VISITING THE PLANETS

There is an American Interplanetary society. Its members have not called on the Martians yet, but entertain hopes. The plan is to cover distances, which are considerable, by means of rockets.

One of the rockets was tested recently. It went to the altitude of 300 feet and then exploded. This one had not been intended to reach a planet but merely to chart a course in the desired direction.

There is a popular belief that man can do what he thinks he can do. This is entertained despite the classic account of the individual who expended much time in the effort to extract sunbeams from cucumbers.

To declare any achievement that may be mentioned out of the reach of human ingenuity, of course involves some risk, so often has the impossible been accomplished, as for instance, in the throwing of a curved ball. Even science declared that this could not be done, proved so by blue prints, and then a crude unbeliever went right ahead and did it.

But notwithstanding the risk of being put in the wrong later, the statement is hereby ventured that no human being ever will visit even so close a neighbor as the moon, nor will any mechanical contrivance ever glide through the intervening space.

PANIC MONGERING

Walter Lippmann rebukes what he terms "panic-mongering." Others already had done so, but perhaps had formulated their expressions with less authority than may be ascribed to Lippmann. He is a careful student and as a writer eminently fair.

The New York Journal of Commerce, treating the same critics, says: "If they confine their efforts to denunciation of policies no longer debatable, they will only be talking for the record."

The panic-monger are moved by the spirit that causes mischievous whispers about the stability of a financial institution. Dealing with the subject of inflation, for example, they declare it to be an uncontrollable force, that once started, and despite all attempt at restraint, will sweep the financial system of the land into ruin.

This is a deliberate effort to scare the public, to discredit the president and to prevent any change even though the change be proposed as a betterment. It is a standpatism leaning backwards and petrified in that posture.

The president has been given power to meet emergencies. The intimation that he will misuse such power to promote disaster not only does him an injustice but is an insult.

NOT THE END

During the last few weeks many young people have graduated from high school or college, not to be bothered with systematic studying again. We want to caution these young people that a diploma should not be the end of mental exercise. They should continue to study, to learn new things, and to keep up with an ever-changing environment.

Heyward Brown, newspaper columnist, recently had something to say along similar lines. He lamented what he called "a terminus in the process of education," and said:

"That notion is fostered by our academic customs. The colleges hand a sheepskin to an impressionable young man, and tell him he is a Bachelor of Arts. That gives him the impression that in some way he is through, and that he need never admit one other new idea into his head.

"We even speak of certain institutions for the inculcation of culture into young women as "finishing schools," as if graduation carried with it the sanctity of finality. But I wouldn't call it a sanctity. It should more properly be a stigma. I can not think of any branch of learning in which men should be encouraged to join the mourners' row with Alexander, and weep because there are no more worlds to conquer.

"It is true that the Bachelor may return to his university to become a Master of Arts or a Doctor of Philosophy, but even then he is a fool if he regards himself as finished. Einstein still looks through telescopes in search of some star which may lie a little beyond the farthest."

There has been a distinct gain in national morale since the government began to fight the economic depression.

Ministers of 2 Counties Enjoy Meet at Wallowa

The Union County Ministerial association was entertained by the Wallowa County association in a joint meeting at Wallowa yesterday. The meeting which was held in the Presbyterian church in Wallowa, opened at 10:00 a. m. with devotions. At 12:30 the wives of the entertaining pastors served a fine dinner in the church basement for all who attended.

An interesting program had been arranged, which included the following addresses: "Man from the Hand of God" by Rev. J. George Wals, pastor of the La Grande Presbyterian Church; "Goals of Civilization" by Mrs. A. G. Butterfield, of Enterprise; and "Church Publicity" by Rev. Edgar A. Pollock, president of the Wallowa County association and pastor of the Methodist church in the town of Wallowa. The papers presented provoked interesting discussion.

The ministers that attended from La Grande were: Rev. and Mrs. B. Marcus Godwin, Rev. and Mrs. J. George Wals, Rev. and Mrs. H. I. Hansen, Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Pulton, Rev. Paul De F. Mortimore, and Rev. Edwin W. Bracher.

COMMITTEE OF EIGHT IS NAMED

American Legion and national guard, school board, city of La Grande, Union county, and two to be appointed at large.

