12-Day Financial Holiday Adopted In Pendleton, Ore.

PENDLETON, Ore., Oct. 19 (AP)—Officers of the First Inland National bank which suspended operation yesterday when a two-week "financial holiday" was ordered by the mayor, said today the institution may again open for business providing depositors sign waivers on deposits.

This action, if approved, will take about two weeks to complete. The bank holiday was declared by Mayor George R. Lewis as a step toward protecting the bank and farmers. The mayor said that if business continued as usual the bank would be obliged to call in loans with the result that farmers would have to sell their wheat at less than production cost.

The bank's officers said today it is solvent.

PENDLETON, Ore., Oct. 19 (AP)—A "financial holiday" designed to protect bankers and farmers, opened here Tuesday, to continue until Oct. 29, under order of Mayor George R. Lewis.

In a formal proclamation Mayor Lewis designated the days between Oct. 16 and 29 inclusive as legal holidays in order to allow financial institutions here to meet maturing obligations and to protect farmers who might be forced to sell wheat at prices below the cost of production.

"I urge," the mayor said, "that the banks and other financial institutions having control of grain and other commodities, refrain from forcing or urging the sale of such commodities at the present low and ruinous prices, or enforcing collection of obligations secured by such commodities to the extent, if necessary, of closing their doors against withdrawal of deposits."

Fears Collapse
Selling below the cost of production at present prices, Mayor Lewis explained, "would cause a complete collapse of the financial structure of the region."

"It has become impossible," he said, "for many individuals, banks and other institutions to meet their maturing obligations and unnecessary withdrawals of deposits without forcing the sale of immense amounts of grain and other commodities at ruinous prices and consequent financial disaster to the citizens of this city and of the country generally."

"But," he continued, "if the withdrawal of money and bank deposits from circulation can be halted, and the citizens generally can be permitted to market their commodities in an orderly manner and without forced sale and sacrifice, the financial stability of the community can be assured."

Colonel J. H. Raley, chairman of the board of directors of the First Inland National bank, and George Hartman, vice president of the institution, said the "financial holiday" was suggested to protect depositors. They added that the bank is solvent and that there will be no ultimate loss to depositors.

The officials said that since the bank was reorganized a year ago by consolidation of the First National and Inland Empire banks, the institution has suffered withdrawals approximating $120,000 a month.

The low price of wheat and other farm products, added to the circumstance that the Umatilla crop was only one-third of normal, caused the difficulties. The bankers said they acted to protect farmers against the forced sale of wheat at prices below production cost.

LINDSAY TO BE ASKED TO QUIT, REPORT

complete authority in administration, automatically relieved Lindsay of some of his powers. The action was interpreted as a direct move against the secretary's activities, and was followed today by authentic information that Lindsay's resignation would be requested.

Twenty-one persons are being employed by the offices of the state board of higher education in Salem in addition to operation of the business of all five state institutions of higher learning. A reorganization of the higher education department would follow the appointment of the new secretary, it was declared.
