

L.D.S. Boy Scouts Visit Church Meet In Salt Lake City

Fifty-four Boy Scouts, members of the L. D. S. churches of Union stake, have returned from Salt Lake City, Utah, where they attended the sessions of the M. T. A. June conference and Boy Scout anniversary celebration. Their program included visits to several points of interest in the city including the Temple block, the Deseret News plant, and the Deseret gymnasium where they enjoyed swimming.

They visited also the church office building where they were met by Elder George Albert Smith, of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, who is a member of the national committee, Boy Scouts of America, as well as the president of the church, Heber J. Grant.

The auto caravan, accompanied by William J. Baxter Sr. and William J. Baxter Jr., both of Union, returned Tuesday to La Grande.

The purpose of the trip was to attend to Temple baptisms in order to complete their Books of Remembrance, a record of the important events of their lives.

COLLEGE POLO GROWING FAST IN POPULARITY

RYE, N. Y. (AP) — They didn't have to bring back brewery horses to give the school boy of today a working knowledge of horses and what makes them move, for polo, once the rich man's game, has been brought down to students in 28 American colleges. The youngest of all college sports — the first championship of the intercollegiate polo association was played in 1925 — this new mania of the collegians has the background of centuries.

Devereaux Milburn, the greatest back who ever played the game, and Louis E. Stoddard, president of the United States Polo association, used to be active in the game when they were at Harvard and Yale, respectively, and Milburn continued his interest at Oxford.

It was the aftermath of the war which gave intercollegiate polo its great chance. The Army Remount Service and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps supplied the mounts, stabling facilities, and officers qualified to train.

At first the ponies were closely akin to artillery plugs, but the quality rose until now the average pony used in college games is from three-fourths to seven-eighths thoroughbred.

Lieut. General Robert Lee Bullard, when commander of the Second Corps Area, was responsible for the final impetus toward organization when he invited eight teams to compete at Governors' Island in 1923. Yale winning. Two years later the association was formed, and the championship has been played each summer, Yale winning six of the ten meetings, Harvard two, and Princeton and Army once each.

Yale, led by Captain "Chu" Baldwin, whose family team holds the championship of Hawaii, will defend the title as the Westchester country club on June 10, 14 and 17, the classic returning to the field where the first four championships were contested. Harvard, Princeton, Army and Pennsylvania Military college will be in the meet.

From Coast to Coast

Two years ago the University of Oklahoma bid for the title, and it is expected that in the near future the scope of the championship will be broadened. For among the colleges now playing the game regularly are Stanford, Alabama, Arizona, Chicago, Colorado, Cornell, Florida, Georgia, Harvard, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa State, Michigan A. and M., Missouri, Ohio State, Oregon A. C., Pennsylvania Military college, Princeton, Texas A. and M., West Point and Yale.

BLACK FEATHERED TOQUE WORN BY FLEETS WIFE

PARIS (AP) — Madame Dieudonne Coste, wife of the transatlantic aviator, attended a recent smart party wearing one of the new high crowned toques made entirely of shiny black feathers.

On the left side it was trimmed with three yellow feather margolds. With it Madame Coste wore a black frock with a draped sash scarf reflecting the same color scheme.

THE TINYMITES

THE giant held wee Duncy high and said, "Well, lad, I thought you'd try to pull some funny business, when I saw you in my home. You ran and hid. What did I care, as long as I knew you were there? I have a way of catching folks, no matter where they roam. The little girls the eagle brought were doing fine. They had been taught to wait on me from morn till night, and then you came along. You planned, of course, to set them free. Was that a nice trick, lad, on me? Of course not, and I knew that all your plans would turn out wrong."

"My doors and windows were locked tight and so, when you went out of sight, I knew you'd found the trapdoor. That's the reason you've been caught. Don't try to fool me any more, 'cause capture always is in store. I hope that you will profit by the lesson you've been taught."

"Oh, Mister Giant, let us go!" cried Duncy. "We dislike it so to be locked up in one big house. We love the open air."

"You see, we're happy Tinymites who travel 'round to see the sights. Why should you hold us prisoners? It really isn't fair!"

"Oh, isn't it?" the giant said. "Well, get that thought out of your head. What'er I do is quite all right. You're going to stay with me!"

Just then they heard a funny sound. The monstrous giant looked around and then he started running. He looked scared as he could be.

"Why, what's the matter?" Goldy cried, and Duncy answered, "Run and hide. A lion's coming 'ward us. That's what made the giant run." The lion, though, ran right on past and, my, but it was going fast. "It might come back," said Duncy. "Gee, that won't be any fun."
