Comedy Marks Testimony In Extortion Case

The circuit court room resembled the stage of a comedy drama several times yesterday; the "wise cracks" of witnesses creating a roar of laughter among the spectators until order was restored by the bailiffs, while examinations and cross-examinations were being conducted in the case of the state vs. Oscar Ayars, Clarence Johnson and P. A. Ingram, being tried before Judge J. W. Knowles. The three defendants are charged with extortion.

Arthur Bruce, the complaining witness and Diesel engine dealer of Union, Oregon, charges that the defendants lured him into Herman's lunch room and, under threat forced him to sign a bill of sale to his car and took $90 from his person. He also said that, at the point of gun, they forced him to drive his car to Oscar's garage where Mr. Ayars put it in his own keeping.

Mr. Bruce declared on the witness stand that as soon as he could break away from them he went to the Sacajawea Inn where he called Cliff Perkins at the Perkins garage and told him he was afraid. Perkins then drove him to the office of Green and Hess where charges were made against the three defendants.

Oscar Ayars, the defendant, testified on the stand that he had made negotiations for a Diesel engine and given Bruce $500. Upon further examination he found, he said, that the engine was not like the engine which was described to him. Mr. Ayars claimed that Mr. Bruce gave the bill of sale to his car voluntarily so that the defendants would keep still about other alleged crooked deals. The bill of sale was simply security until Mr. Bruce returned the $500, he added.

FRANCE MAY REFUSE NEW INSTALMENT

If there is an explicit understanding that the money is only an installment on the $75,000,000 total due tomorrow and that such action in no way invalidates America's claim to the unpaid remainder. In no event will President Roosevelt take any action that can be construed as a condemnation, even by implication, of either a partial or total default.

With the reply to Great Britain on its way, administration advisors turned their attention to the reaction to Secretary Hull's address before the world economic conference, which made no reference to the debts.

An unofficial statement from an official source that startling developments in the debt field were to be expected today had led to belief that Hull's address and the note to Great Britain might have a definite connection.

vention church at 7 o'clock a. m., after which the forenoon is given to instruction in such classes as personal religion, mental hygiene, church symbolism, psychology of religion, religious drama, Bible highways and so forth. After the lunch hour, quiet period devoted to swimming, horse-back riding, picnics and hiking all of which have their votaries. The evening is usually spent in French hall around the big fire place or if weather permits at the sunset hour on the lawn under the trees where an inspiring evening talk is given. Fun and merriment prevail for the remainder of the evening in which all from the oldest to the youngest join until "taps" is sounded and the group retire for the night.

The setting is ideal. Situated at Cove, on the 100 acre farm given by S. G. French in 1882, at the very feet of the hills and beneath the magnificent trees which once shaded his home, it is a place of unusual beauty. French hall and Morris hall stand with their doors hospitably open, while white tents for the boys and cottages for the girls, with classes scattered about under the trees, dot the green lawn.

The instructors are Bishop and Mrs. W. P. Remington, of Pendleton, the clergy of the diocese and persons of national reputation from abroad. The school is one of the finest summer attractions of the valley and supplies within easy reach, a vacation combining physical, mental and spiritual benefits of a high order. It is for the old as well as the young and appeals to Christian workers of every creed. Those who cannot enroll are invited to visit for an evening or all day, bringing their own lunch if they prefer. It is announced, although meals are available on the grounds. No expense is attached to such a visit and guests will be welcome.

HULL ASKS FOR COOPERATION ON TARIFFS

France, Italy, Britain and Japan having preceded him because of delay in the preparation of his address, which was to have been delivered before any of them. He faced an assemblage of delegates of whom some had bitterly assailed the American war debt and monetary policies.

The entire American delegation was present to hear their chief speak. Chamberlain Speaks
The principal speaker of the morning session, and one who was eagerly awaited, was the British chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, who outlined his government's position.

He, like many other speakers, declared the settlement of the war debts and reparations problems was essential for world recovery. Chamberlain asserted that a policy of cheap and plentiful money must be announced by the central banks and vigorously pursued. Credit made available, he added, must be actively employed. He called for the immediate stabilization of currencies.

Among other important points in Chamberlain's speech was the statement that there is no doubt the gold standard is the most generally satisfactory. Excessive tariffs, the chancellor maintained, must be reduced and not merely held at their present levels. He described state subsidies to shipping as unfair competition and called for their abolition by international agreement.

He also condemned state subsidies to export trade. Despite the difficulties already encountered, the Americans indicated their hopes for the success of the conference had been raised by Chamberlain's speech, which showed that the British program coincided in many respects with the American.

We claim STANDARD GASOLINE is unsurpassed in ALL qualities—

THE AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION CONTEST BOARD will decide—

IF Standard Gasoline is unsurpassed in all qualities—as we claim it is—it should be demonstrable in fact.

Accordingly, on April 10, 1933, the Standard Oil Company of California wrote to Captain E. V. Rickenbacker, Chairman, Contest Board, American Automobile Association, saying—"We believe and claim Standard Gasoline is unsurpassed in all qualities—starting, acceleration, mileage, and anti-knock performance.... May we ask, therefore, that your Contest Board be authorized to conduct the necessary tests to verify or disprove our claims? It is understood that the report of your findings shall be made public."

On April 21, 1933, Captain Rickenbacker replied, saying—"That Standard Gasoline shall be submitted to comparative road performance tests under the scientific observation of Members of our Contest Board. We welcome this opportunity...."

Watch for the results. You may be sure that the independent tests conducted by the AAA Contest Board will be thoroughly scientific and impartial.