It will be the immediate task of this committee to prepare presentations of the various works to be asked by La Grande and to turn them in, properly formed, to the special advisory board that has been appointed by Governor Meier for the selection of those projects to be carried through under Oregon's allotment of the administration public works money.

Six projects will be worked upon by the committee, estimates of costs prepared and in each instance a thorough presentation of needs given to the advisory board. It will also be the work of the committee to carry these presentations through by personal contacts and visits at headquarters for first hand explanations.

These projects are: (1) flood control; (2) replacement of Beaver Creek pipe line from intake to reservoir; (3) training school building at the Eastern Oregon normal; (4) establishment of a state army in this city; (5) improvements to the municipal airport, and the high school or civic auditorium.

Present opportunity of gaining any or all of these projects lies up about as follows: On Meadowbrook; U. S. Representative Walter Pierce has sent much encouraging word that this improvement may be included and recognized under a general program for flood control work throughout the country; Beaver Creek pipe line; A good possibility of acceptance as a self liquidating project, training school; Opportunity under public works measure to dispose of bonds already voted but as yet not sold; army; Gen. White has approved 13 armories in the state including one at La Grande. Possibility of moneys under public works act for this construction not yet determined however; municipal airport; Improvements may be possible under program of government to develop better facilities along recognized air lines; auditorium; Not considered possible unless it can be proven in some manner a self liquidating project.

Chas. Reynolds, president of the chamber of commerce, presided at last night's meeting. Short talks or explanations were made by Jack Peare, recently returned from a visit at Portland where he had met and talked with Governor Meier; Harold Boone, secretary of the chamber of commerce, also recently returned from a Portland visit in which he had called upon and received explanations of the probable workings of the governor's advisory board from members of the board and others who will be active; George T. ITALY PREPARES SPEEDY, MYSTERY PLANE FOR TEST

DESENZANO, Italy (AP) — Spurred by her capture of the world speed record, Italy is preparing new efforts to attain the 600 miles an hour velocity which her air minister, General Italo Balbo, says is within sight of aviation.

A mystery ship being assembled at the government high speed school here is almost ready for trial flights. Fed Sure Of New Mark
The men working on it will be surprised if it reaches anything like the mark General Balbo has set, but they expect it to surpass the 426.5 miles an hour recently made by Warrant Officer Francesco Agello in his "Red Bullet."

Balbo says it may take man a decade to find the means of propelling himself through the atmosphere at 10 miles a minute. It is practically certain though that by then he will have achieved such speed, he recently told the senate.

Meanwhile the mark is being pushed steadily forward. Agello's record was 20 miles an hour faster than the mark set by the English lieutenant, O. H. Stainforth, in 1931. On one lap above Lake Garda the Italian made 432.8 miles an hour, but the record was calculated on the average.

Record Just a Try-Out
The greatest secrecy surrounds the preparation of the new ship. Official confirmation of its existence has been limited to a statement that it is expected to set a "considerably higher speed" than the "Red Bullet." Agello's flight was described as merely a "preparatory demonstration."

A departure from the ordinary means of propulsion is the "Bullet's" principal feature. Two propellers set on a sleeve shaft, one behind the other at the nose of the fuselage, turn in opposite directions. They are driven by a 24-cylinder "V" type motor of 2,800 horsepower.

The plane, painted red, is set on pontoons. It has a single low wing of duraluminum and a metal body with wooden tail surfaces.

Agello, 30 years old, has been flying since 1924. He has been attached to the school for five years.

GAME COMMISSION URGES CLEANSING WILLAMETTE RIVER

The commissioners explained that inasmuch as the Willamette is a natural artery for the propagation of fish in a great area of Oregon, it is of utmost importance that the stream be cleaned.

Complying with an act of the last legislature, the commission authorized a uniform charge of 60 cents for removal of free licenses and for issuance of deer tags to holders of such licenses. Loss of deer tags, it was explained, subjects the game commission and the wild life of Oregon to illegal use of such tags by the finder.

The game budget was drawn at $300,000 for the year, a reduction of $150,000 as compared with 1929.

THURSTON'S MOTION IS BOOMERANG
CHICAGO (AP) — Hollis Thurston, Brooklyn hurler, probably will have a new windup next time he pitches here. A peculiar delivery, in which he swings his right arm in front of him three before throwing, amused Cub fans, and they began counting in unison on every pitch. As the chorus swelled Hollis got rattled, eventually leaving the game in the seventh.
