Has Eighty-Ninth Birthday— Mrs. William Schroeder, of Island City, or "Grandma Schroeder" as she is very much better known, celebrated her 89th birthday Thursday. And what a celebration it was! Her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Hermann, her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ben Schroeder, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Albert Stein, arranged a surprise for her in the afternoon. A group of her friends from Island City and La Grande were invited to the home of Mrs. Ben Schroeder. The house was prettily decorated for the event, great quantities of garden flowers being used. The guests who came gave "Grandma Schroeder" a shower—handkerchiefs and birthday cards—and she received many beautiful gifts and messages. The afternoon was spent informally and near the close some delicious refreshments were served. In the center of the servingtable was a bouquet and pink cosmos and anaparragons in a silver bowl, the gift of Mrs. Laura Conkey. The color scheme carried out in the refreshments was pink and white. The guests for the afternoon were the most of them, Mrs. Ben Schroeder, Miss Maude Come, Mrs. William Perin, Mrs. Sam Simmons, Mrs. Lillian Shafer, Mrs. William Thompson, of Coquille, Ore., Mrs. C. Prouty, Mrs. Fred Stone, Mrs. H. I. Hansen and Mrs. John Speckhart, of La Grande and Mrs. Lena Speckhart, of Quincy, Ill., together with the three hostesses.

John Schroeder, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Schroeder, had planned a trip to the lookout on Mt. Emily in his mother's birthday, but when he learned of the other arrangements the trip was a new experience for Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder, too, for in all the years they have resided in the valley, it had never been viewed from the lofty heights of Emily. This is a trip with a thrill which has been made possible for scores, or hundreds of valley residents by the recent construction of the newer road to the top of the mountain.

Vegetables such as beans, cabbage, beet tops and turnips, may be salted in three different ways—by dry salting with fermentation, dry salting without fermentation and by the strong brine method. Those wishing to know more of the process, can get full detail by writing to the college extension service.

Corn Is In Equal Value

Field corn grown in Oregon that is reasonably well dried has just the same feeding value as that imported from the middle west, judging from preliminary tests just completed by the Oregon State college experiment station on the comparative feeding value of Willamette valley and mid-west corn. Two loads of purebred Durac piglets averaging 73 pounds initial weight were fed on the two kinds of corn respectively, supplemented with fish meal. Only one day's difference was found in the length of time required to bring the average weight of both lots up to 175 pounds, a difference so slight that it is well within the range of experimental error, says A. W. Oliver, associate animal husbandman, who was in charge of the tests. The Willamette valley corn used was raised by E. M. Alderman of Dayton and contained slightly more than 11 per cent moisture. The other corn was No. 2 yellow shipped in from the middle west and contained just over 14 per cent moisture. The corn in each case was ground before feeding. "Some grain buyers have claimed that corn grown in the Willamette valley was lower in feeding value than corn from the middle west, so the experiment was run to test this belief," says Mr. Oliver. "The test indicates no difference in the two kinds of corn, though the experiment will be repeated before final conclusions are drawn. This preliminary test is confirmed, however, by tests at Washington experiment station, where lambs were fattened on western and middle western corn. It is conceded, however, that if either corn had contained an excessive amount of moisture its feeding value would probably have been lower." Corn production in Oregon has gradually increased in recent years, especially since the perfection of the corn picker and artificial drier, so that many farmers are now growing corn as a cash crop.

SPEEDBOATING NEW SPORT CORN KANSAS RIVER LAKE TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 19.—A virtual lake in a bend of the Kaw river near Topeka, about 200 yards wide and a mile long, has been turned into an informal race course for speedboating, newest sport to catch the fancy of this region. Numerous motor-driven craft make their appearance on Sundays and afternoons, along with a lone sailboat whose owner is practicing up on "yachting."

TODAY WE HAVE

Joe Harrison, Grange Hall Joe Harrison is a dairyman of the Grange Hall district, but is widely known all over the Grande Ronde valley.

