OUR REVOLUTION HAS ALREADY TAKEN PLACE

Those timorous souls who have been jiggling about on one foot lately wondering when the revolution was going to begin might just as well calm down now. The revolution has already taken place, and there have been no casualties—except, possibly, for a die-hard Tory or two who suddenly realized what had happened and died of apoplexy.

To say that the revolution has already happened is not simply to use a figure of speech. Simply because what has taken place happened in an orderly, constitutional manner, without bloodshed or mob scenes, we needn't think that everything is going to go on just as it did in the old days.

The Roosevelt administration's industrial control bill steps off in a brand-new direction, and it is a good long step, too. It crumples up all of our old theories about the proper relationship between government and private industry and tosses them in the wastebasket. It goes so far along the new path that it takes reforms which used to look like the very limit in radicalism—such things as minimum wage laws, short work week regulations and the like—and makes mere incidentals out of them.

It avoids classification in the old, established pigeonholes. If it is socialism, no socialist would recognize it; if it is fascism, Mussolini wouldn't know it. It may have borrowed an idea or two from Moscow, yet one of its main ideas seems to be to promote private profit. It draws simultaneous endorsement from such ultra-progressive labor leaders as Donald Richberg and such solid business men as President Henry I. Harriman of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

As a matter of fact, we are about to try an experiment which is not only new to us but new to the whole world. We made the first great experiment in political democracy, and we proved to a skeptical world that it could work; now we seem about to find out whether a modern democracy can readapt a complex industrialism in such a way that the essential features of both democracy and industrialism come through unimpaired.

There is nothing in any of this to frighten us. Revolutionary? To be sure; but isn't our whole tradition based on revolution? A nation that can put through its revolution in as quiet and orderly a manner as we are putting through this one, has little reason to fear the future.

A MOTHER RECOGNIZED

Western College for Women, in Oxford, Ohio, recently bestowed an honorary degree of a Doctor of Laws upon Mrs. Elias Compton, a woman seventy-four years of age.

In presenting the honor President Hickok stated that it was solely for her achievement "as wife and mother of Comptons," saying, "You have given useful children to the nation. We want to honor you for it."

Her husband has been a member of a college faculty for forty-five years. Her son Karl is president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Her daughter, married, is a wife of another college president in India. Her son, Wilson, is manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, engaged in standardizing the lumber industry. Her son, Arthur, is professor of Physics at Chicago University, having already been awarded the Nobel prize for his science.

It is more than proper, it is only fair, that this mother be given a large recognition for the success and ability of her children. If men have received honorary degrees for outstanding achievement in almost every activity, what is more fitting than to recognize the influence of a mother, who inspired and guided the sons and daughters?

A Greeley, Colorado judge says that 32 beer is intoxicating no matter what congress has to say on the subject. Inasmuch as Colorado has been dry for a good many years and Washington, D. C., has not been, it may be that the judge can't take it like a congressman can.

The Nazis are burning the anti-German books in their libraries. Once there was a King Canute who walked down to the surf and commanded the tides to retreat. And right after that they hung his royal robes out on the line to dry.

Some of the scientists now assert that people think with their muscles as well as with their brains. A lot of the thinking has certainly sounded as though it was produced by the muscles of the lungs.

'Silent Partner' Of Rail Empire

"Silent partner" is the term Senate inquirers are applying to Mantis J. Van Swearingen, rail magnate. While his brother, Oris P., has been questioned during the Morgan hearing, Mantis J. has said virtually nothing. The younger of the Van Swearingens is shown here in the Senate hearing room.

POET'S CORNER

THE MAN WITH THE DINNER PAUL

All hail to the man with the dinner pail
Who goes to his task at dawn.
He'll do his work right well all day
He'll toil with his brain and brawn.
With a step that is steady and a step that is true

He goes to a task or goal
He'll toil all day with might and main
This man with an honest soul

His brow is wet with an honest sweat
He toils the whole day long
He whistles away as he toils all day
And lightens his work with song.
Then here's to the man with the dinner pail
The man of lowly birth
For Christ has said of this common folk

"Ye are the salt of the earth."

BEYOND

Beyond the shadows lies the sun
So I have heard the poets say,
And never is the night so dark
But follows brightest day.

Across the mountains lie the plains
With windows clothed in green,
And flecking through the maple trees
The sun in golden sheen.

Beyond this life, I know there lies
A place in sweet repose;
And there in peace, I know I'll live
When life on earth shall close.

JESU! OUR LORD AND SAVIOR

Review

Our Lord and Savior, Jesus, came
The gospel to reveal,
His great salvation to proclaim:
The sick and lame to heal.

He conquered Satan in the fight
In strong temptation's hour;
He cast out demons by his might,
And broke sin's binding pow'r.

In tender mercy He forgave
Those who repenting came,
And proved his mighty power to save
Those deep in sin and shame.

He healed the sick, and lame, and blind,
Just as the prophets said;
And purified from sin and cross,
And even raised the dead.

He bore our sins upon the cross,
That we might be forgiven,
And purified from sin and cross,
Prepared to enter heav'n.

He bore our sickness and disease,
As in His word revealed,
And there took our infirmities,
That we might all be healed.

He rose triumphant from the grave,
According to his word:
And ever lives, the lost to save,
Our Savior and our Lord.

Reach for a Lucky — for always Luckies Please!

I like mine "Toasted"

I have my preferences. When it comes to cigarettes I like mine "Toasted". Not that I understand "Toasting". I simply enjoy what "Toasting" does! I like the fine quality of Luckies — their mellow-mildness. And their purity means a lot to me. For, after all, my cigarette and my lips come in such close personal contact. I've reached for a Lucky ever since I've reached smoking age, and if my womanly reasons count for anything, it's always "Luckies Please!"

because "It's toasted"
