Sheep Round-Up Held Sunday At Elk Mountain

A round-up of seven bands of sheep, approximately 14,000, was conducted yesterday on Rosebud flat at the foot of Elk mountain about 12 miles from La Grande above Morgan lake. Herders who have been ranging the sheep belonging to Mrs. Mary Pedro, of Echo, over the 42,000-acre range during the summer gathered their flocks together to separate the wether lambs from the remainder.

A rare sight is afforded by the spectacle of the round-up. It is an annual event, held late in the summer to segregate the male lambs weighing 40 pounds or more, for market. Mrs. Pedro is owner of one of the largest bands of sheep in this vicinity.

The sheep range over the flat and are herded into a corral a band at a time. They are counted by one man who calls out every hundred to his assistant, who in turn records it by notches made on a stick. From the large corral in which they are driven they are subsequently run into two smaller corrals through a chute. On either side of the chute is a gate leading into the smaller pens. By notches on their ears, the female lambs are designated and run into the pen with the ewes, while the wether lambs are run into a separate corral. The type of notches on the ears also indicates the age of the female sheep.

The wether lambs are sent to the eastern markets, while the ewes, after the aged have been taken out, are turned back on the range where they will feed until the snow flies, when they will be taken to winter quarters at Echo.

FOR THE PROFESSIONAL MAN

The man whose clients are likely to judge him by his home will find the simple dignity of this Colonial house very desirable.

These are no frivolis features, yet the impression is not commonplace. In addition to generous living quarters (the two fine bedrooms are notable), there is a more ambitious kitchen layout suitable to a larger home.

The cook will appreciate the cold room off the kitchen, and the well placed kitchen porch.

The doctor or teacher who wishes a home office will use the room to the left of the entrance hall for that purpose, and will bless the architect for the extra lavatory adjacent.

Under other circumstances the room may become a library, or even a study room for youngsters of school age.

Cost is held to a minimum by such features as the stair, which has a straight run, and by partitions which go straight through. It will run between $10,000 and $12,000.

Any of the appropriate color schemes for Colonial houses will be suitable, mainly the red should not be smaller than 75 by 100 feet.

ECLIPSE OF SUN DUE ON AUGUST 31

Canada should look carefully at the total eclipse of the sun on Wednesday, Aug. 31, for they will not see such an awe-inspiring spectacle again until July 20, 1963.

Still that's not as bad as it might be. Up to just a couple of weeks ago, astronomers were saying that another total eclipse of the sun would not be visible in the United States and Canada until Oct. 12, 1997, which is 65 years hence.

Startling Discovery— Then they made a startling discovery. And that discovery makes an interesting story. It goes this way:

Back in 1887, Dr. Theodore von Oppolzer, an Austrian astronomer, completed the monumental task of charting and mapping 8000 eclipses of the sun from the year 1207 B. C. to 2162 A. D. He published his charts and maps in book form.

Von Oppolzer's book has been the bible of every astronomer dealing with eclipses. Of course, his calculations were approximate, but considering the immense magnitude of his work they were remarkable.

His calculations put the next total eclipse, visible in the above-mentioned area, in the year 1997. Until just recently, astronomers accepted that without question.

But a few weeks ago experts connected with the U. S. Naval Academy began a new check of Dr. von Oppolzer's calculations. To their surprise, these new calculations showed that there will be another total eclipse visible in the said area 31 years hence.

The eclipse of July 20, 1963, astronomers say, will follow approximately the same path as this year's eclipse. It will sweep out of the northwest, curving across the southern edge of Hudson bay, pass over Maine, and disappear in the Atlantic ocean.

In 1945, 1954 and 1959 small eclipses will be visible in the United States, but there will be none of importance until 1963.

Begins in Arctic Ocean— The 1962 eclipse will begin at sunrise on the Arctic ocean. It will sweep northward to within a few hundred miles of the north pole, then swing southeast across Northern Canada, Hudson bay, province of Quebec, enter the United States over northwestern Vermont, New Hampshire and southeastern Massachusetts. Then it will pass out over the Atlantic and end in midocean at sunset.

The largest city in the path of totality—that narrow belt where the sky is completely blackened—is Montreal. Just outside the edge of the path is Boston, where the eclipse will be almost total. In New York, the sun will be 95 per cent obscured. Other cities, depending on their location, will see varying degrees of obscurity of the sun.

The actual period of totality—meaning the moment when the sun is totally obscured at a given place—is just 100 seconds. Therefore, scientists must work fast.

But for nearly an hour before and an hour after the maximum of the eclipse is reached, there is a period resembling twilight. For example, at Portland, Maine—where the eclipse will be total—the eclipse will begin at 2:21 p. m. will reach its maximum at 3:30 p. m. and will end at 4:34 p. m.

Unofficial estimates here are that the sun eclipse in La Grande will be about 40 to 45 per cent of totality, and will begin shortly before 11 o'clock in the morning, with the maximum about 11:30.

As everybody knows, an eclipse of the sun is caused by the moon getting between the earth and the sun. The moon casts a great cone-shaped shadow on the earth. At the point of this shadow the eclipse is total; outside that comparatively narrow track it is only partial.

As the moon moves in front of the sun, the disc of sun disappears from view. First the sun is only partly overlapped, then completely. Two or three minutes before the eclipse beanother shaft two and one half miles away. Boulders, jacked loose by the slide, crashed about them as they fled. The survivors said:

Many of the men killed on the project in the past have been struck by falling boulders or have fallen from cliffs.

July 17, 1930, twelve men lost their lives as gas exploded in Mitchell tunnel, 15 miles from here. Five weeks before, an explosion killed seven men in the Alameda tunnel near Coláferas dam. January 9, 1931, twenty men were entombed 900 feet below the surface in Mitchell tunnel for 30 hours before being rescued.

He said the voters who talked about shifting to Roosevelt reminded him of the man who got so mad at a rattlesnake he adopted a copperhead.

Chats With Parents

"OUR BABY" By Alice Johnson Peale

During the months before Gerda's baby brother was born, she was taken into the family secret. It was hoped that jealousy would be forestalled.

Gerda was very proud and happy at the thought of a baby with whom she would be able to play and whom she might help care for. She was shown the baby clothes as they were made and helped to lay them away. The baby was not the baby, but "our baby."

During these months Gerda assumed a protective attitude toward her mother. It was as if her mother had suddenly become very precious. She preferred just being near her to the attentions of play.

Where before it had been difficult to get her to come into the house, even for meals, day after day now found her quietly at her mother's side.

And then the baby was born and mother was away for many long, long days and nights. The actual baby he lay in mother's arms was a strange, ugly, unresponsive little thing who seemed suddenly to have absorbed all the mother's attention.

Gerda tried to be happy. She proudly showed the baby to visitors and asked them to hold it in her arms. How violent was her inner conflict! She was not revealed until one day when again she had asked to hold the baby, she suddenly thrust it away crying: "Take it, take it; it's not our baby; it's yours."

It is not possible to gloss over or to remove entirely the normal struggle that every child feels in accepting a new brother or sister. There is no escaping the reality that it comes to share in the love of both parents.

It helps to prepare the child in advance, to reassure him of continued love, but he must be allowed time in which honestly to make the hard adjustment.
