They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. — Isaiah 40: 31.

WHEN IT WILL MEAN MORE

The new dollar wheat will mean a lot more to Oregon farmers when the spread between Chicago and Portland quotations gets back to normal. Twenty-three and five-eighths cents spread seems a bit out of line, especially when the western farmer is on the small end of the thing. Right now all Oregon knows about dollar wheat is what it reads in the papers!

A SPLENDID MOVE

Co-operation on the part of the city of La Grande, the E. O. L. & P. Co. and the West Coast Telephone Co. with the Lions club which is sponsoring opening of Crystal Plunge, stands forth as a praiseworthy move. This is the second year that the Lions have fathered a swimming pool at minimum prices for kiddies and adults. Last year they were 80 cents "in the red" when the season was over, but miles ahead of the game in knowledge of service performed for their community. This is one of the finest things the Lions have done in La Grande and each and every member is entitled to his share of credit.

NOT MUCH EXCITEMENT

Here it is only a little over a week until the special election July 21, and where's the usual excitement? With the exception of campaigns for and against the sales tax, and some activity concerning the proposed repeal of the 18th amendment and the state dry laws, there seems no particular activity except for court action that apparently has halted a vote on the grange power bill. Can it be that John Citizen already has his mind made up as to how he will vote, and therefore refuses to get all hot 'n' bothered; or is it that rising prices and signs of better times overshadow a mere election?

THE NEW FRONTIER

One of the reasons why America always came out of its 19th century depressions so completely was that it always had a frontier awaiting development. When industrial stagnation in the east had reached a certain point, the country could turn west, roll up its sleeves and proceed to pull another section of the frontier into the fold; and before it got through it discovered that the depression was gone. No one needs to be told today that the old frontier is no more. We haven't any vast undeveloped spaces along the western horizon any longer; none, at least, that we can use just now. But we have a new frontier these days, if we only stop to recognize it, and it can serve us today precisely as the old western frontier served us a generation or two ago. Our new frontier is less tangible than the old ones, and you won't find it on any map. It includes practically all of industry and nearly all of agriculture. The pioneers who are attacking it are the workers, the farmers and the business men of the United States; their map—still a bit rough and uncertain, in spots—is the combined industrial recovery and farm relief program.

It isn't just a figure of speech to say that all of this stands as a new frontier. The old, physical frontier represented an obstacle to be conquered, new paths to be found, jobs to be filled, daring decisions to be made—with a new space in which men and women could establish homes, bring up children and hunt for happiness as the prize.

This new frontier represents exactly the same thing. It is a challenge, just as the old one was, to our daring, our ingenuity and our endurance. Beyond it there lies nothing less than a new order of living waiting to be exploited. The possibilities are as unlimited as any that an early pioneer saw when he climbed an unexplored mountain peak and looked off to the west.

The present moment is the end of a depression, but it is also something more important; it is the beginning of a new era. The future can be finer than anything in our past has been, if we just recognize our new frontier and tackle it as a frontier should be tackled.

Just when some were saying Babe Ruth was about done for—did you notice about his hitting three homers in a double header the other day?

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

As you say, "She may be empty, but I'll tell the world she's clean!" But when the sheet is printed and is out upon the mail, On its way to the subscribers, I have never seen it fall— In the center of the front page, in a most conspicuous place, Some typographical error fairly kicks you in the face. For the typographical error is a slippery thing and sly, You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by; Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps, It shrinks down into the corner and it never stirs or peeps. That typographical error is too small for human eyes, Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size, And you see that blasted error, far as you could throw a dog, Looming up in all its splendor, like a lighthouse in a fog! That glaring blunder juts out like an ulcerated tooth, Where it dodged the eagle vision of the napping comma sleuth. It is sure too late to mind it, but it fills your soul with rage, As you see it swelling loudly in the middle of the page. The boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and groans, The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans— The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be, But that typographical error is the only thing they see. It was down among the six-point till the copy was all read, When it shifted into blackface or a two-inch banner head— Then when the sheet was printed it jumped up and hollered "Boo!" You never saw me, did you? This is sure a horse on you!" —Exchange

Recent Rains Are Help To Crops

WALLOWA (Special)—Farmers report much benefit to growing crops from the recent rains, and while a fair soaking was enjoyed in some parts of the community, some places were harder hit than others. Most of the valley was quite well drenched, while further back in the hill sections some showers were lighter. Farmers on the hill sections report the plowed fields wet down nearly as deep as the soil was plowed. Winter wheat, beginning to show signs of budding before rains, has greened up wonderfully and give indication of being of much better length. Spring seedlings were at the stage where moisture was needed badly and with favorable weather the balance of the growing season chances for fair fields look favorable at this time. The greater part of the fall sown wheat have rather light stands and few of the farmers feel they have more than 50 per cent of a normal crop, except in a few instances where the grain got well started last fall.

THIS IS THE FOURTH REPORT OF THE
American Automobile Association Contest Board

ANTI-KNOCK Standard unsurpassed
Here is the AAA Report. Read it: "This is to certify that we, the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, have conducted a series of tests on Standard Gasoline, manufactured by Standard Oil Company of California, and six other gasolines considered to be leading brands, for comparative detonation (anti-knock), under actual road conditions, using what is technically known as the Cooperative Fuel Research Road Test method.
Under the procedure and conditions that obtained at the time of the test in this car, we find Standard Gasoline is unsurpassed.
All tests were conducted by us under carefully controlled conditions of operation, in a 1933 stock model sedan, and in accordance with the rules and policies of the AAA Contest Board. This statement is based on data developed by and on file with the AAA Contest Board."
