which no other mortal has entered. He mapped out the day's plans coolly and methodically and indicated the scientific results were all that interested him.

Pending the examination of the instruments, he refused to say more than that he had reached a height of nearly 55,000 feet and encountered temperatures which were five degrees below zero at the altitude of the spherical aluminum gondola and 67 degrees below on the outside.

The instruments, as well as the gondola itself, were taken last night from Cavallaro Di Monzarrano, where he landed, to the Italian aviation school here. Prof. Piccard said they had not been harmed by the jar although the gondola itself was dented a little by the impact.

Undoubtedly, he said, they would reveal very interesting information, especially on the effect of cosmic rays that far above the earth's surface, the study of which was the principal reason he braved the stratosphere a second time.

From the minute he crawled out of the gondola yesterday, shakily after the sudden drop from below zero temperatures to sizzling heat, the professor was all the calm scientist. All his movements have been cool and methodical.

Even as, with his companion, Max Cosyns, he calmly sat down on the ground and ate a can of peaches after his landing while excitement buzzed in the crowds that gathered around him, so he calmly superintended the hauling of the balloon and instruments here last night.

He ate a communique supper at a little hotel and went to bed immediately.

It was almost nightfall when they left the spot where they landed. Their every move had been watched by crowds of peasants, to whom it was an extraordinary occurrence. They do not read newspapers and had no notion what the whole thing meant.

They reached their greatest height, Prof. Piccard said, three hours after they took off yesterday morning from Dubendorf, Switzerland. From that vantage point of ten miles, the world was a strange looking place. Landmarks were indistinct and the maps were of little value.

Only the large lakes indicated where they were. He recognized Lake Garda, 12 miles northwest of Cavallaro Di Monzarrano, and decided to land there, but it took two hours to bring the balloon down.

The balloon was recognized by many people in the larger towns and when he finally headed toward land, scores of automobiles followed him. Some of the instruments were knocked off their bases when the balloon landed, he said, but apparently were not damaged. He said they functioned remarkably well in the extreme cold.

He ate Cosyns, his companion on the flight, slept for 11 hours last night and when they arose this morning there was a batch of congratulatory telegrams, among them one from the king and queen of the Belgians.

Prof. Piccard said Cosyns did all the observation of cosmic rays during the flight, he himself giving all his attention to navigation of the balloon.

The rays, he said, increased in intensity as the altitude of the balloon increased, until "they were like rain on a tin roof."

He was too busy with navigation to observe his own sensations, but he recalled that the view from above the Alps was indescribably beautiful. From the gondola they could see the Tyrolean and Adriatic seas and 100 Italian lakes at the same time. It was difficult to follow the map, he said, because the windows of the Gondola are so small.

A great crowd outside the hotel cheered this morning until the aeronauts appeared on the balcony. Today or tomorrow Prof. Piccard will go to Verona for some lighter clothing. Tonight he broadcasts over an Italian radio hookup and tomorrow night he will go back to Zurich.

ACCUSED OF MURDER GRANT'S PASS, Aug. 19 (AP)—Milton Wiley, 38, was accused of first degree murder in a complaint filed late Thursday by the Josephine county district attorney, following a week's investigation of the shooting of John Simeman, 45, resident of the Jump-Off-Joe district. Wiley waived hearing and was committed to jail to await grand jury action.

tion Temperance Union today selected Mildred Wiley, for next year's convention, the date to be determined later by the officers of the organization.

With the campaign cry of "no compromise," the convention ended today. Delegates were returning home planning to win the battle for retention of the party.

Moore claimed that he knew nothing of gables on Mr. Smith's head, last night in prayer by some not-too-sharp instrument.

The securing of the confession from Moore definitely brings the slaying of Mr. Smith into the courts, retaining the physical evidence case the prisoner may follow.

the year 1876 and was owned by the Inghamton and Green and societies of Salt Lake City. Ed Griffith, who had the building leased, operated a cafe in connection with the hotel. There were several rooms for the building and it was with difficulty that one of the late sleepers, A. Hansen, was aroused and sent from the burning building. The barber shop of the hotel also was occupied a part of the hotel. The one story building owned by Jimmie Johnson that was destroyed had his barber shop and the offices of Dr. T. M. Gilroy.

