PREFERENCE FOR RUSSIAN GOODS ENDS

an obligation to give preferences within the British commonwealth, must take all steps necessary to see that "no country shall frustrate this obligation by dumping sweated goods in Great Britain."

Before parliament assembled the liberal members of the house voted to oppose strenuously the passage of legislation necessary to bring the Imperial conference trade agreements.

With Sir Herbert Samuel, who resigned as home secretary, presiding, the party organized a committee to prepare detailed amendments for presentation.

He moved the first of the finance resolutions which will make the Ottawa pact a part of the law of the land. Declaring that his purpose was to indicate the real significance and importance of the Ottawa conference, he said that if that meeting results in increasing the prosperity of the British Empire, it would be the best contribution Great Britain could make toward restoration of world prosperity.

"Over part of my route I followed the itinerary of Governor Roosevelt on his western trip. Everywhere I went I found that the impression Roosevelt had made was purely negative."

President Hoover will leave Friday evening for Detroit. In order to reach new audiences, it is expected the presidential train will take a different route than those followed toward Des Moines and Cleveland.

Meanwhile, a message advocating the re-election of Mr. Hoover went out from Detroit to all Ford Motor company employes. The company submitted for the consideration of its men a belief that "any break in his program would hurt industry."

Other Papers Say:

GETTING SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

"The most disgusting trends in our country since the World war seem to me to be in the direction of seeking prosperity without working for it."

We glean the above paragraph from a letter written by President Norman F. Coleman of Reed college to the National League of Commission Merchants. The letter was written in answer to a list of questions submitted to the college president.

In the above sentence, President Coleman has expressed a truth that is quite obvious.

"Seeking prosperity without working for it," isn't that just what many of our citizens, big and small, have been doing these past 10 years or more?

The spirit of get-rich-quick permeated every strata of our society. Millions were playing the stock market and still are in order to accumulate a fortune without labor.

The post-war period also produced the racketeer, another species of the "get-rich-quick" seeker.

From the organized gangs of the metropolitan areas, that have been exacting tribute through terrorism, to the many small "gyp" artists who sneak into a community to put over a "fast one" on gullible people, they are all actuated by the same purpose, to make easy money without honest labor, and the number of racketeers has become legion.

Literally billions of dollars have been lured from "suckers" by promoters of speculative enterprises such as mining ventures, oil wells, pulp mills, industrial projects built on nothing more stable than wild hopes and rosy promises.

The promoters and the "suckers" are actuated by the same spirit, the greed for gain without work. The promoters sell worthless stocks for big money, but they could not sell them if they did not find people willing to risk their savings in the hopes of taking big profits without physical or mental effort.

The law of compensation is a basic law of nature, and those who violate it consistently will live to learn the folly of it.—Astorian Budget.

JURISPRUDENCE ON THE CAMPUS

A young lady living in Eugene, a mile or more from the campus, finds herself with only a few minutes to get to a class.

In the emergency, her mother offers her the use of the family car. The young lady is discovered driving a car in violation of the state board's strictest regulations against crimes of this sort.

She is "arrested" by the campus cop. She is halted before the campus "court."

What says the law? The law says that those students who drive automobiles without a permit must be expelled. Explanations are not in order.

The young lady's registration is cancelled. She is told to leave the campus. She may appeal. She may perhaps win reinstatement, but a regulation is a regulation and that is that.

The first case under the new campus prohibition serves notice that the authorities mean business, but it falls a mile or more from the campus, finds herself with only a few minutes to get to a class.

GOV. ROOSEVELT BEGINS JOURNEY TO 17 STATES

Indianapolis, Springfield, Ill., Louisville, Knoxville, Atlanta, Raleigh, North Carolina and Richmond, Va.

Today, the governor will speak at Rochester and Buffalo in behalf of the state ticket, headed by Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, candidate for governor.

A brass band stood on the platform and took a thorough dressing in order to send the presidential candidate off on a wave of melody.

A small crowd of Roosevelt well-wishers stood with him, but many others sought shelter from the rain. Many placards bearing the Democratic presidential candidate's picture were held aloft.

Before the train rolled away photographers asked Roosevelt to pose.

"What, another one?" he asked, smiling and in high spirits.

"Wave your hand. Another hand wave," the photographers kept calling.

"By actual count, No. 402," Roosevelt laughingly replied, as he waved to the crowd.

Governor Roosevelt stood on the platform of his special for fully 15 minutes before it got under way.

Although the governor has declined to say what subjects he will discuss, it has been reported he will speak on the soldier bonus payment issue at Pittsburgh.

Meeting of the Insults in Paris

While indictments for larceny and embezzlement were being returned against Samuel Insull, deposed American public utilities magnate, Samuel Insull Jr. had rushed to Paris to consult with his father.

And here you see them entering a taxicab shortly before the elder Insull fled to Greece, where he apparently is safe from extradition.
