G. O. P. HEADS HURL CHARGE AT BOURBONS

Peter's Episcopal church of La Grande was in Baker yesterday and held special services at St. Stephen's.

In Baker—Hugh Brady, of La Grande, independent candidate for representative from the second congressional district, was a recent visitor in Baker where he attended the Baker-La Grande football game.

From Baker—Miss Jeanette Potter spent the weekend in La Grande visiting Miss Dorothy Hill who is attending the Eastern Oregon Normal school, and enjoying the home-coming activities.

Classroom Teachers—The Classroom Teachers association will meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Honan hall, and the following program has been arranged: two part singing by Miss Betty Miller's Fourth grade; a reading by Mrs. Lynn Wright; "Traveling in Germany," a talk by Joseph Gaier who spent last year in Munich; and official announcements.

Talk in Baker—Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Pierce delivered addresses in Baker on Saturday evening under the auspices of the Roosevelt-Garner club. Mr. Pierce is a candidate for United States representative from this district and is completing an extensive speaking tour which took him over the entire district.

Ball Follows Banquet—The annual grand ball followed the banquet in the ball room of the Normal school, at 9 o'clock. A unique feature was arranged appropriate to the Halloween season. The setting for the banquet, which was carried out in the dim gray light, Miss Marjorie Rogers was program chairman while Allen Gaden, who clowns the year at the Normal school, wrote the playlet. Mr. Gaden and Ralph Edström were the principals in the production, carrying on a conversation in the gray yard, interspersed with farcical acts.

Miss Rogers and Billy Lowry furnished a group of intricate tumbling acts, and an interesting pantomime was presented by a group of six girls who, dressed as gnomes, used the tomb stones, Leonard Plouff sang "The Gamblers Blues," and "Gravediggers," a men's quartet composed of Donn Porsch, Bill Caldwell, Leonard Plouff, and Leo Andrews sang.

Music was furnished by "The Moochers," E. O. N. orchestra under the direction of Elmer Porsch. Miss Elsie Dunham was in charge of decorations at the dance, while Miss Sooter was in charge of the refreshments. The "gray yard" idea was also carried out in the decorations at the ball. Each member of the orchestra was seated behind a tomb stone. In each corner of the ball room was a pile of bones of alumnus killed during the war.

Police established robbery as the motive as the room was littered with Miss Sooter's personal effects.

LONDON'S BOBBIES REPULSE RIOTING THOUSANDS AGAIN

"hungs-army" marched into London today. The system employs London's 12,000 special constables for routine police work as needed, freeing hundreds of police for use in riot squads. More than 2,000 of these special constables, who are volunteers serving without pay, were called to traffic duty yesterday.

All Ranks Represented—These men are drawn from all social ranks. They undergo training in small units at police stations the year around.

The signal for yesterday's battle came from a dark complexioned, gray-haired man whose shrill scream "smash the palace windows!" started a rush for the king's residence.

Blocked by the police, the crowd numbering many thousands, dashed toward the government offices in Whitehall. Another stone wall of bluecoats met the onslaught.

The leaders of the rioters commanded a taxi and tried a flying wedge through the police lines with it. The officers were taken unawares, and gave back until a rush of reinforcements broke off the attackers.

Crowd Resorts to Wedge—Again the crowd tried its wedge tactics, this time isolating a squad of 30 bobbies. A mounted patrol, waiting for just such a coup, dashed into the melee and routed the mob.

Then the rioters tried window smashing in North Cumberland avenue, but the main force of 116 drive had been broken. From then on until dark it was just routine clearing the streets for the police.

Meanwhile, in other parts of the city, George Lansbury, head of the labor opposition in parliament, was hauled down at several political meetings. All the audiences greeted him with cheers and hoots.

Only one of those arrested yesterday was arraigned this morning. He was a London boy, Robert Pittcock, an unemployed seaman. He was remanded for a week.

Home-coming Is Concluded With Ball at E. O. N.

From the student rally Friday night until the last alumni departed from an annual ball at the Normal school on Saturday evening, the third annual home-coming at the Eastern Oregon Normal school was crowned with interesting activity planned by Robert Rasdale, student body president and general chairman, and his committees. After the rally, the assembly and football game on Saturday, the alumni were given an opportunity to renew old acquaintances at the banquet Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Sacajawea Inn.

