

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By LAURA LOU BROOKMAN (Copyright 1932) (By NEA Service Inc.)

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Cherry Dixon, 19 and pretty, tells her mother she is going to a club meeting but instead meets Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter with whom she is in love. Her wealthy parents do not know she is acquainted with Dan. Cherry goes with him to interview a bank robber's sweetheart. She blunders into underworld headquarters and a bullet strikes her arm. Dan takes her to a doctor's office and then home. He is trying to explain what has happened when Mr. Dixon appears. Dixon is very angry and brandishes a newspaper containing Cherry's picture and an account of the shooting. He orders Dan out of the house. Days pass in which Cherry has no word from Dan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI Sarah entered the room breathlessly, the door behind her. Her round eyes foretold excitement. The girl on the chaise longue did not turn. Her peach colored negligee about the slender figure glistened it gracefully. On her feet were small gold strapped sandals. "Is that you, Sarah?" the girl asked indifferently.

"Yes, Miss Cherry." "Something in the woman's voice made Cherry Dixon raise her eyes. Before she could speak Sarah placed a finger to her lips, shook her head and suddenly she crossed to the chaise longue. Then, with Celtic instinct for the dramatic, she paused. "What is it, Sarah?" "Oh, darling! Wait till I tell you. It's not right, it isn't, and somebody'll pay for it! Out and out falsifyin' and there's blacker words I could use. It's not right at all. "What isn't right at all? What's happened?"

Again old Sarah put a warning finger to her lips. "Not so loud," she cautioned, "lowering her tone. "If they were to know I'd told— She raised two eyes heavenward as if expecting the firmament to rock at the suggestion. "Poor lamb," she finished, muttering, "I'm that sorry for you!"

Cherry was sitting bold upright now. Impatiently she caught the woman's hands. "But tell me what's happened!" she begged. "Sarah sat down beside the girl. "Well, then," she said, plunging into her narrative, "I was looking for Martha to ask if the package had come from Wendell's and just as I stepped in the hall I heard Martha talking on the library telephone. So I waited until she finished. No Mr. Martha says, 'Miss Cherry ain't at home and I don't know when she will be. She's gone to New York. That's what she says—it's God's truth! She's gone to New York. So when she put down the telephone I said, 'Martha, who is it you're telling such untruths and ain't you ashamed of yourself?'"

"Martha came back at me and said she guessed it was her duty to do what Mrs. Dixon said and what business of mine was it to be interferin'?" Well, a few words passed between us and do you know what I found out? That that young newspaper fellow, Phillips— "Dan!" Cherry's eyes were flashing. "Then he did call!" "Yes, and not just this one time neither. After I'd learned that much Martha warmed up and admitted he's been telephoning the house every day. Your mother would let me know if she had anything about it and this morning she said if he called again Martha was to tell him you'd gone to New York. "Oh, but Sarah— " "I know, darling. It's a black shame, that's what it is. As nice a young fellow as you'd be findin' anywhere, too. It's your father that's behind it. Still, I have a temper about what happened the other afternoon." "But, Sarah, if Dan thinks I've gone to New York he won't call any more! Maybe he'll expect I want to see him—maybe he'll blame me!"

"The older woman nodded, agreeing soberly. "And what to blame him?" she asked. "Young fellows don't like to be put off. They were that way in my day and I guess they're behind it now. It's not too bad, honey, but we can't help it." "Suddenly Cherry had sprung to her feet. "What can help it?" she exclaimed. "They can't do this to me—they can't!" She stamped one of the small gold heels. "They've no right to tell lies and keep messages from me!" "I'm not a child any longer. I'm 19!"

Sarah was on her feet, too, her eyes dark with alarm. She put a restraining hand on the girl's arm. "Quiet!" she begged. "Someone will hear you. You mustn't take it this way, Miss Cherry. You'll only make things worse!"

"I'll draw back. Obeyingly her voice lowered but her expression was as determined as ever. "Don't!" Cherry said. "Oh—with a rust of steel emotion—" "What is this means to me? They're trying to make Dan think I don't care any longer. They're trying to make him forget me! Well, I won't let them! Come on—there's no time to lose. You'll have to help me!"

Sarah's protests were useless. They felt as if they were being pushed away. Warned the girl that revolt was futile. Defiance of Walter J. Dixon's orders was heresy. It was sheer madness! The words might as well have been addressed to the wall.

Aroused to action, Cherry was all at once a whirlwind. She flew about the room, pulling garments from the wardrobe, slipping on her head, stocking, slippers. Sarah followed patiently, helping with fasteners.