A modern dairy barn, that conforms to the strict sanitary conditions of the dairy laws, there is an average of 20 cows milked daily. After the milk has been drawn it is taken to the milk house in which all modern equipment has been installed, and is then prepared for market.

His dairy herd is made up of grade Jerseys headed by a pure bred Jersey sire. To keep alert on the line relative to his class of business Mr. Harrison belongs to the Dairyman's association.

Mr. Harrison was born in Union county, Oregon, being the son of Oliver and Catherine Harrison. Grange Hall district was his native place and in that locality he was reared. After completing the grades at Liberty, the high school in La Grande, finishing his education, he assisted his father for awhile in operating his diversified farm. In 1915, the year of his marriage to Miss Wilma Blystone, deciding to farm for himself, he leased the place of his father and two years later he bought it.

The farm is located three and one quarter miles westward from La Grande on the Geiger lane. At the time of purchase the property was quite well improved but now and then the present owner has added improvements to both the out-buildings and the home until now it is a place of convenience and comfort.

Return Home— Mr. and Mrs. Phil Fortner and family of Baker, have returned to their home at Baker following a vacation outing at Wallowa Lake, where they had Miss Blanche Clark's cabin for a week. Mr. Fortner is county agricultural agent of Baker county.

Return Home— Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson former residents of Island City, when Mr. Thompson was principal of the Island school, returned yesterday to their home at Coquille after a visit of a few weeks in this valley. Their son, Lloyd, and his wife and her sister, of Soda Springs, Ida., made a brief visit with his parents here the first of the week.

Select Feed Crop Of Smallest Cost

"Grow the crop that will produce the greatest amount of feed at the smallest cost," advises R. E. Hodgson, of the dairy husbandry staff, Western Washington experiment station, in discussing the growing of crops for silage. "Wherever it can be grown successfully, corn is the common silage crop. When it is cut up for silage it packs well and undergoes desirable changes. Under normal conditions, corn should be harvested for silage when nearly mature, or when about three-fourths of the kernels have hardened. Fairly good silage may be made from frosted corn or immature corn, although it is inferior to that made from the more mature corn. Silage from immature corn has a tendency to be sloppy. "Farmers who are located where corn does not do well will find sunflowers a good substitute. It makes feed that is from 80 to 90 per cent as good as corn silage, and in most parts of the state, a greater yield per acre may be expected of the sunflower. For the making of silage, sunflowers should be harvested when about one-third of the heads are in bloom. If the sunflowers are allowed to mature, the stems get woody and make silage of lower feeding value. "I do not believe it is an economical practice to ensile legume or grass crops alone," continues Mr. Hodgson. "It is more difficult to handle the fresh cut crop. When legumes are ensiled alone the moisture content is so high that it makes a sloppy silage, and due to the low sugar content proper fermentation does not take place. It produces a bitter, unpalatable feed. Good results will be achieved, however, through the mixing of legumes with corn or sunflowers in the silo. If the ration of corn to legumes is about two to one, no trouble will be encountered in the preservation of the material."

State May Obtain Fruit For Relief

SALEM, Aug. 19.—Orchard properties which should yield from 25 to 30 tons of prunes this fall could be turned over to state relief organizations to aid unemployment, it was suggested in a letter received by Governor Julius L. Meier from Jerrald Owen, secretary of the state bonus commission. Properties mentioned are now owned by the state through the World War veterans' state aid commission. Owen in his letter stated these farms are located in Marion, Polk and Yamhill counties, and that under the present market conditions he believed the commission would not be justified in harvesting the crops. Twenty-five acres are in Marion county, 25 in Polk and 1 1/2 in Yamhill.

IDAHO FOOTBALL PLAYERS ARE GOOD SCHOLARS TOO

MOSCOW, Idaho.—Scholarship troubles are not going to worry football players at the University of Idaho this fall according to present indications. Not one of Coach Leo Galland's 22 leading players "flunked" a single course during the spring semester. Only two men of the entire squad of 40 received an "F" grade in any course, and those two are eligible since they passed the required number of hours.