Everything was carried from the buildings into the street and new places of business had to be found last night in the city. Main street, it was thought, that the company owning the hotel carried some insurance. The amount of damage has not been estimated but the loss to the city is probably in the thousands. Little likelihood that any buildings will be replaced.

suit in a changed situation during the next six months should the executive choose to leave the state should there be a vacancy in that office for any other reason. Frank Longman, speaker of the house, automatically becomes lieutenant-governor.

Political observers here however go further in view of Longman's reported consideration of running for mayor of Portland in November. Should he be a successful candidate, he likely would resign, leaving the houses of the legislature without a presiding officer until the 1933 session, and without lieutenant-governor.

The Oregon constitution does not provide for any further successor to the governor's chair in the event of this contingency, the attorney-general's office announced today. It has been the belief here that the secretary of state would be the third in line, originating probably from the provisions prior to 1920 when the constitution stated that the secretary of state would succeed to the office directly should there be a vacancy. An amendment replaced this act and does not provide further than the speaker of the house.

MARK'S RESIGNATION WOULD ALSO TAKE HIM OUT OF CONSIDERATION FOR RE-ELECTION AS PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE, AND LEAVES THE FIELD VIRTUALLY CLEAR FOR E. K. KIDDER, LEADING MAYOR, UMATILLA AND UNION COUNTIES, POLITICAL OBSERVERS DECLARE. KIDDER RECEIVED THE PLEDGES OF SEVERAL SENATORS AT THE CLOSE OF THE LAST SESSION, AND HAS BEEN CONSIDERED FOR RE-ELECTION DURING 1933. THE POSITION HAS BEEN ALTERNATED BETWEEN WESTERN AND EASTERN OREGON UNDER MUTUAL AGREEMENT IN RECENT YEARS. IT WAS STRONGLY INDICATED TODAY THAT KIDDER WOULD RECEIVE THE SUPPORT OF THE ADMINISTRATION FOR THE POST.

The Linn county senator has been in the upper house of the legislature for six years, and has two more years in office.

SPURNS 'HONORABLE' TITLE AS POLITICS' SOP TO EGO AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Ordinances sponsored by City Councilman Scott Nixon go out without the usual "Hon." in front of the name. "I am not to be called Hon. Scott Nixon," he instructed the clerk of the council. He said that in England the "Honorable" is a sign of nobility, but that in this country it is a term used to make politicians feel important.

BAND LEADER ON THE JOB NEW YORK (AP)—With a sudden torrential rain drowning out a recent game between the Giants and the Cubs, the leader of the military band struck up "River, Keep Away From My Door."

ROCHESTER YACHTS WIN COBOURG, Ont. (AP)—Rochester Yacht club made a clean sweep of the important races in the Lake Yacht Racing association. Conewago won the Goodenham cup race, and Shadow the Lipton trophy event.

rather type; and commanded the detective to put up his hands. Mr. Smith refused and they grappled. During the scuffle both men had guns in their hands and Moore shot three or four times and Mr. Smith once. Then Moore heard a shot from behind and his companion said: "The shot must have got him."

Mr. Helm said Moore's story indicated Newman was the companion and that he had a 38 caliber gun at the time. Officers found a 38 caliber shell at Hilgard, after the shooting, and the autopsy revealed that one bullet went through Mr. Smith's body. Three other bullets found in his body all were of 22 caliber, the size of Moore's gun.

Moore said that a bullet from Mr. Smith's gun barely grazed his head, cutting off some of his hair, but officers were a bit skeptical of this, finding no physical proof to substantiate the prisoner's story in this respect, they said.

Held Here Since Aug. 5 Newman has been held here since the day after the killing, when he and a number of other transients were arrested. He has refused to talk when attempts were made to question him. Mr. Helm expected to question him further today.

Moore is held incommunicado in the county jail, although officers were to grant his request that he be allowed to see a priest. Newspapermen and others were denied entrance as yet.

The other five transients held here have not been charged with any part in the slaying, out with being detained by their material witnesses.

Knows Nothing of Gashes Moore claimed that he knew nothing of gashes on Mr. Smith's head, last night in prayer by some not-too-sharp instrument.

The securing of the confession from Moore definitely brings the slaying of Mr. Smith into the courts, retaining the physical evidence case the prisoner may follow.

The prosecution had not completed its plans this morning, pending the outcome of the questioning of Newman, and other possible developments.
