

Eggs One Cent Higher Due To Colder Weather

Portland, Oct. 19 (AP)—Advance of 10 dozen forced in the selling price on medium grade fresh eggs here by J. J. Dixon, general manager of the Pacific Co-op, was recognition of the seasonable influences.

Cold weather in many parts of the country is causing a bit decrease in current lay. Production is falling in most sections of the country while demand for eggs is gaining.

Lower prices are being named for spring chickens here with decreasing interest and a pileup of supplies. Sales are generally about 1c below former figures.

Conditions are fully steady in the market for live hens with all sorts finding favor and prices maintained at the late advance.

Further weakness has been forced in the market for country killed calves with sales generally about 1/2c to 1c lower for all offerings.

Market for country killed hogs and lambs is holding steady with no change in prices.

Weakening influences are showing in the market for apples with offerings from most districts on consignment far greater than the ability of the trade to absorb.

Notes of wholesale trading: Italian chestnuts are being offered another dime a pound.

Outdoor tomatoes are slower with some price recessions. Hothouse stock nominally 40c for 10s.

Crabbery movement continues slow with former prices nominally held.

Both wine and table grapes remain very slow sale.

Ground cherries are slow around 75 cents a box.

Cauliflower is still weakening locally with too many 2s offered.

There are inquiries from China for onions but no sales are confirmed with growers more or less indifferent at current values.

Movement of Deschutes potatoes continues to gain here with local scarce and the trade not taking hold of Yakima.

Cars in Oregon Once Licensed For $3.00 Fee

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 19 (Special)—An automobile license selling for $3 would not be a novelty to Oregon, according to records on file in the office of Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state.

The first motor vehicle registration sold in this state went for a flat tax of $3 and from 1905 to 1911, the rate was in effect, Secretary Hoss points out.

Only 218 automobiles were registered in 1905 but the 1906 "depression" cut that figure to 142 vehicles, or a loss of more than 33 per cent of the previous year's registration.

The tax prevailed until 1911 when the law was enacted fixing the horsepower of the motor as the basis of taxation and providing a sliding scale of $3, $5, $7.50 and $10.

During the year 1911 there were 6,438 motor vehicles of all classes registered, providing a revenue of $27,316.

The horsepower basis of taxation continued in force until 1921 when the law was changed to provide a graduated scale of taxes for motor vehicles on a weight basis.

The property tax on autos was abolished in 1921, taking effect in 1922.

On 1911 there was no segregation as to classification of licenses, but the chauffeurs were segregated that year and 1,071 were given badges.

Under the provisions of the act of 1913 another segregation was created under which, in 1914, there were 6,438 passenger cars and trucks; 2,898 motorcycles; 1,338 chauffeurs and 110 dealers registered. From these segregations, fees amounting to $77,592 were collected.

Based on the 1930 census, showing 953,786 Oregon residents, the 293,000 passenger cars licensed last year would provide an automobile for nearly every fourth person.

The state department collected $5,297,008.69 for license plates sold to motorists last year, representing approximately $5.50 for every person living in the state.

Business and Idleness

There's an obvious and considerable difference between laziness and idleness. Idleness is to have nothing to do; laziness is to have lots to do and no serious intention of doing it.

Idleness is an involuntary slavery to circumstances; laziness is the free choice of a philosophic independence.—Philadelphia Record.

Evident Evolution: A safe has been invented which it is claimed to be impossible to open. It evidently embodies the chief features of a taxicab window and a sardine tin.—Ottawa Journal.

Oh sure! He was one of the most famous backs in football...

Well, Rockne picked Gipp up when he saw him kicking a football around...

Put your heart and soul into it and do as I tell you, and we'll get a some place!

Why, when I told them who I could have all the credit I wanted, isn't it stunning?

Never mind what I have on the fire! I need a clever, nifty, girl—you know the type.

Well, what's my cut on this?

Listen, Muggsy, who got you clear on that last jam you were in?—and that ain't all—the cops will catch up with you again and you'll need me.

Okay, chief. Don't get sore.

Now, get busy! Send her to my office.

They're punching one another's head. If one side gets knocked out, the other side is bound to drop.

Let's stop them ere they both fall flat! Then Coppy walked right up and said: "Hey, you two fellows, stop!"

Oh, gee! They're fighting. Dancy said: "They're punching one another's head."

Chapter 10: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. Nan knew very well what would happen to Jervis Weare's property if he died without children.

Chapter 11: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. Nan felt a difficulty about giving her name. She said quickly, "Oh, Villers—don't tell anyone I rang up. I only wanted to know if Mr. Weare had arrived."

Chapter 12: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. She rang off and turned to the now all-absorbing question of the grey dress. She put it on and looked, half frightened, at her own reflection.

Chapter 13: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. She bought the dress, and the coat that went with it, heard the amount of the bill without a tremor, and wrote her first check on the account which Mr. Page had opened in her name.

Chapter 14: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. She looked at her watch. Twenty to eight. She made up her mind to sit quite still and peaceful.

Chapter 15: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. The church round the corner chimed a quarter to eight. Nan jumped up and went to the window.

Chapter 16: TERRIBLE SUSPENSE. At half past seven she was ready and waiting. She knelt in front of the low dressing-table to see her head in the very small mirror, and then mounted insecurely upon the bed to catch a glimpse of her silver feet.

ONE of the Indian clubs yelled, "Hey, I'll show you Tinymites the way to chop a little tree down with my hatchet. I am good."

"Pick out a tree that's nice and tall. I'll hack away and make it fall!" And then wea Scouty broke in, saying, "I don't think you should."

"Why cut a tree down, just for fun? I'd really hate to see it done. The trees and plants are beautiful and should be let alone."

"Old Mother Nature put them there. Destroying them just isn't fair." The club knew Scouty meant it, "cause he spoke in angry tone."

AND so the club replied, "All right. Instead, I'll dance with all my might." One more another club banged on a mushroom. Just as low and peaceful.

Nothing Venture by Patricia Wentworth. Synopsis: Nan struggles to make her husband, Jervis Weare, believe his life is in danger from a plot between Robert Leonard, a distant connection of Jervis' and a taxi driver. She scoffs at her fear and resents her hint that the plot is a sequel to Rosamund Carew's attempt to secure Jervis' large inheritance for herself, as she might have had not Jervis married Nan on a few hours notice. To Jervis Nan is a business proposition yet she loves him madly.