"But what are you going to do?" she asked again. "Where are you going?" "Cherry pulled the brown felt over her head and gave it a tug. "Now listen," she said, "I'm going to find Dan. I'm going to tell him I haven't gone away and all the other things they told him were untrue. Now here's how you're to help me—"

The conspiracy was planned quickly. Sarah, her white face an open revelation, made a reconnoitering expedition to the first floor. She returned to report that Mrs. Dixon was busy with callers. Martha was on duty in the front of the house and descending the rear staircase and going out through the door that led to the garden. Sarah's further part was to busy herself in the sewing room and if anyone inquired for Cherry to say the girl was asleep in her bedroom.

"May the Lord have mercy on the two of us!" Sarah breathed fervently as Cherry put a hand on the doorknob. The plan proved flawless. Within five minutes Cherry had reached the highway and was out of sight of the house. She walked the three blocks to the tiny drug store that exclusive Sherwood Heights not only tolerated but found invaluable. There she made two telephone calls. One was to Dan Phillips at the News office. The other was to a taxicab company.

Half an hour later the cab halted at a downtown street intersection. Cherry's face appeared, peering through the glass, and a tall young man clad in a gray suit strode out from the curb. He entered the cab. "Oh, Dan, I was so afraid I'd miss you!" The girl's face was glowing, her eyes sparkling. "Phillips did not smile. "Well," he said evenly, "this is quite a surprise. I couldn't understand over the phone exactly what it was you were saying. What's all this when you said Fifth or Sixth street—?"

His manner and voice were matter-of-fact, even a trifle aloof. There was nothing what ever about him to suggest the anguished, despairing author. "For an instant Cherry was taken back. She said tremulously, "I had to see you, Dan. I—just had to!" "Is there anything I can do for you?" Still the calm, level tones. "Aren't you glad to see me? The words burst from Cherry's lips unbidden. "Didn't you want me to come?"

"Why, yes. Of course. Only it's quite a surprise because I understood you'd gone east. New York or some place." "But that's why I called, Dan! They didn't tell me you'd come. They waited and waited expecting to hear from you and there weren't any letters and you didn't telephone! It was just this afternoon I found out they hadn't been giving me your messages. Sarah—she's the maid—found out they'd told you I'd gone away. Oh, it was so wicked of them! And I was so afraid you'd think I didn't want to talk to you! You didn't think that, did you, Dan? You couldn't!"

"Why, I've called a dozen times! Every day." "They didn't tell me!" "Then you mean it wasn't because you didn't want to see me? You weren't just stalling?" "No, of course not. How could you think of that! Oh, I've been so miserable, so unhappy—"

The words were lost in a sob. Cherry turned her face away. "You mustn't!" Phillips said gently. "You mustn't feel badly any longer. Please, Cherry—look at me!" There was a gleam in his eyes and slowly, hesitatingly, the girl turned her head. "Dan!" "Yes, darling!"

She was in his arms, the velvet softness of her warm cheek pressed to Dan's. He found her lips, crunched them again and again. He thought of the perfume of her hair, like incense arising about a goddess. Phillips drew back for an instant, staring into the starry eyes. "You're so sweet, Cherry, I've whistled, catching her close again. The words might have been a prayer. "Then—you do care?"

"But didn't you know? You must have! Oh, Cherry, these last three days have been rotten! I've been worried about you. Kept telephoning but I couldn't get any satisfaction. After a while I began to think maybe you didn't want to talk to me. Couldn't really blame you—but after the things your father said—"

It was at that moment that the taxi driver decided he had endured enough. For several minutes the cab had been held up by traffic signals. Now the red light was glowing. "Say," he said, "a taxi to take you to the hotel. You've been ignored, where do you people want to go?"

All members who have no way to go are asked to accompany them to the picnic. Mrs. McAlister, president, and she will see that a way is provided. Coffee will be furnished by the organization but each family is requested to bring a reunion along with the lunch basket.

Mr. and Mrs. Reece McAlister drove to Cornucopia Sunday on a business visit. At Pondosa they were joined by Mrs. William Meyers who accompanied them to the picnic. They made the same trip two weeks before to take Mrs. Meyers' son, William, to work there. Mr. McAlister, as one of the D. A. McAlister heirs who have interests in the mines, made the trips in interests of the property. While at Cornucopia Mr. and Mrs. McAlister enjoyed a visit with Nick Goley, a former resident of this locality. He is 82 years of age. They visited not only at the little town but at the mines which are located about two miles on up in the mountains and at an elevation of 7500 feet. Mrs. McAlister declared that they felt like they had surely been "up in the air" at the conclusion of their trip among the high mountain peaks.

