MAKE REPORT OF PROGRESS ON PROJECT

work has been done on both already. Reporting on the Mendocino dam, an $800,000 project to be pushed as a free grant proposition for flood control, and which is regarded as the first step in a complete flood control scheme, with the Catherine Creek dam as a final step, George Cochran related what has been done already. Briefs have been submitted to the board of army engineers for investigation. Other briefs are being prepared to forward to other sources within the next few days. Mr. Cochran said that the latest reports are favorable to him indicate that the outlook for such a project is encouraging.

Raymond O. Williams reported for the training school building, pointing out that the school district and state jointly have submitted briefs. Since bonds already have been approved for this, there seems no major obstacle likely to prevent its final approval. This would come under a 30 per cent grant, which would mean that the school district would eventually pay $56,000 instead of $80,000, and the state $35,000 instead of $50,000.

Col. Ralph R. Huron reported on the armory project. It was finally approved. It also would come under the free grant section of the public works bill. He said that Major General George A. White had recommended several armories in Oregon, including the La Grande project.

Harold C. Boor reported on the airport project, stating that it is estimated it would cost $37,200 to put in a modern airport, with two traveled runways and a hangar capable of handling 10 planes. If this should be allowed under the public works bill, it also would come under the free grant section.

Others in attendance at the meeting included the chairman, Charles H. Reynolds; J. H. Peare, who spoke briefly of the C. C. camp at Frog Heaven; County Judge U. G. Couch; Fred E. Kiddle, president of the state senate; Harley Richardson; and David I. Stoddard.

MATTERN LIVES LIKE CRUSOE IN RUSSIAN WILDS

By Stanley P. Richardson MOSCOW, July 11 (AP)—Jimmie Matern lived the 16 days he was lost in the wilds of Northern Siberia in the best Robinson Crusoe tradition.

The plane he was flying around the world crashed in a hilly spot near the Anadyr river; he suffered cuts and bruises; when his chocolate and biscuits gave out, he shot small game, and, while he awaited a boat to take him down stream, built a crude hut for protection against cold winds.

The story was told today in a dispatch to the newspaper Izvestia from Khabarovsk, Siberia, whence the American aviator took off on June 14 for Nome, Alaska. This is the tale Izvestia related:

Matern was only 14 hours out of Khabarovsk when his motor began to sputter. He found no place to land his "Century of Progress" in the wild terrain, and he pressed on, finally the engine failed and the plane crashed three miles from the river on which Anadyr village is situated.

His propeller was bent, the right wing smashed, the fuselage and motor damaged. Matern was hurt, painfully but not seriously. Hoping to get aid, he started for the river. The journey, made difficult by the hilly countryside and his ignorance of his bearings, took eight days. His food gave out after three days. Then, apparently, he made good use of the fishing tackle and rifle he had with him.

He built a house of scrub growth, for the weather was cold, and waited for the river six days until on June 29 fishermen in two boats passed. They heard his shouts and took him to their camp 11 miles from Anadyr. Shortly afterwards he went to the coast, and a soviet guard went to his assistance.

Matern asked the guard to procure the motor and instruments from the plane. This was done, for the American decided to abandon it.

It was reported today that Matern would be taken to Nome by Pilot Levinovsky, Russian flier ordered to fly from Khabarovsk to Anadyr. (An American relief expedition, headed by William Alexander, arrived in Nome last night from Juneau.)

Relatives, professing no knowledge of the identity of the kidnapers, today anxiously awaited receipt of ransom demands. They feared for the captives life, even if money payment is arranged.

He has been in partial retirement because of frequent heart attacks. A recurrence, without the aid of medicine he habitually uses, might easily prove fatal. His life had been previously threatened if $5000 was not forthcoming.

Y., July 11 (AP)—Breaking a three-day silence, the kidnapers of "Young John" O'Connell, 24-year-old nephew of the up-state Democratic leaders, Dan and Ed O'Connell, today sent Dan O'Connell a new note calling for a new coded list of men who might serve as go between for them and the O'Connell family.
