Yes! A Ukulele Must Have Mighty Strong Appeal!

"There are people who gnash their teeth, grimace frightfully, even cry salty tears of rage when they hear a ukulele, but such people live in apartments and go through the same emotions when they hear babies cry." Rusty Price believes. "There are other people, the disdainful type, who superciliously sneer when ukuleles are mentioned, yes, even drop them one step lower than the saxophone and that's sumpin'!"

Yet there are people who gladly accept these throes of martyrdom just to play the ukulele. Mr. Price, for instance, walked around through Southern Europe carrying a 30-pound pack on his back, yet he needs must have a uke with him too.

"Just amongst us, dear people," he adds, "something must be something when you add it to a 30-pound pack you intend to carry far and wide. Which, of course, proves conclusively that a uke is a musical instrument."

However, if there are still doubts, George Tins advises that those interested go down to the Radio and Music supply company and hear this wandering troubadour argue with a uke. "You can leave when you wish, you know," he avers.

Mr. Price will give two free lessons with each ukulele sold at the music store.

Reach for a Lucky - for always Luckies Please!

My husband introduced me to Luckies

He had no objection to my brand of cigarettes. But, one day he asked me to try his. Well, I did—and I've been saying "Luckies Please" ever since. And it's not merely because Luckies taste fine and are ever so mild. Let me tell you the real reason.

My cigarette is a personal, intimate thing with me. After all, it touches my lips—and I do take pride in my sense of daintiness. Naturally, "Toasting" means to me even more than it does to a man—for purity is something very precious to a fastidious woman.