Texas League In History DALLAS, Tex.—After three and a half years' labor, the history of the Texas league has been completed. It recounts the 44-year life of the circuit in 240 pages of reading matter and photographs.

Establish Milk Route To Yokohama

"It's a long way to Yokohama," to paraphrase an old war ditty, but not too great a distance, with aid of fast steamers and modern refrigeration, to establish the longest milk route in the world. At least this is the hope of the Oregon Dairy Council, the State Steamship company and dairy manufacturers and producers of the state who co-operated in a trial shipment of Oregon fresh milk and cream, butter, cottage cheese, ice cream and cheese on the steamer Maunawili which sailed from Portland last Saturday direct to Yokohama, Japan. The Maunawili, the first refrigeration equipped ship to sail direct from Portland to the Orient, will call at Kobe, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Manila and sample dairy products from Oregon farms will be introduced in all these ports.

Special refrigeration which will keep ice cream and cottage cheese at almost zero temperatures had other compartments which will maintain a steady chill of about 33 degrees is expected to insure the delivery of these products in perfect condition. Butter and cheese have been sent to the Orient before but as far as is shown by port records this is the first cross-Pacific shipment of fresh fluid milk and cream and ice cream. Frozen milk bars, to tickle the palates of Oriental boys and girls, will also be included in the shipment.

"Japanese health authorities and health leaders in the Philippine Islands, led by Governor Roosevelt, are doing all they can to increase the use of dairy products among their people," reports Paul G. Adams, executive secretary of the Oregon Dairy Council. "Recent out-breaks of tuberculosis have awakened these health leaders to the necessity of dairy products in the daily diet. Comparisons of American born Japanese with their parents show that Oriental children fed on American dairy products attain a much greater height and better physical development. Japanese Council of the Portland office has been very interested in these shipments to his country."

Olympic Films Will Be Shown Sunday, Monday

An extra feature for showing Sunday and Monday at the Liberty will be news shots of the Olympic games, including the following: Lauri Lehtinen's disputed, sensational victory over Ralph Hill, Oregon university star, who finished a surprising second by three inches. The stirring finish in the 80-meter hurdles for women, won by Babe Didrikson by two inches from Evelyn Hill. Italy provides upset when Luigi Beccali wins 1500-meter race. Bill Carr wins from Ben Eastman in 400-meter race. Finnish javelin stars finish one, two, three. Miller, of Stanford, wins by hair's breadth in pole vault over Japanese star. Eddie Tolan wins 200-meter dash. Finland takes first in 300-meter steeplechase.

Announcement is being made this week that the annual 4-H club picnic will be held on Wednesday, August 31, at the Eastern Oregon experiment station, a half mile west of Union. County superintendent of schools, E. A. Sayre, and county agricultural agent, H. G. Avery, who have charge of all 4-H club work in the county, have arrangements for this event in charge. Prize winning exhibits are to be made at the annual Grange Fair and Home Products show, he states, but those who plan to exhibit their work can secure some excellent practice at the county picnic.

Stock judging will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning and will be under the supervision of Mr. Avery. Members of 4-H Stock clubs will participate in this part of the program, and teams to enter later contests will be selected. Young Corbett III Defeats Anderson

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 20.—Young Corbett, 3d, Fresno welterweight, won his second victory over "Babe" Anderson, San Jose, by a technical knockout in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round fight here last night. The fight was stopped by Referee Eddy Burns, and his action was greeted by protests from the fans and from Anderson. Anderson, one eye cut, was against the ropes and was taking a heavy barrage of blows to the face. He appeared able to continue the fight, however. Corbett was given every round but the seventh which was even. They fought at 149 pounds. Corbett previously gained a ten-round decision over Anderson in San Jose.
