"Passion Play" Showing Today At the Liberty

A story, more intense than a modern problem, which depicts the life of Jesus during his last seven days is portrayed for the last time tonight at the Liberty theatre in "The Passion Play," in which Adolph Fasenoct has the role of the Christ.

The "Passion Play," a silent picture, opens with Jesus on the road to Jerusalem where he heals the blind beggar who has faith. Subsequently, in thrilling sequence, the conviving of the high priests in the temples of Jerusalem leads the envious Judas to betray his master. "The Last Supper" which Leonardo da Vinci, the great master, reproduced in painting, preceded the betrayal of Jesus to the high priests by Judas' kiss.

George Fasenoct represents Judas and his excellent interpretation of the role engenders as much hate among the audience as that of Jesus does love. Both are superb in the roles for which they trained since childhood.

Judas' remorse and his suicide to escape it present an intense and pathetic scene which rivals that of the crucifixion of Jesus for emotional heights.

The crucifixion and the resurrection are depicted as the closing chapters in the last seven days of the life of Jesus.

An excellent orchestra accompanied the scenes with music which fitted the mood of the occasion.

No attempt has been made in the presentation toward sensationalism to drive home a moral, but it is a simple description of events of the New Testament. However, although entirely lacking in sensationalism, it is a most sensational picture with a human interest appeal which touches all sorts of people.

JOSEPH STATE BANK FIGURES IN NEW ACTION

A new court action growing out of the closing of the Joseph State bank last year has been started in circuit court here and suit for $5000 has been filed with the county clerk, C. K. McCormick. A. A. Schramm, superintendent, representing the state banking department, filed the complaint against the bonding company furnishing surety for Edgar Marvin, president, and Cecil Childers, cashier, of the Joseph bank.

The trial which will be tried in the circuit court here may bring a repetition of the testimony heard in the two trials of Judge Marvin in Wallowa county and may deal also with other phases of the operation of the bank before it closed.

As both plaintiff and defendant are not residents of Wallowa county, the suit could be brought to this county. J. A. Burrell is counsel for the defendant bonding company.

Mr. McCormick stated this morning that the summons has not been returned and the date of the trial has not been arranged.

Bank Teller Held On Theft Charge

THE DALLES, Ore., Aug. 26 (AP)—Charged with grand larceny and accused of having embezzled approximately $14,000 from the First National bank here where he was employed as a teller, Jess Sexton, 38, was arrested at his home last night and held in the county jail today.

Bank officials said the loss was protected by bond.

Police said investigation of the bank's books revealed that Sexton had juggled the savings funds of estates. The discovery of irregularity was made last Tuesday when the savings records of a large estate were demanded for probate formally.

Rio De Janeiro advices said the rebels had refused peace terms providing for general amnesty and abolition of a provisional constitution pending convention of a constituent assembly.

Porte Allegre, Brazil, dispatches said six rebel planes had bombed federal headquarters at Guapira, killing three soldiers and wounding eight.

Jobless To Be Given Work On Baker Project

Although the extent of the state highway construction which will be conducted during the winter to give employment to Union county's jobless has not been announced by the state highway commission, Judge U. G. Couch, county judge, stated this morning that some men from this county would be given work on the Burnt river road project in Baker county.

The highway commission will receive bids for the work on Aug. 31 and it will start in the near future.

FEDERAL AID PLANNED
SALEM, Aug. 26 (AP)—Oregon highways totaling 512.1 miles will be added to the federal aid system if the recommendations of the highway commission are accepted by the U. S. government, the commission announced today. The new federal aid roads upon which federal money can be expended, were selected by the commissioners during their session here.

The addition will be made under the new act increasing federal aid in highway construction, it was announced. While 13 new roads were added, one was taken off the new schedule. The Nye-Heppner Junction highway of 85 miles, one upon which no money has been expended, was removed and the Nye-John Day highway of 81.8 miles substituted.

CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY IN EARNEST

Issues Between Republican and Democratic Parties More Definite.

By Byron Price
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Increasing definiteness was given the presidential campaign, and the issues between Republican and Democratic parties, by events of the week now concluding but most political activity was in the nature of groundwork for the future.

Of the two candidates, Governor Roosevelt alone engaged in any direct campaign, making Thursday night a personal appeal for campaign funds to a nation-wide radio audience. His brief talk was marked by such assertions as that the Democratic party is "not for sale," that it has "no favorite group upon which it can call for large sums under promise or privilege or immunity, expressed or implied," and "no grudges to collect donations which are to be returned many-fold through tariff increases."

Hurley Sounds Challenge
On the Republican side Secretary Hurley's sharply worded challenge in Rhode Island to the Roosevelt speech at Columbus, Ohio, a week ago loomed as the most direct administration ever yet voiced to the criticisms of Hoover policy by the Democratic candidate.

Governor Roosevelt furnished another Democratic highlight in denying Mayor Walker's plea to inject the question of partisan political motives into the hearing before him or the fitness of Walker to retain his office.

Beyond this, the week witnessed the start of a mobilization by both parties of shock-troop campaign orators. These included feminine political notables like former Governor Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, Democrat, and Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister and official hostess of Vice President Curtis, Republican for the Maine state campaign, that some party leaders always regard as a political barometer presidential election years.

In Washington, it saw President Hoover's latest conference with industrial and commercial leaders from the twelve federal reserve districts assembled today to receive suggestions for a new attack on the forces of depression.

Smith a Delegate
And in New York state it saw the name of former Governor Alfred E. Smith appear among those of delegates to the Democratic state convention in October despite his present aloofness from politics and newly assumed editorial duties.

In the meantime, Governor General Theodore Roosevelt Jr., announced from Manila his approaching return home to participate in the campaign in President Hoover's behalf and against his distant cousin, the Democratic nominee.

Secretary Hurley indicated that Colonel Roosevelt had not been summoned home officially for the good his name and presence might do in off-setting the lure of the Roosevelt name to voters. Representative John Tilson, of Connecticut, in charge of the Republican national speakers' bureau, however, indicated that young Roosevelt's participation was a part of general campaign strategy plans.

Governor Roosevelt's campaign plans were hampered by the length to which the Walker hearings at Albany were running. He had two early speaking engagements, in New Jersey and Connecticut, however, which were awaited as indicating further the line of attack on the Hoover administration's economic theories the Democratic candidate will follow in his wide swing in September about the national campaign circuit.
