jade and a mirror of pyrite inlaid 10 inches in diameter, probably the largest ever found in the Maya territory. Fifteen of the adult's teeth had been inset with discs of jade and hematite.

Gym Work Aid To Golfer's Health

Golf with its walking, bending, and stretching movements offers excellent exercise for arms, shoulders and legs, but unless a player has a firm abdominal muscles it has a tendency to force the internal organs downwards, thus giving rise to many intestinal ailments.

At present time I perform daily a series of exercises designed to strengthen the muscles of the abdomen, and they offset the effects of exercise done in an upright position. While lying flat on my back I raise first one leg then the other, then both together, do the same exercise with the knees, sit up and touch my toes, and other similar movements.

Changing Time Systems

Standard time was adopted in 1883 on the initiative of the American Railway association. At noon of November 18, 1883, the telegraphic time signals sent out daily from the naval observatory, at Washington, were changed to the new system, according to which the meridians of 75 degrees, 90 degrees, 105 degrees and 120 degrees west from Greenwich became the time meridians of eastern, central, mountain and western time, respectively.
