the Sound. They were accompanied to the valley by William Green, who is also visiting his sister, Mrs. Wright and who will make an extended visit among relatives here.

Organizations Meet—The American Legion and the Auxiliary of Union, held their monthly social meeting at the woman's club house Monday evening. They had several visitors present who were surprised at the amount of work accomplished by the two organizations during the past year. The annual reports of all the departments were given. Special interest was shown in the disposition of the money earned by the poppy sale as nearly every one gives his mite toward this important fund. After expenses had been paid, two-thirds of the money goes to the general fund for child welfare and the local organization gets the other third. This last year with the money they received, they made 12 dresses, 14 night gowns, four pairs of pajamas, four shirts, three coats and five quilts. They did quite a lot of hospital sewing, held classes in Americanism, and considered their work through their own 4-H club leaders and boy scout organization (at North Powder). The legion took over the fire department and reorganized it, and helped to raise money to pay out on the new fire truck. They are now working for a pump and the balance of the equipment.

Return Home—Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Cross who have been visiting a few weeks among their old friends and neighbors at Elgin have returned to their home at Tracy, Cal.

C. E. Society—On Friday the fifteenth the Lower Cove Christian Endeavor society met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Elmer. During the first part of the evening the usual C. E. meeting was held with Harvey Elmer acting as leader. The topic was "How Far Does the Teaching of Jesus Affect Our Conduct?" There were about 55 present, among them were five Union county officers, Hulda Anderson, Katherine Moran, Mildred Stoddard, Nellie Gray and Dr. McPherson. After the meeting, games were played and refreshments were served.

Accept Penalty When In Trouble

Naturally, the best way of saving golf strokes is by not making them. Years ago I learned a costly lesson in a tournament in which I could have taken two over par on the last hole and won without difficulty.

I hooked my drive into the woods and might have pitched out to the fairway with the possibility of getting home in the next shot for a sure par five. However, I took a No. 2 iron and attempted a long shot in a line between two trees. After the second shot had hit a tree I finished the hole in 11 strokes and lost the tournament.

Most golfers have had similar experiences. When you're in trouble, don't try to perform a miracle. Take your club, use your head as well as your clubs. You'll get more pleasure out of your game and while saving strokes.

Gambler's Throw by Eustace L. Adams

SYNOPSIS: The members of Ashwood's "house party," whom he is holding for ransom, are assembled by accident to find one of their number murdered. Stevens, a detective, who was attending Ashwood's island, are awaiting a chance to help Novoyi Wozniak and the other captives.

Chapter 23 ON THE BEACH

BENEATH the washstand in the far corner was a steel and silver table knife. Its edge still gleamed redly in the light. A few inches away lay a wrinkled table napkin, its corner and one edge drenched with blood.

Stevens stood at the edge of the washstand, looking down at the exhibits, studying knife and napkin intently. He lifted the latter very gingerly, holding it by the edge with his thumb and forefinger. He carried it beneath the light and studied it, inch by inch. Then, with a depressed sigh, he handed it to Jerry.

"No use looking for finger prints without a microscope," he said regretfully. "Might as well pick up the knife, too. The knife that did Williams is still the knife that did Williams in spite of the fact that the napkin at dinner time, wrapped the handle of the knife in the napkin, so as not to leave any prints. Better take care of them, kid, and we'll look them over in the morning. But I don't believe we'll find anything."

"I'll send for Alfred and see from whose place the things were stolen," suggested Ashwood. "No use," declared the detective pessimistically. "If the fellow was smart enough to cover up his finger prints this way, he wouldn't have stolen the tools from his own place. Might be the best way of finding out who did not do it, though. The one whose things were missing is innocent."

He roved around the room restlessly, his faded eyes examining everything. Then he straightened up, looked at Ashwood and shook his head. "One of these homicide experts could find a lot, maybe, with the proper instruments — microscope, chemicals, and such. But I don't see a thing that looks like a clue. The fibre of this rug doesn't hold the imprint of my own feet, even for more than two-three seconds after I step down hard on it. No bloody finger marks except those this poor devil made when he tried to crawl off the bed. Clothes aren't muddled and no attempt made at robbery. Don't see any motive at all."

"All right, then," snapped Ashwood decisively. "I'll lock the door and have the men clean up to the morning."

The three fled out silently. The others, Lucel, Mallory, Martin, Battles and Hamilton, were still standing nervously in the hall, guarded by the armed and vigilant Mueller. The cripple locked the bedroom door, then wheeled about and faced the others.

"Gentlemen," he announced curtly, "someone has just murdered Mr. Williams. If any of you have heard any suspicious sounds this evening, I would like you to tell me."

There was a shuddering gasp from one of the listeners, but all stood there, gazing at Ashwood as though hypnotized. He surveyed each of them in turn, in the order of their nearness to the door leading into the scene of the tragedy. Then, amid the deathly silence that hung over the strange tableau, the sound of running feet was