Miss Dorothy Lake and Miss Beulah Seiler were in charge of the decorations at the banquet, which was carried out in the shape of a U, and a gold streamer superimposed on a wider blue one around the center. President and Mr. H. H. Inley occupied the seats of honor at the head of the table. Yellow candles in a brass candelabra was banked with brightly colored autumn leaves in front of the speakers, and single candles in small or nests of leaves were arranged at intervals along the tables. The nuts cups were blue and gold crepe paper.

Dr. J. W. Bracher sang a selection entitled "The Stranger from Gallilee," by Morris. Further piano selections were "Japanese Sunset," by Deppen, by Mildred Stoddard; "Song of India," Rimski-Korsakov, by Mildred Shumate; and "Pastorale with Variations," Mozart.

Mrs. Merville Moore sang "When Roses Are in Bloom," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, and Elliott Finlay sang "Bells and Bells," by Japanese Sunset. The program was concluded with a piano duet, "The Marine Corps March," by Geibel, played by Vivian and Madeline Gallagher. The next meeting of the club will be held on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 20.

New Hampshire, Maine Rhode Island and Connecticut, the seaboard to New York, the president said the Democratic party proposed to reduce the tariff, not only "generally, but it proposes to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with the people of the states that produced Chief Justice Taney and other honored members who have helped to make the long history of the supreme court."

Speaking briefly in the first stop of his dash along the seaboard to New York, the president said the Democratic party proposed to reduce the tariff, not only "generally, but it proposes to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with the people of the states that produced Chief Justice Taney and other honored members who have helped to make the long history of the supreme court."

His stay was marked by a talk to a group of members of the Massachusetts legislature, he told them the solution to the present difficulties would come from men who though they might differ in parties have a common ideal of government.

"I am confident that the solution of our troubles can be handed by man," he said. "Our troubles come not from an obscure cause but from a basic idea of government."

The final plans for his Boston speech were worked out during the day in which a conference with Mayor James Curley, of Boston, played a part. He will speak at the arena at 10:30 p. m., in the same place where Alfred E. Smith a few days ago addressed an appeal to the voters of Massachusetts to support the Democratic national ticket.

His speech was virtually completed before he retired last night but there remain some finishing touches to apply.

Crowds Greet Candidate—Crowds greeted Roosevelt in Lowell, Lawrence and Lawrence in Lowell, school children lined the streets.

The Democratic standard bearer heard cheering news in Lawrence from the Republican Mayor William F. White. Mayor White said "As a progressive Republican I am for you and I am hoping you are elected. I'm a liberal thinker and when my party is wrong I am right."

The crowd was so dense in Lowell that the Roosevelt car was forced to stop and police had to open an avenue through the crowd.

Roosevelt sat in the front seat of his open car with his chauffeur. As he swung through several mill towns and along the Merrimack river he was continually waving, either his hand or his gray felt hat.

Elizabeth Massachusetts expected to join the party at Newburyport.

Recital Club In Monthly Meeting Sunday Afternoon

The La Grande Recital club held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the small ballroom of the Sacajawea Inn. After a business session which included discussion of various problems of program and membership, the members enjoyed a fine program.

There were piano selections as follows: "The Belle," Williams, by Dorothy Jean Lester; "Rondino Gracioso," by Mari Trache; "Wood Nymph Frolic," Aaron, by Marjorie Stiles; "Sounds from Ringing Rocks," Walters, by Evelyn Ballard; "Madrilena," by Rev. E. W. Bracher sang a selection entitled "The Stranger from Gallilee," by Morris.

Further piano selections were "Japanese Sunset," by Deppen, by Mildred Stoddard; "Song of India," Rimski-Korsakov, by Mildred Shumate; and "Pastorale with Variations," Mozart.

HALLOWEEN TO BE CELEBRATED

All Saints, was originally a religious celebration, but has degenerated now to include a season of pranks for the children. In England and Scotland, it is said, Halloween is consecrated to freiside revelries, with many ceremonies for divining future sweethearts or spouse.

One of the events of the Halloween season this year was the P. D. C. club dance at which they entertained on Saturday evening, while it also has been the occasion for many parties among all ages. Numerous parties were scheduled for today and tonight.

Police ask the co-operation of parents in checking vandalism in the city tonight.

official spokesman said today. The arrangement is an important part of the plan would be restricted to continental Europe.

Premier Herriot's references to American statesmanship, the spokesman said, were an allusion to Secretary Stimson's interpretation of the Brand-Kellogg pact, and to the conviction in France that the United States hereafter will never disinterested in aggressive wars, and at least will do nothing to hinder the operation of any peace mechanism which Europe may agree upon.

France
