SEALS LAMBAST PORTLAND 23-1

Hollywood Trims Seattle 3 to 1 to Cut Margin to Three Games.

By the Associated Press
San Francisco's Seals demonstrated the old saying, "The bigger they are the harder they fall," by taking the league leading Beavers to a 23 to 1 cleaning Tuesday. The Seals confined their scoring to four innings, but hammered two pitchers for 23 hits. They hopped on Hank McDonald for five runs in the second, which finished him. Jacobs went the rest of the way under heavy fire. Bill Henderson pitched the whole game for San Francisco, allowing only six hits.

Portland, the metropolis of the state, is in position to act as mediator between the various factions of Oregon seeking improvement of the river along varied lines. Portland will receive benefit no matter what plan is developed and is willing to co-operate with the most feasible program, business leaders reported.

The Dalles has taken the stand, which is in accordance with the report at the time of the first survey, that this district will stand solidly behind the report of the army engineers. The survey is an engineering problem and is the belief of leaders here that an engineer's recommendation should be accepted. That is sound logic.

This summer The Dalles and the entire state of Oregon has an opportunity to sell the needs of the district to the United States senate. A delegation from the senate committee which will hold hearings here will have ample opportunity to seek the present conditions and learn how such a river improvement program will benefit the entire northwest.

The hearings are to be conducted at an opportune time. They will come on the heels of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur's visit to the Pacific Northwest. The senators in all probability will have opportunity to talk to Secretary Wilbur either before or after the hearings and Wilbur's stand is well known.

The Pacific Northwest must rely upon the improvement of the Columbia river for advancement. President Hoover's cabinet member said in a recent talk. His opinion agrees wholeheartedly with that of leaders, not only in The Dalles, but Portland, Pendleton and other points. There must be new money injected into the territory or means supplied whereby new money may be secured.

The need of the improvement is well known. The method of securing that improvement is yet to be outlined. The drafting of plans for the whole with the all important step and should be directed toward a unified action of the entire northwest.—The Dalles Chronicle.

A. W. Ohlenschlager, who has been umpiring recreation ball games at Columbus, O., for ten years, never argues with the players—he is deaf and dumb.

ADOLF HITLER: GERMANY'S QUESTION MARK

No. 3—His Anti-Jewish Drive

By Louis F. Loebner
BERLIN (AP)—Of Germany's 63,000,000 inhabitants there is one element, comprising at least 500,000, which seems doomed to a period of social ostracism, and treatment as second class citizens if the July elections give Hitler's Nazis control of Germany. That element is the Jews.

Anti-Semitism is a cardinal doctrine in the creed of Adolf Hitler. "Juda verrecke" ("Perish the Jews") is as much of a slogan for wearers of the brown shirt as is "Down with capitalism!" for communists.

On every Nazi book stand one finds a pamphlet of 100 pages titled, "Adolf Hitler's Speeches." It begins with his platform utterances in 1922, a year before he attempted his "beer cellar putsch" at Munich.

One of his first public addresses was delivered while a world economic conference was meeting at Genoa in April, 1922. Speaking at Munich, Hitler warned that "democracy is in principle not German, but Jewish." He also claimed that the Jews incited the broad masses of the German people into the November "insurrection" (meaning the overthrow of the Hohenzollerns in November, 1918).

A few months later Walter Rathenau, Germany's Jewish foreign minister, was assassinated and Hitler said the murder was "solely due to the fact that the Jews were undeservingly given positions of prominence."

On April 13, 1923, a whole speech was devoted to the thesis that "the Jew and the world's stock exchanges were responsible for the World war."

More recently Hitler has been moderate in his language. In private talks he even states that "decent Jews" have nothing to fear. In practice, however, the anti-Semitism continues with Nazi pressure exerted in all directions. Even the Von Papen cabinet, close though it is to the Nazis, was severely criticized when it appointed a man of Jewish antecedents as chief of the government press department, and a half-Jew as undersecretary of finance.

The most recent example was furnished on June 24, when the Hitlerites introduced a bill in the Prussian diet demanding the possessions of all east European Jews who have entered Germany since August 1, 1924, be confiscated on the ground that Jews belong to "a race which does not work productively, but merely grasps."

Another motion demanded the compilation of a list of all Jews employed in Prussian state operas and state theatres. The intention was obvious—to oust all Jewish artists.

A German movie concern has dropped its Jewish stars because it fears that films in which they appear may call forth interruptions by the Nazis.

Child, 2, Weighs Half As Much As Midget Mother

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—When a stranger knocks at the home of Mrs. Thomas Leslie and she comes to the door, she is always prepared for a dialogue like this:

"Is your mother home?"

"I'm the mother here."

Mrs. Leslie is only a little over three feet, six inches tall. Her daughter, who is 23 months old, weighs half as much as she does and is as tall as an average child of her age.

Mrs. Leslie, once a trouper with a midget act, made her home alone, makes most of her child's clothing and prepares meals for her husband, who is nearly six feet tall.

Years ago she did all the cooking for her father and seven brothers, all over six feet, six inches tall, familiar with household activities.

UNBID ACTION
Unity of purpose is guaranteed leaders in the fight for improvement of the Columbia river if plans announced here by members of the Portland Good Will contingent met here. This is the first time since the program was started for the harnessing of the powerful Columbia that there has been any indication the various factions would be able to agree on one point.

Early in the fight for the improvement of the river the various factions were informed that if the state was divided on the proposition nothing would be accomplished and yet there was a marked division. Now with the program again under way leaders apparently are seeing the futility of the first move and are seeking con-