Miss Dorothy Smuts left Wednesday for Portland to visit friends for two weeks. She will be the guest at the home of Rev. Mr. Putnam, former pastor of the Christian church in La Grande, and Mrs. Putnam and Mrs. Kordic. Mrs. Kordic was formerly Miss Violet Eckles who taught school a couple of years in Grande Ronde valley.

Mrs. Loren Turner is spending a few days visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Lena Gekeler. Mr. and Mrs. Turner are located at Athol where Mr. Turner is working for the state highway in the surveying department. Mrs. Turner and 10-month-old baby arrived here Tuesday. Mr. Turner plans to join them Saturday evening and then Sunday the family will return to Athol.

Fat Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hughes, who underwent an operation for appendicitis three weeks ago, is reported to be getting along very nicely although he is still at the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. William Goerham and Claude Hietrick, of Meridian, Ida., who are visiting relatives in the valley, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Reece McAlister Thursday.

J. B. Welmer, Fred Rees and John Price spent last week Wednesday on the Minam near Steamboat Lake. They returned with a nice lot of fish.

Mrs. Mable Scott and daughters, Donna and June, spent several days last week with her son, Ellis, who is herding sheep on Rock creek.

Mrs. Emory Ferguson and children went to Weston to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sanford Wednesday.

Mrs. Gladys Lilly has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Ed Salling. Culna brothers and A. Vey, of Echo, shipped lambs Wednesday. The Portland, Marks, Joe and Alfred Culna accompanied them.

G. W. Rugg, of Pilot Rock, has been visiting his son, Lowell Rugg. They are preparing to ship lambs Saturday. Bruce Morehead were business visitors in La Grande Thursday.

Rollin Thomas and John Wels, of Starkey, shipped lambs Sunday morning. The lambs were handled by a Utah concern.

Behind the tight pitching of Frank Langschmidt, they won from the Portland Lincoln Cardinals here yesterday, 7 to 3, in the tourney finals. Langschmidt had the game in hand except for the sixth inning, when Portland scored all their runs.

Meanwhile, his mates stepped into the lead with two runs in the first inning, on two hits and errors, and ended their scoring in the fifth, when home runs by Constable and Weber accounted for three more tallies.

In a consolation game, with Marianna, Miles City, Mont. hurler, pitching his second game in two days, his team defeated Pocatello, Ida., 3 to 0, to take third place in the tournament.

TRIPLE PLAY GOES TO WASTE SANTA CRUZ, Cal. (AP)—Although the Davenport 4-B baseball team lost in a city league game, it had the distinction of a triple play. It happened in the sixth inning when the first baseman snagged a fly.

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN PICTURES BY JOE KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

THE cop who pinched poor Duncy said, "I'll climb in and we'll drive ahead. The station isn't far from here and it won't take us long."

"I dislike pinching lads like you, but that's the only thing to do. You made that monkey speed and you should know that that is wrong."

"Oh, no I didn't," Duncy said. "In fact it scared me when we sped along the bumpy street. Why, I was sure that I'd fall out."

"I simply hung on good and tight, and maybe I would have been all right, but you came running up to us and then I heard you shout."

THE cop, by now, had crawled inside the cart, all ready for a ride. "Gladap," exclaimed poor Duncy. "We are heading for the jail."

And then he thought, gee, who can tell? The judge may throw us in a cell. The very thought of that made little Duncy turn real pale.

Eastern Oregon Nag Causes Panic

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 19 (AP)—Motorists and pedestrians were thrown into temporary panic here yesterday when a wild horse from the Eastern Oregon plains galloped across the city on a main east side street.

H. J. McMahon, Portland, got a rope, and sitting astride the hood of a motor car, started in pursuit and lassoed the horse.

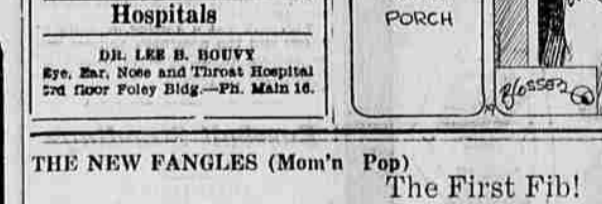

McMahon, an ex-cowboy, had not ridden the range for 22 years. It was finally returned to the horse raising plant corral from which it escaped.
