The affair took place at a lovely, shady grove on the B. W. Bates farm where Mr. and Mrs. Bates had spent a week preparing for the occasion. With the 10 gallons of ice cream donated by the Blue Mountain creamery added to that made by the various families, there were about 18 gallons to be disposed of. The afternoon was spent socially, some few preferring to swim in the frigid waters at the pool above the falls of Little creek, while others pitched horseshoes. THE MID-SUMMER DINNER

Entertaining during the warm days of summer often becomes something of a problem. In planning a dinner menu whether for the hungry traveler, the house guest or family friends, it is better to plan menus containing simple dishes easy to prepare, and which will leave you free to visit with the guests. The entertaining of the guests is as important as the food served them.

Feed For All Stock

Just now the field peas make a picturesque view with their bountiful crop of pink and white blossoms. Experiments have shown that these valuable forage crop in Eastern Oregon for fattening hogs, cattle, or as a high protein feed to mix with rations. They are worth about half as much as grain and by using them instead of high-priced tankage for the hog-fattening ration, there is considerable saving in expense.

Advise Seeding Clover

As a Valley Cash Crop the Grande Ronde valley is capable of producing fine stands of wheat and farmers have used this as their main crop. But there are other grains that can be produced successfully as cash crops. Among these, experiments show that clover yields well in this valley. The moisture is just right here for clover while in many other localities, conditions are unsuitable for the production. There are rotated so as to be repeated on the same soil every third year and the results show some fine crops. The same crops are also rotated on fertilized ground and the results compared in the weight of the grain.

Grangers Have a Varied Day's Program

In addition to this interesting tour of the station with the many projects so carefully explained, the day's program contained many other features. The dinner at noon, or sometime after, depending on the time required for the tour, is no small item. Larger and smaller groups, families, neighborhoods, different sub-ordinates, form the basis for the serving of the picnic dinner. To this, different stores and organizations, the Union chamber of commerce contribute such as the ice cream, the soft-ice, etc.
